Chapter 2: FRANCE
(December 2021)

Published online with generous support of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany (Claims Conference), in association with the International Institute of Social History (IISH), Amsterdam at:
The Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg (ERR), the special operational task force directed by Alfred Rosenberg, Adolf Hitler’s leading ideologue, was the major Nazi Party agency engaged in looting cultural valuables in Nazi-occupied countries during the Second World War. The detail with which the ERR documented the art, archives, books, and other Judaica plundered has proved essential for their postwar retrieval and return to victims or heirs.

Greatly expanding the original 2011 IISH Survey, updated country chapters now describe original ERR documents and related sources in 40 repositories in 10 countries from Washington to Moscow and from Brussels to Kyiv and Jerusalem. While focused on surviving ERR-generated documents, this Guide goes well beyond ERR and related M-Aktion sources. Covering documents on the broader context of wartime cultural looting and postwar retrieval, restitution, and fate of cultural property (including ERR loot), the Guide focuses on key records of postwar U.S., French, British, and Soviet agencies, many incorporating wartime ERR documents and reports on ERR loot, repositories, and staff, as well as postwar retrieval, restitution efforts, and war-crimes trials.

This expanded 2021 French chapter is of key importance for the entire European cultural legacy because France was the only occupied country directly involved in Western Allied postwar European-wide cultural retrieval, repatriation, and restitution efforts. Yet only starting in 2009 have relevant French records been publicly available. Updates through December 2021 for France, for example, cover recent expanded online inventories for Cultural Retrieval records from throughout Europe in the new Foreign Ministry Diplomatic Archives Centre (AMAE-La Courneuve), and the new Ministry of Culture website and Mission for further recovery and restitution.

The present French chapter of the ERR Archival Guide (with significant updates and additions to the June 2017 edition) further expands initial coverage of the 2011 Survey published by the International Institute of Social History, Amsterdam (IISH). Renewed thanks are due to many who assisted with earlier publications, as well as with the now-updated 2021 edition.

The initial 2011 French chapter was seriously outdated by the tremendous increase in available archival sources and reference materials related to our subject by 2017, as well as the new locations and reprocessing of many files described earlier. First, more extensive declassification had been possible thanks to the 2008 French Archival Law, and to the supplemental December 2015 regulation declassifying more legal records relating to the Second World War. Second, the most important groups of records in the two major Paris archives were relocated in new contemporary archival facilities. The most relevant French Foreign Ministry Archives were moved from the Quai d’Orsay to the impressive new facility in La Courneuve (AMAE-La Courneuve); there they have been joined by additional major complexes of records transferred from Colmar and Nantes (earlier poorly accessible). Meanwhile, contemporary records of the Archives Nationales were transferred to the contemporary complex in Pierrefitte-sur-Seine, where they have been joined by the Archives of the French National Museums, earlier held in the Louvre. Third, both those moves were accompanied by newly developed digital reference systems.

Since the 2017 chapter was released, many digital resources have been updated: a new French Archives Internet guide presenting digital surveys of key fonds (record groups) specifically devoted to wartime spoliation and postwar retrieval was launched (see Section 2.0.2.1.); the Ministry of Culture launched an extensive new portal (see Section 2.0.2.2.); AMAE-La Courneuve significantly expanded six online inventories for major series of the ‘Art Retrieval’ records under the direction of archivist Sébastien Chauffour; and several other Internet system updates required revised URLs. The compiler greatly appreciates the assistance of Sébastien Chauffour in additional updates for the La Courneuve coverage.

At the Archives Nationales, the revolutionary Virtual Inventory Room (Salle des inventaires virtuelle) has rendered more file-level finding aids online for worldwide consultation, including coverage of newly accessioned records from the French National Museums in the Louvre. Updates have also been added for the municipal Archives de Paris, as well as the National Institute for the History of Art (INHA). Expanded Introductory Remarks put French developments in broader context.

Reference specialists in all these and other Paris archives covered deserve renewed thanks for consultations and data furnished regarding their holdings and finding aids. More acknowledgements as appropriate will be found at the opening coverage of specific archives below.

My association with IISH (Amsterdam) as an Honourary Fellow since the 1990s has given me a congenial European base for my multi-national research and reference efforts. IISH Executive Editor Aad Blok deserves much appreciation for editorial supervision of the 2011 edition, and subsequent advice.

My continued appointments at the Ukrainian Research Institute and the Davis Center for Russian and Eurasian Studies at Harvard University have provided access to the extensive holdings of Harvard College Libraries and computer support at my home base in Cambridge, MA.

Ray Brandon, who edited the initial Survey, left his mark in his careful attention to many reference details. Frederike Mulot ably provided research support in Paris during verification of the 2017 edition. More thanks go to Michelle Lawrence for carefully reediting and reformatting the complicated text for digital publication, first in 2017, and now again for the 2021 update, with hyperlinks to original ERR inventories and related documents now online in the Bundesarchiv in Koblenz (Bestand B 323).

The Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany (Claims Conference), and particularly its Research Director Wesley A. Fisher, has had a key role in encouraging updated expansion of the 2011 Survey and keeping our ERR Project going through all the sea changes. Their generous sponsorship has provided funds for related travel and research expenses, as well as editorial work on this Guide.
2.0. INTRODUCTORY REMARKS: DOCUMENTING ERR CULTURAL SPOLIATION AND RETRIEVAL IN FRANCE

France is of key importance for our coverage of the archives of the Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg (ERR) – as well as sources for the postwar retrieval and restitution of ERR-looted cultural property – for four major reasons. First, the ERR, the main Nazi Party culprit for looted cultural valuables throughout Europe, was originally organized in France. Second, France, as the interwar international art center, was the first and only country (except for the Soviet Union) in which the ERR was so extensively involved in the seizure of art. Third, France was the first and largest country where the ERR leaders operated the Möbel-Aktion. Fourth, in the context of postwar restitution, considerable cultural loot from wartime ‘spoliation’ (the term most often used in French) – especially books and art – has not returned to France or to victimized owners or heirs, including those who fled the country.¹

June 1940: ERR Established in Paris. The ERR was initially organized in France in late June and early July 1940, soon after the German invasion, as an operative offshoot of Reichsleiter Alfred Rosenberg’s ideological office of the Führer’s Commissioner for the Supervision of the Entire Intellectual and Ideological Training of the NSDAP (Beauftragter des Führers für die Überwachung der gesamten geistigen und weltanschaulichen Schulung und Erziehung der NSDAP, DBFU). As a relatively independent NSDAP agency with headquarters in Berlin, the ERR was administratively part of the DBFU; in France, the ERR operated under the authority of – and frequently reported to – the German Military Commandant in France (Militärbefehlshaber in Frankreich, MBF).

Rosenberg’s stated aim for the ERR as an operational arm of the DBFU was to collect research materials from occupied countries ‘abandoned’ by designated ‘enemies of the Reich’ who had fled in the face of German invasion or been deported, especially Masons and Jews. Most of the archives and books collected were designated for Rosenberg’s Hohe Schule, a university-level training center for Nazi elite that he planned to establish after the war. The Central Library of the Hohe Schule (Zentralbibliothek der Hohen Schule der NSDAP, ZBHS) was already operating in Berlin since early 1939. In March 1941, Rosenberg inaugurated the Institute for Research on the Jewish Question (Institut zur Erforschung der Judenfrage, IEJ) in Frankfurt am Main. IEJ director Wilhelm Grau headed the first ERR ‘Working Group’ for library seizures in Paris. Although the IEJ was the only Hohe Schule institute operative during the war, the ERR was also amassing research materials for other institutes as well, from Eastern European émigré centers and socialist sources, as well as Masons and Jews.

Paris as Interwar Art Center. As the interwar center of the international art trade and refuge for many émigré artists, specialists, and collectors from other European countries, France was the first and only Western European country where the ERR was extensively and most seriously involved in the seizure of art, specifically private world-class Jewish-owned art collections. Such involvement, as we shall see, came through the tutelage of Reichmarshal Hermann Göring, who was already using the German invasion of Western Europe as an opportunity to expand his personal art collection. After war’s end, France was the only continental European Ally that ran a cultural retrieval and restitution processing center with significant remaining records pertaining to the entire Continent, many relating to ERR loot, increasingly open for public research since 2009.

France Ravaged by Möbel-Aktion. France was the first and largest country where ERR leaders operated the Möbel-Aktion (M-Aktion, literally Furniture Operation), a separate Rosenberg-led operation to remove furnishings from the homes of Jews, Free Masons, and others who had fled or were deported, starting in early 1942. Any choice art, books, and archives collected were handed over to the ERR. By the spring of 1942, Rosenberg shifted responsibility of the M-Aktion to the Western Office (Dienststelle Westen, or sometimes, Amt Westen) of the Ministry for Occupied Eastern Territories (Reichsministerium für die besetzten Ostgebiete, RMbO), which Estonian-born Rosenberg had headed since July 1941, following German invasion of the Soviet Union.

Indeed, of all the German-occupied countries in Western Europe, France suffered the greatest losses in cultural property due to Nazi wartime seizures, including archives, libraries, and especially valuable art plundered from private Jewish collections. French specialists today suggest that some 100,000 works of art and an estimated 5 to 10 million books were plundered from France. Although the ERR itself was not responsible for all of the losses, it was certainly the biggest culprit in terms of both art and library materials (books and archives) seized.

French Restitution Unfulfilled. France is also extremely important for our coverage in the context of unfulfilled postwar restitution, because so much Nazi-looted cultural property seized from French collections is still far from home – especially art and books – and so much cultural property retrieved was never restituted to prewar owners or heirs. Some valuable books and archives that never returned after the war were captured a second time and transported to the Soviet Union; others remain in Eastern Europe today intermixed with Nazi loot from other countries. Some that did return to France were never restituted to owners or heirs: when owners were not easily identified, were no longer living, or had fled leaving scant traces, and no heirs made claims, their art and books were turned over to the state Domaines agency for sale or deposited in state libraries or museums. Over 2,000 choice works of art – many looted during the war – unidentified as to owners or heirs, were assigned to the National Museum Collection of Retrieved Art, known as MNRs (Musées Nationaux Récupération). Some 2,210 MNRs remain in 2021; many among them with ERR codes and still “Looking for Owners” – as a 2008 exhibition in Paris and Jerusalem was entitled.

2 ‘Domaines’ is a short form for the French ‘Administration des domaines’ under the Ministry of Finance, as the office was then called that administered mostly immovable public property.

Library and Archival Plunder and Eastern Dispersal

The ERR initially started plundering books and archives before they started seizing art in France. Indeed, it was the wealth of books and archives discovered soon after invasion in abandoned Masonic lodges that occasioned the founding of the ERR. The first ERR confiscations were from the major Masonic organizations and lodges in Paris; in August, the ERR turned serious attention to seizure of the most important Jewish libraries and archives, followed by East European émigré libraries and major socialist sources. Almost all of the ERR library and archival loot came from private sources, as apparent from ERR seizure lists now available on the Internet; although to be sure, a number of state-owned collections were seized by the ERR and other NS predators. A recent website posting provides data from ten ERR priority library-seizure lists with facsimiles of the originals now available online. All those seizures listed were from private sources, dating from the first year and a half of German occupation with close to 250 victims (185 individuals and 59 institutions). Many more ERR book-looting victims followed through July 1944, but statistics are impossible because later ERR retrospective lists have not surfaced.

How many thousands of books, manuscripts, and archival materials were confiscated in France remains to this day difficult to calculate with any semblance of accuracy. Even after the ERR had plundered its own choice of libraries, it took over hundreds of thousands – if not several million – more books from M-Aktion receipts. The leading French specialist on wartime libraries, Martine Poulain, estimates that at least five million books were seized from close to 2,700 victims in France during occupation, based on her charts of 2,248 persons and 408 institutions who claimed books after the war and those to whom books were returned. Many of those were seized by other German agencies, and many of those millions have never returned to their home libraries: only 348,524 books were restituted to individuals and 199,384 books to institutions. Nevertheless, on a more optimistic note, the 2017 Paris conference “Where are the Books Looted by the Nazis,” witnessed a German librarian return a number of books from Berlin to several French ministries in Paris, as a hopeful example that more may be retrieved.\(^9\)

Across the continent, however, hundreds of thousands of books from well-known French private libraries the ERR abandoned in Silesia could not be recovered from Soviet clutches after the war, while Soviet authorities, who captured them a second time, showed no interest in appropriate restitution. Unknown to the French until recently, an estimated half-million books – including those with prominent French and Belgian library markings and autographed dedications – joined a major Soviet library retrieval shipment the ERR had looted from state libraries in the Soviet Belorussian and Baltic republics to Minsk in the fall of 1945, where many of them are still considered due ‘compensation’ for wartime losses wrought by the ERR.\(^10\) Others joined the many ‘trophy’ shipments to Moscow and are now dispersed throughout the former Soviet Union.\(^11\) Meanwhile in France, many ‘heirless’ books that were retrieved but not claimed were sold or turned over to various public libraries.

The ERR’s main rival, the Reich Security Main Office (Reichssicherheitshauptamt, RSHA) – by 1939 including both the Gestapo and the Sicherheitsdienst, or SD (Security Service) – seized many books in France, including large collections from state agencies, as well individual private sources. Similar detailed retrospective seizure lists have not been found in extant RSHA records. Initially the ERR-supplied IEJ in Frankfurt projected a Masonic division, but with Heinrich Himmler’s Masonic interests, the RSHA won out for serious Masonic research. The ERR was forced to hand over a portion of its Masonic loot to the RSHA Amt VII, which formed a strong Masonic library and research program in Berlin before evacuation to Silesia and the Sudetenland in 1943. Almost all of the RSHA archives from Silesia – Masonic, Jewish, and socialist – ended up in Moscow at the end of the war, joined there by some that had remained with the ERR in Silesia (via Minsk and Kyiv).\(^12\) Many Masonic books that ended the war in Silesia were captured

12 See, for example, P.K. Grimsted, “A Silesian Crossroads for Europe’s Displaced Books: Compensation or by the Poles, and close to one hundred thousand still remain in a branch of the University of Poznan Library. Meanwhile many of those books the RSHA transferred to Sudeten castles ended the war in Czechoslovakia, while some were restituted to France and the Benelux countries.13 Many Masonic archives from France and the Benelux countries nevertheless remained with the IEJ in the West, and when evacuation from Frankfurt became necessary in 1943, most of them went to a hunting lodge in Hirzenhain (northeast of Frankfurt), not far from the main IEJ evacuation center for its Jewish collections in Hungen.

Other German predators targeted specific types of archival and library loot. On the heels of invading armies, the Künsberg Commando (Sonderkommando Künsberg) under the German Foreign Office seized major governmental archives, while the German Military Archives (Heeresarchiv) concentrated on military archival targets and additional books. The Abwehr (military intelligence) followed, and together with the Gestapo targeted French security (Sûreté nationale) and police archives, as well as massive trade-union records, among others. The Berlin area was the first destination for most of their library and archival loot, later to be dispersed to their outlying repositories further afield, including Silesia and the Sudetenland.14

Archival Retrieval from Russia, but No Books

Of the seven linear kilometers of French archives that surfaced in Moscow in 1991, the largest percentage were key military-intelligence and national-security records. Given the state importance of these records, immediate appeals for restitution came from the French President and Prime Minister. Yet even after French and Russian foreign ministers signed a diplomatic agreement in November 1992 calling for return of archives by 1994, only half were returned by that date, and it was another ten years before most of the remaining French state records came home from Russia, along with extensive trade-union and other private archives. Many of the private ones, especially those belonging to Jews and Masons, had been seized by the ERR. Given Russian lack of inclination for restitution, some funds claimed by France were left behind. Additional French files have been identified in Moscow but have yet to be returned to France.

Similar French and other Western diplomatic efforts have not been feasible to bring home the hundreds of thousands of privately owned French books, predominantly looted from Jewish, Masonic, and socialist victims of the NS regime and the Holocaust. State and public pressure was not as strong as it was for sensitive records of State. Besides, many of the looted book owners did not survive, or if they did, were far from their prewar French homes. Not unlike the situation in Belgium and the Netherlands – both of which France represented in postwar restitution negotiations abroad – the retrieval of books has not been a high state priority. Prior to the early 1990, it was hardly a possibility because little was known about their migratory paths and dispersal until more recently. Today the lost treasures still far from home include important manuscripts, rare editions, and books with autographed dedications by illustrious French statesmen, intellectuals, and writers; curiously, the largest concentration of such Nazi-looted books from France may be found today in the now independent Belarus capital of Minsk.

An international conference in Paris, organized by Martine Poulain in March 2017, considered the question “Where are the libraries looted by the Nazis?” At the conference opening, Sebastien Finsterwalder, who directs the Berlin library ‘NS Raubgut’ project, returned looted books from his library to the French Ministry of the Interior and the Archives of the French Foreign Ministry. The opening paper by Patricia K. Grimsted focused on the pan-European pattern of library dispersal with the ‘Continental Divide’ on restitution policies. As an encouraging final symbolic act of restitution, the President of the Bibliothèque nationale de France returned a book recently identified in the BNF (among its many postwar retrieved receipts) to the granddaughter of a prominent victim of ERR looting, Hungarian-born Victor Basch. A French philosophy professor and founder of the League of Human Rights, Basch and his wife had been assassinated by Vichy militia in January 1944.\(^{19}\)

German Art Seizure and ERR Paris Processing

German seizure of art in France had a less ideological focus than was the case for books. Fortunately, for the most part, ERR predators avoided major state museums, and even most minor ones. Throughout the occupation, the ERR specifically targeted private Jewish-owned art. During the summer of 1940, it was the German Embassy – under the watchful eye of Ambassador Otto Abetz – that harbored the sequestered spoils, seized from major French Jewish art dealers and collections of elite private families such as the Rothschilds. Hasty inventories were prepared before a shipment of choice morsels was whisked off to the Foreign Office (Auswärtiges Amt) in Berlin.\(^{20}\) The ERR at first was not involved in those initial seizures. Reichsmarshall Hermann Göring, avariciously looking for art masterpieces to adorn his Carinhall estate, wanted more control of the spoils after he had managed to circumvent the diplomats with a few of his own targeted seizures on behalf of the ERR from Jewish dealers during the summer, including part of the collection of Georges Wildenstein. Seeing the ERR successfully organize seizure of Jewish and Masonic library and archival collections, Göring arranged for the ERR to take over the remaining prize artistic loot in the Paris German Embassy: antique furniture, tapestries, and objets d’art as well as paintings. He even coopted ERR specialists for his own aims.

The sequestered art was first moved to the Louvre in October 1940, but as more treasures came in, the ERR took over the nearby Jeu de Paume Museum. The extensive ERR art processing operations continued there throughout the occupation with a total of some 21,000 registered and coded items, with periodic special exhibitions at Göring’s bidding.

Meanwhile, starting in 1942, the M-Aktion confiscated the household furnishings of Jews who had fled France or were deported to camps. As reported by its director Kurt von Behr, who earlier headed the ERR in France, the M-Aktion emptied an estimated 38,000 Jewish lodgings in Paris alone. That figure, however, is only a rough estimate and does not include the rest of France. While choice art and antique furniture went to the Jeu de Paume for processing by the ERR, no fewer than 674 trains, with a total of at least 26,984 freight cars, transported those seized household goods to the Reich.\(^{21}\)

20 The original 1940 inventories by Dr Erich Meyer (Schloss Museum, Berlin) are now held with the records of the German Embassy in Paris in the Political Archive of the Foreign Office (PA AA) in Berlin, Paris 2490 and 2495 (see the German chapter of this Guide, Section 3.5.3.); copies are found in NACP, AMAE, and the Bundesarchiv Koblenz, B 323; the latter are now online, accessible with hyperlinks in the German chapter of this Guide.

Most of the surviving original inventories and documents resulting from ERR wartime art looting and processing in France, as well as the shipping inventories from Paris to and or from the ERR art repositories in Bavaria and neighboring Austria, are today in the German Federal Archives (Bundesarchiv) in Koblenz. Since 2019, these are all accessible online via hyperlinks in the 2019 updated German chapter of this Guide (now further updated in December 2021).

The Centre for Diplomatic Archives (Archives diplomatiques) of the Ministry for Europe and Foreign Affairs (Ministère de l’Europe et Affaires étrangères)\(^{23}\) – located in La Courneuve just outside of Paris since 2009 – now has preliminary copies of many of the ERR art collection inventories dating from approximately 1949. Those were received from the Munich Central Collecting Point (MCCP) when it was closing down at the end of 1949. Used for identifying recovered art and restitution processing, those copies are now part of the Art Retrieval (Récupération artistique) archival collection preserved from the French Commission for the Recovery of Art (Commission de récupération artistique, CRA) and related agencies. The CRA was originally established in November 1944 to lead retrieval and restitution efforts, continuing through 1949. Since 2009, that Art Retrieval collection has been processed in AMAE-La Courneuve under the archival designation 209SUP.\(^{24}\)

\(^{23}\) Since late May 2017, the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs is officially named the Ministry for Europe and Foreign Affairs (Ministère de l’Europe et Affaires étrangères); from May 2012 to May 2017, it was officially known as the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Development (Ministère des Affaires étrangères et du Développement international); from May 2007 to May 2012, it was known as the Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs (Ministère des Affaires étrangères et européennes); and from 1791 to May 2007 as the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (Ministère des Affaires étrangères, MAE). That last name (with its acronym MAE) is still used generically, and with reference to the archives.

\(^{24}\) See the lengthy description of the CRA 209SUP Art Retrieval Collection, including a list of the online ERR French collection inventories and related documents, in the AMAE-La Courneuve coverage below (Section 2.1.1). For a detailed chart of available ERR Jeu de Paume inventories (including those now online from BArch Koblenz as well as those in AMAE-La Courneuve), together with registration cards and images for each of the 200 Jewish collections processed in the Jeu de Paume (with their archival locations), and reference to claim files of victimized proprietors, see the updated Appendix 1 (November 2019) to this Guide, “French and Belgian Jewish Art Collections Processed by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume, 1940–1944: Correlation Tables for Archival Sources,” online at: https://errproject.org/guide/ERR_Guide_Appendix-1.pdf. This 2019 version includes hyperlinks to many of the various ERR documents cited, including the original inventories and shipping lists, as well as archival codes for copies held in France.
works of art seized from 200 private French Jewish and a few Belgian Jewish collections are now combined online in the database, “Cultural Plunder by the Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg (ERR): Database of Art Objects at the Jeu de Paume.” This brings together data from the original ERR registration cards in the U.S. National Archives in College Park, MD (NACP), with ERR images from the Bundesarchiv in Koblenz.25

During the past decade, however, the JdP Database was significantly expanded well beyond its designation as a specific historical presentation its name implies. At first, additions were closely related to the ERR seizures: some of those items were listed in ERR inventories, although no ERR registration cards (as used for the original database entries) survive. Other new entries identify owners for many individual items the ERR had assigned either to their Unidentified (Unbekannt) Collection (UNB) or to the ownerless M-Aktion collections. Still others, however, were most probably not ERR art loot, but rather based on data in postwar French individual and institutional claim files from the French government Office of Private Property and Interests (Office des biens et intérêts privés, OBIP), and from the more specific cultural property claims processed by the CRA (1944–1949). Thus, many of those recent additions to the JdP Database were not processed in the Jeu de Paume and lack ERR alpha-numeric codes (that were assigned to their inventoried collections and marked on the objects themselves). As a result of these additions, by 2021, the database covers a total of over 40,000 art works from over 634 owners in some 572 French and a much lesser extent Belgian Jewish collections.26 Current plans call eventually for most of the data from the current Jeu de Paume Database to be incorporated into the newly launched JDCRP, with an upgraded component platform for the French and Belgian victims’ art collections the ERR processed in the Jeu de Paume.27

While the ERR processed most of its French art loot in the Jeu de Paume and neighboring Louvre, other seized paintings were sold on the flourishing French art market, exchanged, or simply never made it through the ERR inventory process. Specialists quote the figure of 96,812 postwar claims for lost works of art (including furniture and decorative arts as well as paintings and sculpture). According to Rose Valland’s 1951 report, only 61,233 items were retrieved (ca. two-thirds), and 45,441 were restituted to owners or heirs (one-half) by that date. In the case of items whose owners were not identified, 5,733 items were “turned over to Domaines [state agency in charge of public property] for sale for the benefit of the nation,” and 1,333 items were integrated into national museum collections as MNRs.28 Another figure suggests that between the years 1945 and 1949 under the CRA, approximately 55,000 items were retrieved, of which only half were restituted to owners or heirs, many of whom were no longer living or no longer living in France.

25 See the brief description of the ERR Project Website below (Section 2.0.2.5.) and the introductory passages “About This Project,” at https://www.errproject.org/jeudepaume/. The Jeu de Paume Database, directed by Marc Masurovsky, with technical assistance from the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum (USHMM; see U.S. chapter, Section 10.2.3.), is part of the ERR Project of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany (Claims Conference).

26 In some cases, the ERR assigned one or more different names and codes to collections owned by the same person or firm (in the case of dealerships). Many of the additions from postwar French claims files, rather than ERR sources, lack ERR alphanumeric collection codes, which were otherwise assigned and affixed to each object processed by the ERR, and recorded in the ERR collection inventories.

27 See Section 2.0.2.6. below for the JDCRP listing and its website at: https://jdcrp.org/.

28 Rose Valland gave these figures in her September 1951 report, a copy of which is found among other papers in AMAE, 209SUP, Carton 555/44. See more details about these developments, including the sale by Domaines and the selection of MNRs in Le Masne de Chermont, and Schulmann, Le Pillage de l’art en France, especially p. 39; at https://www.vie-publique.fr/rapport/24365-le-pillage-de-lart-en-france-pendant-loccupation-et-la-situation-des-2.
As apparent today, insufficient efforts were made at the time, in many cases, to identify owners, and later retrospective figures suggest at least 13,463 repatriated items whose owners were not immediately evident were sold off by Domaines. While that figure doubles Rose Valland’s 1951 figure, many of those were not of prime value, and many had been through the art market, rather than ERR processing, or had been seized by other agents. Besides, it was sometimes difficult to determine which wartime sales should be considered ‘forced,’ or if restitution was due for art sold voluntarily to Germans or others. In any case, the 2,000 items unidentified as to owners were assigned to the MNR registers. In 2013, Senator Corinne Bouchoux’s political statement on these issues called wider public attention in her book, If Only the Paintings Could Speak! Her study better documented the above statistics, and her political authority helped break the long silence. Bouchoux was among the first to delve into the newly opened sources – including OBIP records, among others – in researching her doctoral dissertation, defended in 2011.

The 1990s – Renewed Search for Loot and Owners

Concern about those restitution issues in France had nonetheless been growing gradually during the last decade of the twentieth century. Following the fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989, more art from East Germany was returned to France. The collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991 and revelations about the secret Soviet repositories for ‘trophy’ art, books, and archives, had presaged renewed European-wide public and government interest in wartime looted cultural property and restitution issues. Together with pressure from other European countries, whose archives had also surfaced in Moscow, the Quai d’Orsay, as noted above, successfully pursued the return from Russia of the “Archives of French spies hidden on Leningrad Highway,” as they were referred to in a Russian newspaper headline. Ten-year negotiations for their return aroused more public interest in the art and other cultural treasures suspected as possibly left behind in Russia.

During the 1990s there was a public outcry about the shortcomings of French art retrieval and restitution, the fate of the MNRs, and the yet unsuccessful efforts to find still-missing paintings or owners for those retrieved. But even then, with most CRA and other related cultural retrieval and restitution records still closed to the public, too often inadequate data was available about their true provenance, and reported statistics were often incomplete. Besides, the figures above for art objects lost, retrieved, and still-missing do not include all of the decorative art and antique furniture, rare books, valuable manuscripts, musical instruments, or other items confiscated by the M-Aktion.

29 See the judicious bilingual summary analysis of these developments by Le Masne de Chermont – one of the specialists reviewing the subject for the Mattéoli Commission – À qui appartiennent ces tableaux?/ Looking for Owners (2008), pp. 32–33; at https://www.vie-publique.fr/rapport/24365-le-pillage-de-lart-en-france-pendant-loccupation-et-la-situation-des-2.

These figures were also quoted by Bouchoux, Sénatrice de Maine-et-Loire, in her January 2013 report for the Commission de la culture, de l'éducation et de la communication, “Mission d’information sur les oeuvres d’art spoliées par les Nazis.” See also the Actes of the Colloque Mme Bouchoux organized in January 2014, “Bilan des actions publiques en France et perspectives suite aux conclusions de la mission parlementaire sur les oeuvres d’art spoliées par les Nazis,” 30 January 2014.
Renewed calls for additional analysis of losses and cultural restitution (especially art and other cultural assets) peaked in the 1990s, following the issues of long-hidden Swiss bank accounts and unresolved insurance claims. The art world sought revenge for The Rape of Europa and The Lost Museum, as the titles of two 1995 books suggest, recording the tragic art loss and displacement. A 1996 Paris conference, “Pillage and Restitution: The Fate of Works Removed from France during the Second World War,” reflected, and at the same time encouraged, new public concern.\(^{31}\)

The following year (1997), the French Government created the Mattéoli Commission – a Study Mission on the Spoliation of the Jews, leading to a rebirth of serious investigations on the subject of wartime spoliation hitherto little studied in France. Several of the impressive reference publications sponsored by the Commission, including the ‘General Report’ of the Commission itself, are now available online on the official Rose Valland Website, established soon afterwards by the French Ministry of Culture (see Section 2.0.2.2.), thanks to the efforts of Thierry Bajou, before his retirement from the Ministry in November 2019.\(^{32}\)

The Mattéoli Commission researchers may have gotten a head start on the research Senator Bouchoux completed a decade later, but it was not until the new century that many of the major archives needed for research became publicly available and better described. The impressive series of research guides prepared under the Mattéoli Commission had appeared by 2000. Unfortunately at that point, Caroline Piketty (from the Archives Nationales) and her team – who prepared the most helpful Guide des recherches dans les archives des spoliations et des restitutions – could not adequately describe the major collection of French retrieval and restitution records still closed to the public.\(^{33}\) Neither the “CRA Art Retrieval Collection” then still hidden in the Quai d’Orsay, nor the OBIP records in the AMAE Centre in Nantes, were accessible to researchers (including even the Mattéoli Commission).

New Sources for Retrieval and Provenance Research

Passage of the new 2008 French Archival Law lowered closure dates to 50 years for many needed records; new physical facilities were accompanied by a new generation of information systems with increased Internet availability of finding aids for major archives – AMAE-La Courneuve, AN-Pierrefitte, and the Archives de Paris. Further declassification of legal records relating to the Second World War became possible after the Government regulation (arrêté) of 24 December 2015.\(^{34}\) Indeed, only since 2009 have researchers begun to gain access in France to many key files with ERR documentation relating to wartime seizures and postwar French efforts to locate, retrieve, and restitute ERR loot within the broader context of cultural plunder and restitution issues.

With increased accessibility of these archival sources, the Archives Nationales conceived of a new “Archival Research Guide for Sources on Looted Art during the Second World War and its Restitution,” completely online with digital links to the holding archival repositories in Paris. Initial segments with hyperlinks to the Archives Nationales at Pierrefitte and several other repositories were launched on the Internet in June 2018, under the auspices of the Inter-ministerial Service of the Archives of France (SIAF). By the end of 2020, introductory surveys of key fonds (record groups) were available from seven of the archival repositories covered in more detail below (see Section 2.0.2.1.).

Simultaneously with its preparation of reference aids, the Mattéoli Commission also had recommended the establishment of what became the Commission for the Compensation of Victims of Spoliation Resulting from the Antisemitic Legislation in Force during the Occupation: Commission pour l'indemnisation des victimes de spoliations (CIVS), founded in 1999, has since been actively assisting victims of cultural losses. Two decades later, in 2019, data on all the paintings and drawings the Commission had searched on behalf of victims, and others in CIVS processed files, were brought together online in the publicly available TED-CIVS Database. The CIVS website also displays its 2019 Report, the last half of which consists of the Proceedings of their November 2019 symposium: featured therein are reports on significant recent developments in France relating to provenance research and the identification of still-displaced works of art and restitution issues (see Section 2.0.2.3.). The same website also displays the January and June 2021 Newsletters of the Network of European Restitution Commissions.

Indicative of increased sources for retrieval and restitution, Sébastien Chauffour (archivist in charge of the Art Retrieval records at the MAE Diplomatic Archive in La Courneuve), in his presentation at the November 2019 CIVS Symposium, noted several indexing projects covering looted art underway in the Archives diplomatiques at La Courneuve. One involves digitizing the card files of claims used for the French postwar Répertoire des Biens Spoliés (RBS), covering looted paintings and drawings, and ‘art objects’; a special optical character recognition process will enable creation of Excel tables of names and other vital data, covering 20,000 looted cultural items. A similar Excel indexing system is being implemented, he noted, combining proper names with data about looted and still-missing art items to be found in 2,443 claims dossiers of the CRA postwar claims.

In the same report, Chauffour also noted the digitization of the extensive collection of French art sales catalogues already underway at the National Institute of Art History (INHA – see Section 2.6.); these include many sales through the wartime years, and hence are of great importance for the French art market during Occupation. A projected index will cover names of owners, as well as artists and titles of art works sold.\textsuperscript{38} In connection with wartime sales, also of special note is the INHA virtual “Carnet (open notebook) dedicated to the study of the French art market during Occupation (1940–1944): actors, works, networks, mechanisms,” with records of recent related research, symposia, and publications involved.\textsuperscript{39} With the official Paris wartime auction records themselves now opening to researchers at the municipal Archives de Paris (see Section 2.4.2.), archivists there have suggested the possibility of creating a database specifically on Paris wartime auction sales, based on the extensive data available in recently declassified archival auction files and the various auctioneers involved.

Simultaneously, the wartime art market was featured in a 2019 exhibition at the Mémorial de la Shoah in Paris, curated by Emmanuelle Polack, coinciding with the appearance of her book on the subject, Le marché de l’art sous l’Occupation, 1940–1944. Her study demonstrates the extent to which wartime spoliations, the persecution and disenfranchisement of Jewish dealers, and wartime auctions and other private sales were an integral part of the Shoah, seriously contributing to the victimization of Jewish collectors and dispersal of art, while engendering more still-needed efforts in identification, retrieval, and restitution.\textsuperscript{40} Indicative of the extent of unidentified items involved in red-flag wartime sales, three paintings from the Louvre in that 2019 exhibition led to their claim and projected restitution to heirs of the Jewish lawyer and art collector Armand Isaac Dorville.\textsuperscript{41} Subsequently, Polak was commissioned to assist the Louvre identifying related ‘suspicious’ acquisitions during the wartime and postwar years, with another seven items from the museum identified in early 2020 in line for restitution.\textsuperscript{42}

Expanded French Government Efforts

While the CIVS remains under the sponsorship of the French Prime Minister, the French Ministry of Culture in June 2019 launched – within the Ministry itself – the Mission for Research and Restitution of Cultural Goods Spoliated between 1933 and 1945 (Mission de recherche et de restitution des biens culturels spoliés entre 1933 et 1945). This new Mission – headed by David Zivie, has the assigned role to deal with items of dubious provenance in public institutions, including the MNRS, looted books, and other items accessioned into permanent collections. David Zivie had initially been commissioned in May 2017 to prepare a detailed report on the problem by French Minister of Culture Audrey Azoulay. His February 2018 “Report to Minister of Culture Françoise Nyssen” served as the background for the new Mission. In a special note introducing the report, Zivie highlights the fate of the MNRS.

In 2000, according to the Mattéoli Commission, 2,143 MNRS works of art were held by National Museums. Today, there are 2,210, of which 2,000 are without identified owners. Added to that are 17,000 books in public libraries, and an unknown number of items that had been the object of spoliation, acquired or received by museums over the course of 75 years or more.

While investigating the provenance of the MNRS, looted books, and other spoliated items may be highlighted, the new Mission also has authority – in conjunction with the CIVS – to search for important cultural items still missing from Nazi spoliation. An announcement on the Ministry website clarifies and justifies the new Mission.

Almost simultaneously in March 2019, the Ministry of Culture launched a new virtual platform, “POP.” Among a variety of databases, “POP” includes an updated and expanded database on the MNRS Collection, consisting of the latest figure of 2,210 MNRS items, with colored images of all but 78 (see Section 2.0.2.2. for listing of the “POP” portal and related components).

Together with a new French-German Agreement for closer cooperation on looted art and restitution issues, these developments all reflect a recently increased level of French Government efforts and support of investigation relating to wartime cultural spoliation, in face of the unfinished retrieval, identification, and restitution, now over 75 years after the end of the war.

The Schloss Collection and Launch of the JDCRP

At the end of 2020, the CIVS website posted notice of a major pilot research project underway by the newly created Jewish Digital Cultural Recovery Project (JDCRP). Begun in 2016 and formally established in Berlin in 2019, the JDCRP announced its ambitious goal of “a comprehensive listing of all Jewish-owned cultural objects plundered by the Nazis and their allies from the time of their spoliation to the present.” Funding for its pilot project regarding the Adolphe Schloss Collection came from the European Union, in addition to support from its sponsors, the Commission for Art Recovery (CAR, New York) and the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany (Claims Conference, New York and Frankfurt).46

In July 2021, as this updated chapter was being finalized, the JDCRP launched its initial website contribution on “The Fate of the Adolphe Schloss Collection,” one of the most prestigious collections seized by Nazi agents in France during the war.47 This impressive segment highlights the collection of 333 paintings Dutch and Flemish old masters brought together by Adolphe Schloss (1841–1911) that was seized from the Schloss heirs’ hiding place in the Corrèze region of central France in 1943. Many paintings have still not been retrieved, as indicated in an earlier French catalogue and database of the still-missing paintings.48 The new JDCRP website now provides multi-faceted details on the history of the collection. Illustrated entries provide detailed provenance for each of the 333 paintings: earlier inventory references, biographic identification of people and organizations involved, details of archival locations with facsimiles of many related documents, and essays on different aspects of the collection history and pilot project methodology.49

The ERR was only involved tangentially with the Schloss Collection. Initially – as noted in a recent study of Bruno Lohse, Göring’s liaison with the ERR French art group in Paris – Lohse was active in assisting the Gestapo seizure of the collection in the spring of 1943. But the Nazi seizure of the Schloss Collection was not considered an ERR exploit, nor was it destined for any of the ERR art repositories.50 Rather, 262 paintings were selected for the projected Führer Museum in Linz and 49 paintings went to the Louvre in late August 1943. Nevertheless, through Göring’s instigation a large portion of the collection was exhibited under ERR auspices in the Jeu de Paume in November 1943, before transfer to the Führerbau in Munich with additional masterpieces acquired for Hitler’s Linz Museum. Some 262 of the Schloss treasures were among over 1,000 paintings that disappeared from the Führerbau by 30 April 1945, the day before the U.S. liberated Munich. By 1951, only 98 had been recovered. Sadly, an estimated 164 paintings of the original Schloss Collection are still missing, and hence among French ‘most-wanted’ wartime losses.\(^5^1\) In another EU-financed project, the Central Institute of Art History (ZI) in Munich recently undertook an extensive “Reconstruction Project on the Führerbau Theft,” with considerable provenance research on the paintings involved, including the Schloss Collection. Their extensive bibliography of sources consulted and six detailed inventories on the fate of the paintings involved are available for download on the ZI website.\(^5^2\)

2.0.1. Overview of French Archival Coverage

Only Scattered ERR Documents in France. Despite the extensive ERR plunder in France, and the extent of unlocated and unresolved French cultural losses, many of which were attributable to the ERR, only relatively few original ERR documents remain today in French archives. Rather, the documents covering those ERR and related cultural war crimes in France – together with sources relating to postwar retrieval efforts for missing cultural loot – are scattered across Europe and the United States, as is apparent in this chapter and in others of this Guide. For example, the original ERR inventories of the 200 seized French Jewish-owned art collections processed in the Jeu de Paume, essential for identification of the individual works of art, have been available since the 1990s in the Bundesarchiv in Koblenz. As of the December 2019 version of the German Chapter – and now also in the updated November 2021 version – they were available in quality digital copies on the Internet, directly linked from their descriptive listings. Together with all the rest of their archival fond (TVK, B 323), the ERR inventories and related documents in Koblenz can also be accessed in full text through the BArch online reference facility, Invenio. Variant earlier working copies of those inventories in the AMAE-La Courneuve have been open for public research only since 2009, and now can be accessed in digital copy in the La Courneuve Reading Room.

For French looted libraries, in 2016, ten digitized facsimiles of the initial ERR priority seizure lists for French libraries were launched on the Internet in Paris. Copies of only three of those, however, were found in French archives. Two of those three ERR lists – incomplete and covering priority private libraries seized – are held among CRA French library restitution records in the Archives Nationales, where they were not declassified until the late 1990s. One of the most extensive lists of ERR initial seizures is a postwar British compendium from ERR files the British MFA&A found in the ERR Hohe Schule library center that ended the war in the monastery of Tanzenberg in Austrian Carinthia. With a digital version now online in Paris, the original is today among British Foreign Office library restitution records in the National Archives in Kew. The most extensive authoritative retroactive ERR lists of notable private institutional and personal libraries the ERR initially plundered in Paris, however, are found today among the most extensive Collection of ERR documents in Kyiv (Kiev), Ukraine, publicly available only since the 1990s (online since 2010, but currently awaiting a new website).

The long-time unavailability or inaccessibility of ERR documents in France may well explain why more was not known earlier about the ERR plunder of French Jewish-owned art collections and the millions of books and archives the ERR and affiliated Möbel-Aktion confiscated from Jews, Free Masons, East European émigrés, socialists, and other ‘enemies of the Reich.’ The long closure of relevant documents describing what was plundered during the war may also help explain the difficulties and limitations of retrieval of wartime spoliation, and hence restitution to the victimized owners or their heirs. Perhaps this is why, after the 75th Anniversary of the end of the war, we are still trying to piece together the fate of Europe’s lost and/or long-hidden cultural heritage, so ruthlessly and widely dispersed during and since the Second World War.

The contemporary Diplomatic Archives Centre in La Courneuve (AMAE-La Courneuve), since 2009, houses four basic complexes of records under the Ministry for Europe and Foreign Affairs (as the Ministry was renamed in May 2017) that provide potential sources for research on ERR and related art and library seizures, their wartime migration, postwar retrieval, and restitution. First, and undoubtedly most significant, are the extensive records of the French Commission for Art Retrieval (Commission de récupération artistique, CRA) and related agencies involved with cultural retrieval long held at the Quai d’Orsay. Today they are all open to the public and better described in AMAE-La Courneuve. In the initial 2011 edition of this Guide, only limited copies of wartime ERR and related files, together with fragmentary postwar cartons, could be described at the Quai d’Orsay. The present compiler, having worked with ERR records in other countries, was able to assist AMAE archivists in the initial identification and description for some of those ERR documents. As a result of such cooperation, the 2011 Survey could present the first published description of a small part of the Quai d’Orsay CRA collection. These records were finally opened to the public in 2009 in the newly constructed Centre for Diplomatic Archives in La Courneuve (two stops on the RER-B from the Gare du Nord).

The passage of the French 2008 Archival Law (reducing the period of closure for documents relating to personal property to 50 years), the transfer of archives to La Courneuve, extensive reprocessing, and development of a new electronic reference system already make these and related AMAE records increasingly available for public research in the spacious La Courneuve Reading Rooms. However, the 2011 coverage quickly became obsolete, almost as soon as it appeared, requiring revision of almost all AMAE archival signatures (cotes) therein described. An updated 2017 French chapter for the ERR Archival Guide followed, but by 2020, even that needed serious amendment, especially because of more extensive archival description, with many extensive new inventories for the first relevant complex of the Art Retrieval collection at La Courneuve.

209SUP (Les archives de la “récupération artistique” [CRA and related agencies]; see Section 2.1.1.). Our first focus in La Courneuve now extends to this entire massive collection (1148 cartons) from the CRA and related agencies, earlier designated ‘RA,’ now reprocessed under the new archival reference code ‘209SUP.’ Thanks to an energetic young AMAE archivist, Anne Liskenne, many new finding aids were speedily made available to researchers, and on the Internet opening large parts of the collection to public availability – some digitally and others in the original.

In 2015, most of the Archives of the Direction of French National Museums (Direction des Musées de France, AMN) were transferred to the Archives Nationales in Pierrefitte, including many related files from the Second World War. The following year, one small group of 16 cartons, with 67 ‘articles’ of documentation from the ERR Occupation of the Jeu de Paume, was accessioned by the Archives diplomatiques in La Courneuve, where they were processed as a separate series, 20160007AC (see Section 2.1.1.7.), now considered part of the Art Retrieval Collection.

Since 2016, under Liskenne’s successor Sébastien Chauffour, already six of the preliminary series finding aids have been significantly expanded and updated on the Ministry website (hyperlinks to the finding aids are available as of early 2021; selected English descriptions are provided below in Section 2.1.1.). The initial AMAE-proposed plan for extensive digitization and Internet availability of the documents themselves, regrettably for researchers, has not come to pass. Legal restrictions and concerns over breach of privacy— as well as budgetary and staff limitations— still prohibit Internet display of these files, containing as they do many documents with personal data, including details of valuable privately-owned art collections. Nonetheless, an increasing number of cartons of great public interest are being digitized for researcher use on dedicated computers in the La Courneuve Reading Room.

Rose Valland. Assigned to the Jeu de Paume during occupation, the legendary curator Rose Valland (1898–1980) witnessed the ERR systematically registering private Jewish collections and kept track of the looted art expedited to Germany or elsewhere. Following Liberation, Valland served not only as the executive secretary of the CRA, but also as a French Army Captain with French occupation forces and continued her research in the French Zone of Occupation (ZFO) in Germany, with headquarters in Baden-Baden, as well as in the French Sector in Berlin. The 209SUP Collection contains numerous files from her personal research and retrieval efforts, extending even after her retirement from the Louvre. Many of the voluminous CRA and related French agency files stem from the records of plunder she compiled or collected during and after the war, including copies of original ERR inventories received from U.S. postwar processing under OMGUS. Valland’s postwar research files result from her investigations of ERR operations and interrogations of ERR staff, as well as reports about the dispersal and retrieval of specific collections. Other CRA records, including those from Paris, augment Valland’s incoming or outgoing files from her offices in Baden-Baden and Berlin. Many parts of the collection were initially held in Valland’s offices in the Louvre until her death, before transfer to the Quai d’Orsay in 1992, and then in 2009 to La Courneuve. As of early fall 2021, most of those papers have been reprocessed with more complete inventories for more efficient access, but because files from many agencies and many subjects are intermixed, researchers may still expect to find new and revealing data in the diverse files.

Indeed, it is hard to overestimate the importance of these newly available sources for research in wartime cultural looting, destruction, and displacement, and even importance— well beyond French frontiers – for the international efforts in retrieval, identification, and provenance research in support of claims for restitution or compensation. These sources often cannot be utilized alone without the corresponding records in other French archives as well as related files in U.S., British, and German – if not other – archives. Given the long withdrawal of the French portion of these records from public availability, the descriptions that follow still remain preliminary, albeit considerably expanded to replace the obsolete coverage from 2011 and 2017 versions of the chapter. The copies of documents of ERR provenance – or most closely related to the ERR – that have been examined by this compiler are described in more detail and now can better be understood.

55 The compiler is particularly grateful to AMAE archivist Anne Liskenne, for many meetings and consultations about the collection. Liskenne took charge of the collection after the retirement of Marie Hamon in 2009 up through 2015, when she was promoted to another position in AMAE. Thanks are now due to Sébastien Chauffour for consultations regarding subsequent updates of this chapter in 2017 and 2021.
in their archival context. While listings that follow describe only fragmentary parts of these newly accessible AMAE holdings in any detail, many of the briefer English renditions necessarily repeat data in the newly expanded French finding aids. Hopefully, the additional selective listings provided will further encourage research in sources for a subject too-long neglected in France, and long unavailable to researchers abroad.

Researchers should note that many of the postwar research series within the 209SUP Collection include copies of scattered foreign claims, correspondence, reports, and out-shipment files relating to French retrieval and repatriation of cultural property to and from various countries and the French Occupation Zone – and also incoming to France from abroad, including the correspondence of Rose Valland’s offices in Baden-Baden and Berlin.

Focus here extends to the fate of the ERR art and library loot, with attention directed more broadly to the now expanded source base for the extensive postwar French efforts in investigating, retrieving, and restituting ERR cultural loot, often intermixed with the cultural loot of other NS agencies and predators. While necessarily only selective, researchers should find more depth and context for the selections covered than currently available online. For the 209SUP Collection, more in-depth description and proper-name indexing will be found in the database developed specially for that collection, RA Database for on-site reference within the La Courneuve Centre, and still being augmented by AMAE archivists.56

OBIP, the Office des biens et intérêts privés (Office of Private Property and Interests; see Section 2.1.2.). Gradually other key groups of sources in the new MAE Diplomatic Archives Centre in La Courneuve are opening to researchers as well. OBIP is a second significant complex of records in La Courneuve, including its successor after 1953, the Service for Private Property and Interests (SBIP). These records were earlier held in the MAE Centre for Diplomatic Archives in Nantes (Centre des archives diplomatiques de Nantes, CADN), before their transfer to La Courneuve in 2010.57 Although their importance for the study of the fate of looted cultural property was revealed in print by MAE archivist Marie Hamon and by archivist Caroline Piketty (Archives Nationales) in her the Mattéoli Commission Guide, they were not readily open and available for research. French Senator Corinne Bouchoux was the first to make significant wide use of them in her 2011 doctoral dissertation, “If only the paintings could speak…..,” mentioned above.58

As of mid-2021, some of the OBIP series have been reprocessed in La Courneuve under new archival designations and are gradually being opened and better described. Expanded descriptive inventories of most series relevant to this Guide are already in the La Courneuve computerized reference system, although still not available on the MAE website. Particularly important for our focus here is the ‘Restitution’ series that documents the OBIP role in the retrieval and return of ERR loot among other French cultural loot, including the fate of works of art whose owners were not found that were turned over to Domaines for sale, or deposited in French museums as MNRs.

56 The latest updated RA Database is a successor to the earlier in-house database, ARBCS (Archives de la Récupération des Biens Culturels Spoliés), as described below in Section 2.1.1.

57 They were briefly described in the 2011 edition of this Guide as a separate repository (Section 2.2.).

58 Bouchoux’s book (note 27 above) was based on her earlier doctoral dissertation at the University of Angers (HAL Id: tel-00951875); it is now online for free download at https://tel.archives-ouvertes.fr/tel-00951875. The dissertation bibliography lists the files she had consulted when the OBIP records were still in Nantes, pp. 421–28, although correlation is difficult today with the new archival signatures in La Courneuve.
ZFO (Zone française d’occupation; see Section 2.1.3.). Third, the records of French military occupation authorities in Germany (including Baden-Baden and Berlin) (Archives de la zone française d’occupation en Allemagne et en Autriche – usually referred to collectively as ZFO), earlier held in the MAE archival facility in Colmar, are now also all in La Courneuve. Following reprocessing they are now available for public access, although details are still lacking on the Internet as of early 2021. However, relatively few files within these massive records relate to postwar cultural retrieval and restitution, paralleling data in records from British and U.S. Zones, and to a much lesser extent from the Soviet Zone.

For France, scattered files in the ZFO series may on occasion augment data from 209SUP (CRA) and OBIP records. However, relatively small quantities of specifically ERR loot were found in the French Zones, because the most important ERR repositories for looted art were located in the U.S. Zones of Occupation in Germany and Austria, most of which were processed in the U.S. Collecting Points in Munich (MCCP) and Wiesbaden (WCCP). While most of the ERR-looted books found in the U.S. Zone were processed in the Offenbach Archival Depot (OAD), it was the British who processed the massive ZBHS stock of books in Tanzenberg in the British Zone of Occupation in Austria, which the ERR had collected from all over Europe.

A much more diverse fourth complex of French diplomatic records, lacking the detailed finding aids that might help reveal or assess its potential sources relating to wartime spoliation and postwar retrieval, nonetheless deserves attention. Some of the records mentioned and described briefly below may provide examples of many other potentially relevant series of wartime and postwar records in the La Courneuve Diplomatic Archives, which may also contain crucial sources. Most particularly because considerable French cultural property was widely dispersed and found its way to many different countries, following wartime seizures or sales (many of the latter ‘forced’), various diplomatic records may well hold needed clues for postwar retrieval and restitution negotiations.

The recent dramatic archival changes and opening of sources to the public in the MAE Diplomatic Archives-La Courneuve have their counterpart elsewhere in Paris, especially with the 2013 opening of the new contemporary Pierrefitte Site of the French National Archives (AN-Pierrefitte). When the 2011 edition of this Guide appeared, important components relating to the ERR and its loot in the Archives Nationales were all housed in the original AN complex in the Marais quarter of Paris. Today, those materials are housed with other contemporary French archival records in Pierrefitte-sur-Seine – a short walk from the end of the Paris metro line 13 to Saint-Denis. AN-Pierrefitte now houses many of the important ERR-related records held before 2013 in the original AN Paris Site (previously Section 2.4.), with significant additions recently released for public research and a Virtual Inventory Room to make description publicly accessible online worldwide.

AJ/38 (see Section 2.2.2.). Of most fundamental importance for tracking ERR and Möbel-Aktion loot, AN-Pierrefitte retains the records of the wartime French General Commissariat for Jewish Questions (Commissariat général aux questions juives, CGQJ), arranged as AJ/38. Those records document the ‘Aryanization’ proceedings of French Jewish art dealers, and the related plunder of their collections carried out by German secret police. They also include French complaints about confiscations. Intermixed in the AJ/38 complex are records of the CGQJ postwar counterpart, the Restitution Service for Property of Victims of Laws and Measures of Spoliation (Service de restitution des biens des victimes des lois et mesures de spoliation), which handled many of the postwar Jewish claims for property seized by the M-Aktion, often containing detailed inventories of losses submitted by claimants. Well described and open for consultation since 1998, those series provide considerable significant documentation on Jewish losses.

AJ/40 (see Section 2.2.3.). Several series of files from German occupation agencies are grouped together in the AJ/40 complex entitled German Archives from the Second World War which includes a portion of the records of the Military Commandant in France (Militärbefehlshaber in Frankreich, MBF) (see Section 2.2.3.1.), the German agency to which the ERR was directly subordinated, and hence to whom many of its reports were addressed. Some records of the Military Commandant in Belgium and Northern France (MB BelgNfr) also remain in the complex. Researchers using these records should be aware that additional portions of these records are held in Germany in the BArch Military Archives in Freiburg. Records of related German agencies also found in AJ/40 include some remaining files of the Currency Protection Commando (Devisenschutzkommando, DSK), which seized art and other cultural valuables from French bank vaults. Most of the Jewish-owned art objects seized were subsequently transferred to the ERR (see Section 2.2.3.2.). A subseries of AJ/40 has files from the trial of Hermann Bunjes (see Section 2.2.3.3.), who served with the Art Protection Office (Kunstschutz) and was closely involved with ERR operations.

F/17 (see Section 2.2.7.). A subseries of the records of the Ministry of Public Instruction (Ministère de l’instruction publique), Series F/17 comprises part of the records of French postwar CRA Sub-Commission for Books (Sous-Commission des livres, SCL), with extensive files of postwar library restitution from abroad and for books found within France. A smaller portion of the SCL files, however, are now held in AMAE-La Courneuve within the 209SUP complex.

Legal Records (3/W, BB/35, and Z/6). Several series of relevant French court records held in AN-Pierrefitte are more accessible today following the 2008 French Archival Law, and the December 2015 opening more access to some categories of legal records. Public accessibility is rapidly expanding with the creation of new digital finding aids. Among those of note are the Series 3W, the High Court of Justice (Haute cour de Justice – Section 2.2.4.), and Series Z/6, the Court of Justice of the Seine Department (La Cour de Justice du Département de la Seine – Section 2.2.10.). These courts and several others of lower instance, also held in AN-Pierrefitte, handled extensive domestic French postwar judicial investigations. Many, but not all, of the records of court proceedings in connection with war crimes and collaboration activities are now open, although some still require advance special request for access (dérogation). Often overlooked, but of related interest in AN-Pierrefitte, the official French records from the International Military Tribunal (IMT) in Nuremberg (Series BB/35 – Section 2.2.5.) include considerable documentation about Nazi art-looting, including many copies of ERR documents prepared for the trial of Alfred Rosenberg. The French IMT records noticeably differ in content from corresponding Nuremberg records in the U.S., British, and Russian archives.

AMN (Archives des Musées nationaux; see Section 2.2.11.). Closely related to the AMAE CRA holdings (now 209SUP), are the records of wartime evacuations, art seizures, postwar retrieval, and restitution, within the Archives of the French National Museums (AMN). They long remained in the Louvre as presented in the 2011 edition of this Guide (previously Section 2.3.). Starting at the end of 2014, most of the AMN holdings described there have been transferred to the new AN-Pierrefitte Site. By the end of 2015, they were reprocessed with new archival signatures, with correlation to their earlier AMN designations readily available online. Among the AMN holdings are some additional materials created or collected by Rose Valland herself in her capacity as curator in the Louvre, including more of her wartime notes from the Jeu de Paume. Because many of her working CRA files were earlier held in her offices in the Louvre, they remained with the AMN complex and are now in AN-Pierrefitte. However, one small group of 16 cartons with 67 ‘articles’ (mostly files and documents) from the Direction of French Museums (Directions des Musées de France) were transferred to the Diplomatic Archives in La Courneuve. Processed in 2016 as a separate series 20160007AC (see Section 2.1.1.7), they now form the Collection from the Service of French Museums with Documentation from the ERR Occupation of the Jeu de Paume, with an additional small group of files added in 2017.

Centre des archives économiques et financières (CAEF; see Section 2.3.)

The Centre for Economic and Financial Archives (CAEF) has previously drawn little attention as a potential source for research on wartime cultural spoliation and restitution efforts. A few examples presented here from its holdings among government economic and financial records, may suggest its relevant sources well be worth further consideration.

Archives de Paris (Archives départementales et communales; see Section 2.4.)

Brief coverage has been added in this Guide of a number of potentially relevant fonds in the Archives of the Department and City of Paris. Many of these are now more available for public research with online finding aids, thanks to a newly updated 2017 website, to which links are provided here. Postwar judicial records include investigation files and trial records for cases of wartime collaboration handled by local courts. These include prosecution of art dealers and others involved in illicit trafficking and sales of cultural property.

Most important for the active Paris art market are the records of the art auction houses and auctioneers (commissaires-priseurs), as mentioned above. These include auction catalogues and records of sales during the occupation and soon after, many of which will be crucial for provenance research in looted art. No original ERR documents have been located there, however. Considerable documentation may well be found, nonetheless, relating to the fate of ERR art loot that was siphoned off to the art market. There are also postwar files on claims and restitution, especially in connection with M-Aktion seizures. Given the extent of recent declassification of these records, a cooperative database on art sales has been suggested.

Mémorial de la Shoah – CDJC (see Section 2.5.)

The largest collection of original, but highly fragmentary, ERR documents remaining in France from ERR and other Rosenberg operations all over Europe, is the Rosenberg collection of the Center for Contemporary Jewish Documentation (CDJC), now part of the Mémorial de la
Shoah. These include a large collection of scattered ERR documents (extracted from their archival context) processed for the Nuremberg trials but not actually used in court, which were acquired by a French Jewish resistance group for CDJC. They have long been publicly available, many of them in published collections listed below. While many are of key importance, they do not contain any of the original ERR inventories of seized art processed in the Jeu de Paume, or ERR seizure lists for libraries in France. There are nonetheless scattered reports of many individual ERR seizures in France and throughout Europe, supplementing ERR records held in Germany and other countries; some copies of documents now in BArch are also included.59

The CDJC Nuremberg-Rosenberg Collection has been supplemented over the years by scattered groups of documents from German occupation authorities in France, CGQJ files, IMT series, and other sources. CDJC holdings have long been well described with item-level résumés in descriptive card catalogues. More recently, many CDJC documents have been made more accessible in an electronic database, with descriptions and selected documents available digitally in the Reading Room. Regrettably, the Mémorial de la Shoah has still not launched any of their database on the Internet.

INHA – Institut nationale d’histoire de l’art (see Section 2.6.)

Mention is also made briefly of a few relevant archival fonds held by the National Institute for Art History (INHA), such as records of art dealers and personal papers of individuals in the art world who were victims of ERR seizures. The INHA Library is also notable, especially for a large collection of auction catalogues (now in the process of digitization), and the new French-German database with 250 biographic articles or notes on major actors in the NS-period art market.

Le Blanc – Military Justice Archives (see Section 2.7.)

The French chapter concludes with a brief listing for the Central Depository for Records of Military Justice (DCAJM) in Le Blanc, a three-hour train and bus ride from Paris. This repository now preserves the records of proceedings for many of the postwar war-criminal and collaboration trials that were held under military auspices in France. Most relevant for the ERR activities and cultural seizures are records of the trial of leading members of the ERR staff in France, held in 1949–1950.

59 See, for example, the list of the ERR Sonderstab Musik seizures in Willem de Vries, Sonderstab Musik, pp. 130–31, not all of which could be located recently among CDJC holdings.
Disclaimer

N.B. The coverage in this chapter is focused on surviving ERR and related Rosenberg agency files such as the Möbel Aktion, and those regarding the postwar fate of ERR loot including retrieval and restitution. The sources actually covered, however, go well beyond the ERR, its loot, and related documents: those described in detail or summarized below are presented in a much broader context of records from and regarding seizures by other NS predators, and also in the more general context of postwar retrieval and fate of French cultural loot. Given the extent of ERR involvement in cultural looting in France, and the subsequent dispersal and intermixing of ERR loot with other plundered French cultural assets, broader coverage of archival sources is still needed to assist with more hoped-for retrieval and restitution. Recently expanded French finding aids now guide researchers to more extensive sources, and hence deserve our attention with updated references and expanded English coverage.

As originally prepared, the 2011 Guide (then entitled Survey) was intended to provide basic English-language coverage, supplementing the above-mentioned Guide des recherches by Caroline Piketty and her team (2000) and the specialized guide to M-Aktion sources by Annette Wieviorka and her colleagues Le pillage des appartements et son indemnisation (2000). Now, the 2011 French chapter of the Survey and both guides are almost completely obsolete in terms of the location and availability of the archival sources covered. Availability of archival files in France has greatly expanded since the French Archival Law of 2008, as noted above, with the opening of many long-closed research resources regarding wartime seizures and restitution proceedings. An additional regulation of December 2015 opened more categories of legal records relating to the Second World War.

Newly constructed archival repositories for both the Archives Nationales and the Archives of the Foreign Ministry result in greatly improved research facilities. Simultaneously, archival reference developments continue to improve, with increasing digital availability of detailed finding aids, many with added Internet interfaces and reference systems.

Revised introductory remarks serve to introduce the renewed French concern for the still-displaced or missing cultural treasures, and the many unidentified ones still not returned to their owners. This 2021 chapter features new initial appraisal of Internet offerings including the SIAF Guide, the new Ministry of Culture website, as well as those of CIVS, EHRI, and most recently the JDCRP, among others – all providing increasing research resources for wartime spoliation and postwar restitution in France. More bibliography of general research guides and additional selected background literature, now include specialized coverage of musicalia. Among the seven archival repositories covered below, most crucial in this 2021 update are the newly expanded French finding aids with newly described archival sources in the MAE Diplomatic Archives at La Courneuve, along with additional coverage in the AN-Pierrefitte.

Given that the pandemic year has prevented finalization in some cases, user feedback and suggestions for improvement would be much appreciated.

2.0.2.1. SIAF: French Internet Guide to Archival Research on Looted Art during the Second World War and Its Restitution

France, Portail national des archives.
Service interministériel des Archives de France (SIAF).
Online at: https://francearchives.fr/fr/section/82632085.

This online virtual SIAF archival research guide consists of fond (record group) or series-level descriptions of available records in major Paris archives, with a helpful bibliography (https://francearchives.fr/fr/article/87796692) of additional literature, many overlapping with those described in this chapter.

Coverage – with fond-level overviews of specific holdings (as of December 2021) – extends to four major repositories described in more detail in this chapter. Contributions are prepared by the archivists responsible for individual fonds or series, with links to and/or listing of available finding aids and bibliography. Most extensive coverage is for AN-Pierrefitte. For each fond covered, a survey list of main groups of files (articles) within the fond/series is provided, with hyperlinks to more detailed online finding aids. Continuing expansion of coverage is projected.

Archives nationales (AN-Pierrefitte). Most extensive coverage currently includes most of the fonds described below of potential relevance to looted art during the Second World War – with links to virtual finding aids, as well as several others (cf Section 2.2. below).

Archives diplomatiques (AMAE-La Courneuve). Initial coverage surveys the major collection of ‘Art Retrieval’ records (209SUP) with expanded online finding aids. Surveys are also given for two fonds in the OBIP series. Other related holdings in La Courneuve, many mentioned below, await coverage in this SIAF Guide (cf Section 2.1. below).

Institut national d’histoire de l’art (INHA). Brief overviews are given for two fonds of art dealers, and three others fonds of potential interest (cf Section 2.6. below).

Mémorial de la Shoah (CDJC). Five fond-level entries for the CDJC are now available, but not all of the main Rosenberg Collection from the Nuremberg trials, with original ERR documents from all over Europe (many listed below) (cf Section 2.7. below).

Brief partial SIAF coverage extends to two important repositories not described below:

Service historique de la Défense (SHD), Service historique de l’armée de Terre (SHAT) (Château de Vincennes, av de Paris, 94300 Vincennes). A limited note regarding partially processed files held by the archive in Vincennes.

Archives de la Préfecture de police de Paris. Provides brief overviews of three fonds of potential interest, including police reports on the German seizures of art in June and July 1940, most of which was later turned over to the ERR for processing in the Jeu de Paume (BA 2436).
2.0.2.2. MINISTRY OF CULTURE WEBSITE: «POP» – LA PLATTFORME OUVERTE DU PATRIMOINE/ “POP” – THE OPEN HERITAGE PLATFORM
Online at: https://www.culture.gouv.fr/Espace-documentation/Bases-de-donnees/Fiches-bases-de-donnees/POP-la-plate-forme-ouverte-du-patrimoine

   [60] A note for the English, Spanish, and German versions explains that automatic translations from the French are provided by “Reverso A1”; the same translation system operates in subsequent portions and throughout the portal.

   [61] The Rose Valland Website was developed under the direction of Thierry Bajou before his retirement (November 2019). The compiler benefitted from many helpful discussions with Thierry Bajou in connection with earlier versions of this chapter, and duly appreciates his extended reference efforts with the Rose Valland Website. David Zivie, now in charge of the new Ministry of Culture Mission regarding wartime spoliation and restitution, has assured the compiler that further updates are planned.

FRANCE, Ministère de la Culture
Address: 182 rue Saint-Honoré; F-75001 Paris
Contact (via website form): https://www.culture.gouv.fr/Nous-contacter

The French Ministry of Culture, starting in 2019, has launched a new web platform bringing together an extensive variety of digital resources with many databases covering various components of the French cultural patrimony in museums and libraries throughout the country. As of November 2021, the new portal embraces a total of close to 3.7 million individual entries and is still expanding. All of the many current databases included in “POP” can be accessed through the main “POP” URL noted above. “POP” is now available with automatic translation in English, German, and Spanish, and soon will be available in Arabic and Mandarin Chinese as well.

Directly relevant to wartime spoliated and still-displaced French cultural assets, the Service of French Museums earlier developed an extensive web portal “Site Rose Valland,” named in honor of the French art historian and Louvre Museum curator Rose Valland (1898–1980). During German occupation Valland served the dangerous role as representative of the French museums in the Jeu de Paume Museum, where the ERR assembled art collections seized from Jewish owners for registration and dispatch to Germany. In peril of her life, she took copious clandestine notes about the plundered art objects, which were communicated to French museum authorities. After the war, with French Army rank of captain, she headed French art retrieval and restitution efforts. Portions of the Rose Valland Website still functioning as of December 2021 are listed below (see Section 2.0.2.2.2.), but the Ministry reports an upgrade underway. A newly updated “Database of the MNR Collection,” earlier accessible from the Rose Valland Website, is now featured in the “POP” portal, along with several others.

(1) BASE MNR ROSE VALLAND /
Database of the MNR Collection of Retrieved Artworks

Of high importance for this chapter – as one of the many component databases of the Ministry’s “POP” portal – is the updated and transformed “Database of the MNR Collection.” This online database comprises illustrated entries for the remaining 2,210 artworks retrieved after the war but not identified as to owner or heir, subsequently assigned to the so-called MNR Collection, and allocated to French National Museums.

Base MNR Rose Valland: catalogue en ligne des biens MNR (Musées nationaux Récupération) spoliés pendant la Seconde Guerre Mondiale

[MNR Database Rose Valland: Online Catalogue of Retrieved Art Works (MNR) spoliated during the Second World War in National Museums]

Online at: https://www.pop.culture.gouv.fr/advanced-search/list/mnr.

The updated “POP” database provides individual illustrated entries for the remaining 2,210 MNR works of art recovered but not identified as to owner or heir, which were thereby allocated to French National Museums and registered as the so-called MNR Collection (Musées Nationaux Récupération, MNR), pending return to legitimate owners. The published 2004 catalogue includes only 983 MNR paintings (through the nineteenth century) with black and white images, while the new database presents colored images of all but 78 of 2,210 items including sculpture and decorative arts (see notes about the 2004 printed edition in Section 2.0.2.7. of the bibliography).

Four other “POP” databases should be noted as of potential general relevance for research on cultural looting in occupied France during the Second World War and postwar retrieval, restitution, and fate of displaced cultural assets. These include:

1. Base Muséofile: (Répertoire des Musées de France) A database directory of 1,227 museums in France.
   Online at: https://www.pop.culture.gouv.fr/advanced-search/list/museo.

2. Base Joconde / Base Mona Lisa (Collections des Musées de France): A collective catalogue with some 620,675 individual items in French museum collections.
   Online at: https://www.pop.culture.gouv.fr/advanced-search/list/joconde.
   And earlier: http://www2.culture.gouv.fr/documentation/joconde/fr/pres.htm.

3. Base Palissy (Patrimoine mobilier): A catalogue of 215,898 moveable art objects, including furniture and other objets d’art designated as ‘Historical Monuments’ and registered in the General Inventory of the Cultural Patrimony.
   Online at: https://www.pop.culture.gouv.fr/advanced-search/list/palissy.

4. Base Enluminures: A collection of digital reproductions of 109,863 illuminations and décor from medieval manuscripts held in a hundred French municipal libraries.
   Online at: https://www.pop.culture.gouv.fr/advanced-search/list/enluminures.

62 This new “POP” database replaces the MNR earlier catalogue link http://www2.culture.gouv.fr/documentation/mnr/MnR-pres.htm as part of the Rose Valland Website.
2.0.2.2.1. MUSÉE DU LOUVRE

Louvre Collections Database
Online at: https://collections.louvre.fr/

The extensive Louvre database “Collections,” launched online in March 2021, displays entries for more than 480,000 art works of the Louvre Museum – most with images, including those inventoried but not exhibited. The database covers holdings in the eight Louvre Departments – collections of paintings, drawings and engravings, sculptures, furniture, textiles, jewelry, inscriptions, and objets d’art, as well as holdings of the Eugène-Delacroix National Museum (Musée National Eugène-Delacroix). Entries are being updated continually with additional data, including the latest results of provenance research especially devoted to art works whose provenance during the Nazi period had not earlier been fully established.

‘MNR’ Art Works among the Louvre Holdings. Of special note, one subset of the Louvre “Collections” Database is specifically devoted to the 1,738 ‘MNR’ art works among the Louvre holdings (pending return to legitimate owners):

2.0.2.2.2. REMAINING COMPONENTS OF THE ROSE VALLAND WEBSITE

Three other important and helpful components of the earlier Rose Valland Website remain accessible online as of December 2021, while the Ministry reports plans for upgrading in terms of needs for contemporary coverage.63 As indicated below, these remain of considerable research value for wartime spoliated as well as postwar retrieval, restitution, and fate of remaining displaced cultural assets.

A. Documentation historique. A section of the website presents historical analyses and research reference publications with documentation about German cultural plunder in France during occupation and postwar restitution.

(4) Le Répertoire des Biens Spoliés…(RBS) / List of Property Removed from France during the War 1939–1945.

Original copies from the Louvre archives (AMN) that were digitized for the MNR website (as indicated below) are now held in AN-Pierrefitte (see Section 2.2.12.1.) – 20144792/348–362. The archival copies of the three original volumes with annotations earlier held in the Louvre (digitized copies online below) are now held in AMAE-La Courneuve (see Section 2.1.1.7.) – 20160007AC, articles 25, 26, 28, and 30. Other copies from the OBIP records are now also in La Courneuve (see Section 2.1.2.7.).

It should be understood that these volumes list items from individual OBIP claims files that had not yet been restituted by the time of publication; they do not include many other items seized and/or removed from France. See more details about the series on the website.

N.B. Volumes 1, 5, and 6 each have two supplements, but do not cover looted cultural property. A microfilm version of Répertoire des biens spoliés is in NARA Microfilm Publication M1946, rolls 141–145 (see the U.S. chapter, Section 10.1.3.4.), now online at Fold3.com. Another original paper set is held in fond B 323 in the Bundesarchiv Koblenz (available online since 2019 – see the German chapter, Section 3.1.1.6.). The series, in various degrees of completeness, can also be found in a few major research libraries, but the online French version is most complete, and includes the supplemental copies of volumes on looted art with annotations by Rose Valland’s staff.

Annotated version of Volume 2 and Supplements:
The originals of these annotated volumes are now held in AMAE-La Courneuve, 20160007AC, articles 25, 26, 28, and 30 (see Section 2.1.1.7.).

2.0.2.3. COMMISSION POUR L'INDEMNISATION DES VICTIMES DE SPOLIATIONS (CIVS)
[Commission for the Compensation of Victims of Spoliation]

Address: 20 avenue de Ségur, 75007 PARIS
Website: http://www.civs.gouv.fr; English: http://www.civs.gouv.fr/home/
Tel.: + 33 1 42 75 68 32
Fax: + 33 1 42 75 68 97
E-mail: renseignement@civs.gouv.fr
Hours: Monday–Friday, 10:00–12:00, 14:30

The Commission for the Compensation of Victims of Spoliation Resulting from the Antisemitic Legislation in Force during the Occupation (CIVS) was established on the recommendation of the Mattéoli Commission (mentioned above) under the French Prime Minister, 10 September 1999 with the assigned task of:

- examining individual applications presented by the victims or their heirs to make reparations for losses resulting from the spoliations of property that occurred due to antisemitic laws passed during the Occupation, both by the Occupying forces and by the Vichy authorities. The Commission is responsible for seeking and proposing appropriate means of reparation, restitution, or compensation.65

The scope and procedures of claimant support for filing claims and seeking CIVS assistance in restitution and/or compensation or are explained on the website.

Of special importance to researchers, the website also explains about the work of the General Commissariat for Jewish Questions (CGQJ), 29 March 1941–17 August 1944 and the post-occupation Department for the Restitution of Spoliated Property, whose archives are held in the Archives Nationales-Pierrefitte (subseries AJ/38; see below Section 2.2.2.), with some 62,000 Aryanization case files among other sources.

The CIVS maintains its own archives, permanent portions of which for the twentieth century have already been transferred to the National Archives-Pierrefitte (details available on the CIVS website). Several CIVS staff units have been trained for continuing archival research in connection with claimed personal cultural property in France, with a coordinated unit in Berlin.

Of further interest for research in looted art (paintings and drawings) is the CIVS–TED- Database, recently made publicly available online at: http://www.civs.gouv.fr/en/spoliated-cultural-property/ted-database/.

As of fall 2021, the CIVS website also displays:

2.0.2.4. EUROPEAN HOLOCAUST RESEARCH INFRASTRUCTURE (EHRI): PORTALS

Address: Herengracht 380, 1016 CJ Amsterdam
Hosted by: NIOD Institute for War, Holocaust and Genocide Studies
Website: https://www.ehri-project.eu/about-ehri; https://ehri-project.eu

EHRI Portal

The EHRI Portal, as of November 2021, displays reports from 2,204 archival repositories in 60 countries. The Portal includes archival descriptions now displayed from 663 holding institutions. Online at: https://portal.ehri-project.eu/.

French coverage includes listings from 126 institutions in France, with additional French-related coverage from other countries, totaling some ca. 41,424 archival descriptions. Online at: https://portal.ehri-project.eu/search?q=France. https://portal.ehri-project.eu/countries/fr.

International Research Portal (now IRP2) for Records Related to Nazi-Era Cultural Property

The IRP was initially launched in 2011 by the U.S. National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) with extended international coverage. Since 2017, IRP has been hosted by EHRI. Now referred to as IRP2, the website includes important institutional virtual archival resources from many countries, including several repositories with specific collections relating to cultural seizures during the Second World War and postwar retrieval. Regrettably, as of December 2021, however, many entries are not being kept up to date with current operating digital links. Online at: https://irp2.ehri-project.eu/.

For France, IRP2 has only two archival listings for “France Diplomatie” (AMAE-La Courneuve) and Memorial de la Shoah (CDJC).
2.0.2.5. CULTURAL PLUNDER BY THE EINSATZSTAB REICHSLEITER ROSENBERG – ERR PROJECT WEBSITE WITH THE JEU DE PAUME DATABASE AND THE ERR LOOTED LIBRARY REPORTS AND CHARTS OF VICTIMS

Online at: https://www.errproject.org/about.php.

The Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany (Claims Conference), with technical support of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (USHMM), has over the past decade and a half been carrying out four major activities regarding the widely dispersed records of one of the most important Nazi cultural looting agencies, the Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg (ERR).

(1) IMAGING OF THE ORIGINAL ERR DOCUMENTARY FILES in archives in Kyiv, Moscow, Vilnius, Berlin, Koblenz, Amsterdam, Paris, New York, and Washington, with a view to making more ERR files publicly available. The contents of these files are described by Dr. Patricia Kennedy Grimsted in the ERR Archival Guide, the second portion of the ERR Project.

First published online in Amsterdam by the International Institute of Social History (IISH/IISG), the original outdated 2011 version – entitled Survey – is no longer online. Accordingly, updated country chapters are now presented on the ERR Project Website as an ongoing research aid, with expanded reference and finding aids for many related archival sources regarding Nazi wartime cultural seizures, postwar retrieval, restitution, and/or the fate of the ERR and other cultural loot. This updated and greatly expanded French chapter is an integral part of this complex.

(3) DATABASE OF ART OBJECTS AT THE JEU DE PAUME in Paris, between the fall of 1940 and early August 1944 (Marc Masurovsky, project director) is a joint creation of the Claims Conference with the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, Washington, DC. It is now displayed in an expanded version on the ERR Project Website. Online at: https://www.errproject.org/jeudepaume/.

Initially, this database brought together surviving wartime ERR data and images for ca. 21,000 individual works of art seized from 200 private French Jewish and a few Belgian Jewish collections that were processed by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume. Data from the original ERR registration cards in the U.S. National Archives in College Park, MD (NACP), are combined with ERR wartime images from the Bundesarchiv in Koblenz.66

During the past decade, the JdP Database has been significantly expanded well beyond its initial designation as a specific historical presentation. At first, additions were closely related to ERR seizures: some of those items were listed in ERR inventories, although no ERR registration cards survive for them as they do for original database entries. Other new entries identify owners for many individual items the ERR had assigned to either their Unidentified (Unbekannt) Collection (UNB) or the ownerless Möbel-Aktion collections.

66 See “About This Project” on the ERR Project Website at https://www.errproject.org/jeudepaume/about/.
Many of the ca. 20,000 more recent JdP Database additions, however, are most probably not ERR art loot. Rather, they are entries based on data in postwar claim files from the French government Office of Private Property and Interests (Office des biens et intérêts privés, OBIP), or incorporated in the cultural property claims processed by the CRA (1944–1949), or on data compiled from Belgian and Dutch sources. Thus, many of those recent additions were not processed in the Jeu de Paume and lack the alpha-numeric codes that the ERR assigned to their inventoried collections (and marked on the objects themselves). As a result, by 2021, the database covers a total of some 41,000 art works from over 600 owners in some 572 French – and to a much lesser extent Belgian and Dutch – Jewish collections.

Current plans call eventually for most of these data to be incorporated into the newly launched Jewish Digital Cultural Recovery Project (JDCRP), with an upgraded platform for the main component of French and Belgian victims’ art collections the ERR processed in the Jeu de Paume (see Section 2.0.2.6.).

(4) ERR LOOTED LIBRARIES is a fourth component of the ERR Project Website, currently devoted to library looting in Western Europe.

Online at: https://www.errproject.org/looted_libraries.php.

Presents original accounts of ERR library seizures with facsimiles of original ERR library-seizure lists of victims in each country, and charts of individual and organization listed.

Western European coverage currently includes ERR library seizures in:

See the initial French version on the website of the Commission française des archives juives (CFAJ): http://www.cfaj.fr/publicat/listes_ERR_France.html.

The Belgian component also includes a detailed register of ERR documents of Belgian provenance or related to ERR activities in Belgium, now held in TsDAVO in Kyiv. A second postwar portion of the Belgian coverage being finalized is expected in 2022.

The Netherlands: (under construction in 2021–2022).

In some cases, the ERR assigned one or more different names and codes to collections owned by the same person or firm (in the case of dealerships). Many of the additions from postwar French claims files or other non-ERR sources, lack ERR alphanumeric collection codes, which were otherwise assigned and affixed to each object.
2.0.2.6. JEWISH DIGITAL CULTURAL RECOVERY PROJECT (JDCRP)

Address: European Office: c/o Schwenke Schütz, Bernburger Strasse 32; 10963 Berlin
E-mail contact: info@jdcrp.org
Website: https://jdcrp.org/

Originally founded in 2016, the JDCRP – sponsored by the Commission for Art Recovery (CAR, New York) and the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany (Claims Conference, New York and Frankfurt) – was formally established in 2019 in Berlin. The JDCRP has an ambitious goal to create “a comprehensive listing of all Jewish-owned cultural objects plundered by the Nazis and their allies from the time of their spoliation to the present” – as stated on its current website. The JDCRP in July 2021 launched its initial pilot project (with European Union co-funding) highlighting “The Fate of the Adolphe Schloss Collection,” one of the most prestigious art collections seized by Nazi agents in France during the war, as earlier described in a French catalogue and database indicating the still-missing paintings.

JDCRP PILOT PROJECT: “The Fate of the Adolphe Schloss Collection”

An initial impressive virtual presentation – launched in July 2021 – provides details about the collection of 333 Dutch and Flemish Old Masters, brought together by Adophe Schloss (b. 1842, Furth, Bavaria; d. 1911, Paris), seized by Nazi agents in the Corrèze region (central France) in 1943, with many still-unretrieved paintings. The new JDCRP website now displays illustrated pages on the history of the collection, detailed entries with provenance data for the 333 paintings included, including earlier inventory references, biographic identification of people and organizations involved, a timeline of key events in the collection history, and facsimiles of related archival documents. Essays cover different aspects of the collection history, and the project methodology.

The ERR was only involved tangentially with the Schloss Collection. Initially – as revealed in a recent study of Bruno Lohse, Göring’s liaison with the ERR French art group in Paris – Lohse was assisting the Gestapo and SD seizure of the collection in the spring of 1943. But the Nazi seizure of the Schloss Collection was not considered an ERR exploit, nor was it destined for any of the ERR art repositories. Rather, 262 paintings were selected for the projected Führer Museum in

Linz, and 49 paintings went to the Louvre already in late August 1943 (and deposited in the château of Sourches). Through Göring’s instigation, more of the collection was exhibited under ERR auspices in the Jeu de Paume in November 1943, before transferred to the Führerbau in Munich with additional masterpieces acquired for Hitler’s Linz Museum. Some 262 of the Schloss treasures were among over 1,000 paintings that were looted and/or disappeared from the Führerbau by 30 April 1945, the day before the U.S. liberated Munich.72 By 1951, only 98 of the original Schloss Collection paintings had been recovered. Sadly, an estimated 164 are still missing, and hence among French ‘most-wanted’ wartime losses.73

2.0.2.7. CLAIMS CONFERENCE–WJRO
LOOTED ART AND CULTURAL PROPERTY INITIATIVE

Website: https://art.claimscon.org/

The Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany (Claims Conference) and the World Jewish Restitution Organization (WJRO) launched a significantly updated website in September 2021 for their joint program promoting “the restitution of Jewish-owned art, Judaica, and other cultural property lost and plundered during the Holocaust.” Subsections cover:

ADVOCACY: https://art.claimscon.org/advocacy/.
Efforts undertaken through governments and Jewish communities “to ensure a just and simple process for claims for looted art and cultural property in each country.”

PROVENANCE RESEARCH: https://art.claimscon.org/work-provenance-research-archives/.
“(research on ownership history of an object from its creation to the present)” with reports on Claims Conference efforts in the field and announcements or reports on specific projects, including:

- the Gurlitt Trove — ERR Archives — Judaica — JDCRP
- Nazi-Looted Art in Poland — Publications and Films
- Project Grant Support: Prague Jewish Museum, Provenance Research Training, among others.

RESOURCES: https://art.claimscon.org/resources/.
For “issues concerning cultural plunder during the Holocaust,” with extensive annotated listings:

- International and National Organizations
- Research Databases (Archival, International Databases, and National country listings)
- Conferences, Declarations, and Resolutions
- Bibliography – Reference List (Books, Articles, Periodicals; with Country Listings)

Of special interest under ‘International’, are new translations of the Russian Federation posted lists of Soviet Postwar ‘Trophy Art.’ Most of the items covered are from German museums, but possibly a few are of French or alternate provenance:

2.0.2.8. CENTRAL REGISTRY OF INFORMATION ON LOOTED CULTURAL PROPERTY, 1933–1945

Address: 76 Gloucester Place; London WIU 6HJ
Contact: info@lootedartcommission.com
Telephone: +44 (0)20 7487 3401

Website: https://www.lootedart.com

Sponsored by the Commission for Looted Art in Europe (CLAE), the website “lootedart.com” should be known to all researchers interested in and concerned about the fate of still-lost cultural treasures from the Second World War throughout Europe and overseas. The website serves as a fundamental information source for CLAE efforts to monitor and implement “international principles for dealing with looted cultural property and its restitution,” as well as to “provide guidance, expertise and assistance to claimants worldwide and identifies, locates and recovers looted cultural property on their behalf.”

The lootedart.com website, in addition to its regular news postings and on-going information regarding Nazi-Era looted cultural property, provides two searchable databases of varying importance and assistance to researchers:

- Information Database: https://www.lootedart.com/search2.php
  As described on the website, contains relevant “information and documentation from forty-nine countries, including laws and policies, reports and publications, archival records and resources, current cases, and relevant websites.”

- Object Database: https://www.lootedart.com/search2.php
  Contains data on “over 25,000 objects of all kinds – paintings, drawings, antiquities, Judaica, etc. looted, missing and/or identified from over fifteen countries.” The database can be searched by “Artist, Author or Maker,” “Object Information,” or “Provenance.”

The website also provides:

- Web Resources: Essential Website Links 2021,”

2.0.2.9. DATABASES OF ART AUCTION CATALOGUES

UNIVERSITATS BIBLIOTHEK HEIDELBERG (Heidelberg University Library)

“German Sales 1901–1945.”

As of November 2021, the database includes almost 11,000 digitized art auction catalogues, 1901–1945 – developed during a long-term project started at Heidelberg University Library, in partnership with the Getty Research Institute, Kunstbibliothek–Staatliche Museen zu Berlin, and the Forschungsstelle “Entartete Kunst” at the University of Hamburg. With focus on German-speaking countries, includes digitized catalogues from auction sales in other countries, including 452 from France, covering 434 auctions at the Hôtel Drouot in Paris, including some during German occupation.

Publication of the volume to accompany the website is scheduled for January 2022:

According to the publisher’s announcement, “In addition to the online research database (above), this book offers a thematic contextualization of the sources, an overview of the relevant archives and holdings as well as suggestions for further research.”

2.0.2.10.1. Wolff Metternich Papers and Kunstschutz Documentation

Franziskus Graf Wolff Metternich (1893–1978) is important in the context of the fate of cultural property during the Second World War for his role as head (Leiter) of the Military Kunstschutz (Art Protection Agency) under the Army High Command (Oberkommando des Heeres, OKH). His role in France during the early years of occupation (1940–1942) coincided with the establishment of the ERR, starting with library seizures in Paris, and then art seizures as encouraged by Reichsmarschall Hermann Göring. Wolff Metternich’s policies and respect for French cultural assets often ran counter to ERR activities. The archive website, noting his role as Provincial Curator for the Rhine Province (1928–1950), identifies him as “the Count who protected the Mona Lisa from Göring.”74 cultural property during the war. The Database references many of these documents, along with related documents from other archives.75

In connection with opening of Wolff Metternich’s personal papers in Brauweiler, under DZK grants organized through the LVR-Kulturzentrum Brauweiler, a team of historians have inventoried related collected Kunstschutz documents from German, French, Belgian, and British archives, released in an online database. During those early years the Kunstschutz was frequently in contact with the ERR, and hence a number of ERR documents are referenced or described.

Some of the project’s findings were presented at a September 2019 conference in Brauweiler Abbey; the impressive volume with expanded proceedings was published in 2021.

Initial essays introduce aspects of the online inventory and database in their archival context, while most of the collection deals within broader perspectives with specific examples of cultural preservation during the Second World War in the face of NS-cultural seizure (albeit German preservation policy). Numerous essays reveal details of policies and specific activities of the NS-Military Kunstschutz during the war, other presentations are in a broader historical context. One major complex focuses on France, with Wolff Metternich’s role in face of NS cultural plunder (including the ERR), with examples in archival and library spheres. Four articles in another section reveal Kunstschutz activities elsewhere in occupied Europe – Italy, Greece (with archeological activities), and the Eastern Front (with the example of Ernsto Graf zu Solms-Laubach and the Amber Chamber), and an analysis of the Kunstschutz vs the SS-Ahnenerbe. Six articles in another section focus on the Rhineland, with archival and library examples, as well as Schloss Homburg with Beethoven pianos evacuated from Bonn. Concluding discussions turn to more general issues of cultural preservation in the face of war.

Other volumes in the same series are listed below, expanding coverage in the conference volume, given their importance in the broader context of NS cultural plunder and retrieval.

Established and funded by the German Federal Government and the Länder (states or provinces), the German Lost Art Foundation Deutsches Zentrum Kulturgutverluste, DZK), founded on 1 January 2015, took over what was earlier known as the Koordinierungsstelle für Kulturgutverluste (Coordination Office for Lost Cultural Assets), headquartered in Magdeburg, which served as Germany’s central office for documentation on displaced cultural property from the NS Era.

The website and its databases contain a wide range of information relevant for research – and especially provenance research – on NS-seized cultural objects, their postwar fate and restitution. The website also displays online (with free PDF) its Provenance Research Manual (2019) in German with a working English translation:

The “Lost Art Internet Database” provides an international register of lost art and other cultural objects displaced predominantly during the NS Era, many seized by the ERR. The Koordinierungsstelle launched the database in 2000.

PROVEANA RESEARCH DATABASE

Since 2020, the Foundation is expanding publicly available data with this new research database, presenting reports with results and findings from provenance research projects funded by the German Lost Art Foundation (DZK) and its predecessor institutions starting in 2008.

MODULE “PROVENANCE RESEARCH,” at: https://www.lostart.de/Webs/EN/Provenienz/Index.html.

Provides helpful direct links to many international databases and research resources for provenance research on both ‘Nazi-looted art’ and ‘Trophy art’, the latter covering war-related seizures and/or relocation of cultural assets. Covered are sources of documentation on the objects themselves; documents and information on legal and political aspects; and literature on the subject

Looted Cultural Assets (LCA) – N-S-Raubgut Provenienzdatenbank
[Provenance Database of N-S-Looted Books] (and Victimized Owners)
Website: https://www.lootedculturalassets.de/index.html.

The Looted Cultural Assets Provenance Database (LCA), established in 2016, is a joint project of a group of German libraries that are searching for Nazi-looted cultural property in an effort to return NS-looted books and other library materials to legitimate owners or heirs.

During the last decade, many other German libraries have also been searching for NS library loot among their holdings. See the list of 16 examples of libraries with links to reports about their NS-looted book holdings in the German chapter (Section 3.0.2.4.2.). That list is included in the 2021 updated chapter to encourage more library coordination efforts in consolidating listings of potential NS-victimized owners and book markings, especially for significant findings, to assist identification and potential restitution of still-displaced books to institutional or individual libraries.
2.0.3. SELECTED BACKGROUND LITERATURE (PUBLISHED)

2.0.3.1. GENERAL RESEARCH AND ARCHIVAL GUIDES

Items preceded by an asterisk (*) are available digitally online.

Surveys archival sources with helpful details about major holdings, showing those accessible in the early 1990s, although now outdated by many newly available sources.

With Claims Conference “Introduction” and links to country segments: https://art.claimscon.org/work-provenance-research-archives/judaica/descriptive-catalogue-of-looted-judaica/

Based on information from existing published and unpublished literature and archives, as well as information obtained from experts in various countries. As of November 2021, the text, and particularly many of the website links, urgently need updating.

French coverage (pp. 300–303) provides details on prewar catalogues of several looted institutional collections.

A helpful background reference work. Part 1 surveys the prewar organization of Jewish museums in Europe, NS looting agencies (the RSHA and the ERR), and wartime looting of Jewish museum collections and ceremonial Judaica. Part 2 identifies and describes different types of Judaica ceremonial objects. Part 3 covers archival sources and various types of documentation potentially helpful for identification and retrieval. Part 4 covers “General Resources” including Judaica and other online databases. Appendices provide specific examples, followed by an extensive bibliography, including coverage of Jewish museums and exhibition catalogues, as well as relevant reference works and literature.

A brief and highly selective survey of limited archives; serves to locate Jewish museums, but with only minimal coverage of holdings. Now supplanted by the EHRI Portal above (see Section 2.0.2.4.).

A basic guide to research in major groups of records held in French repositories, unfortunately now outdated in terms of the location and access for many of the fonds described. Still provides a good starting point for archival context and administrative histories with explanations of the complicated interrelationship of various record groups in terms of the function of the producing agency. Researchers should be aware, that most of the collections described have been moved and reprocessed in different repositories. The second part covers sources for research on specific subjects. Most relevant to the ERR is the coverage of art looting and Möbel-Aktion plunder of Jewish lodgings.

As a result of the 2008 French Archival Law, the introductory section on access to materials from the Second World War and postwar restitution, while of historic interest, is now obsolete given the opening of AMAE-La Courneuve and AN-Pierrefitte, the extensive reprocessing of related materials, and the expanding availability of online finding aids for key collections.

A vital introductory compendium prepared by multiple authors, with a helpful survey of the historical and international post-Soviet research context and methodological guidelines. Includes discussion of recent restitution issues and procedures as well as the German networking and educational framework.
2.0.3.2. SELECTED BACKGROUND LITERATURE

Items preceded by an asterisk () are available digitally online.*

A detailed study of Rosenberg’s intellectual background and activities as Commissioner of the Führer for the Supervision of the Entire Intellectual and Ideological Schooling and Training of the NSDAP (DBFU), with bibliography.

(*) Initial doctoral dissertation (Université d’Angers, 2011):

An impressive tour-de-force regarding art retrieval and restitution issues in both the French political context and an international perspective since the end of the Second World War. Based on extensive research in newly opened sources, as well as countless interviews and press accounts, the author presents a detailed analysis and exposé of many of the previously repressed scandals involved with the art retrieved by the Commission for the Recovery of Art (CRA) and Office for Private Property and Interests (OBIP). The author, now a Senator, is highly critical of the French Government failure to deal adequately with tracking down and restituting art objects retrieved from abroad, and ‘red flag’ paintings purchased postwar by French museums. Most research was completed before the CRA (209SUP) records were open, but the author used many of the OBIP files then in Nantes now held in La Courneuve.

An intriguing – if somewhat journalistic – account focused on Nazi art looting in France, full of little-known details of cultural seizures by various German agencies, including the ERR. Provides many examples of the wartime migration of looted art, with important commentary on the art market and the dispersal of cultural loot.

Provides French translations of a sample group of 56 selected ERR documents held by the CDJC. These relate most specifically to the plunder of French Jewish-owned art collections, including the retrospective report of ERR art plunder by Robert Scholz (15 July 1944). Documents on looted libraries include the April 1943 report by Johann Pohl on the IEJ library [= IMT, 171-PS* (US-383, RF-1324)], confirming the large receipts seized by the ERR. France.

An incisive, well-researched, and well-written study of the plunder, wartime fate, and restitution of French archives in a broad intellectual context. Considerably expanded from the author’s 2003 article. The 2013 edition includes an updated list of the French archives returned from Moscow and an extensive bibliography of related literature.

Well illustrates the “Aryanization” process in France with background information on French banking families, such as David-Weill, Louis Dreyfus, and the Rothschilds, whose art collections were plundered by the ERR. With good coverage of sources then available.

While focused on the internment camps for Jews in the Paris region, has good introductory chapters on the Möbel-Aktion with considerable coverage of sources on ERR plunder and postwar restitution.

A revealing, investigatory journalistic narrative about plunder of art in France, the wartime fate of the plundered art, and still unresolved fate of displaced art and restitution issues. Chapters are devoted to seizure of major collections, such as the Rothschilds, Bernheim-Jeune, David-Weill, Paul Rosenberg, and Schloss. These are followed by sketches of the wartime art market, the role of Switzerland as a haven for art traffic, and a few poignant examples of efforts to locate and retrieve still-lost paintings. A concluding awakening call to the embarrassing 2,000 retrieved art works assigned to the MNR Collection with owners unidentified.

With more than 38,000 Parisian apartments stripped of all furnishings by the Möbel-Aktion, this important study describes the terrible situation for Holocaust survivors returning to Paris at the war’s end, stripped of citizenship, only to find their lodgings empty. Analyzes Provisional French Government efforts to organize a Restitution Service, and to assist returning Jewish survivors to rebuild their lives amidst postwar French society and while coping with the damages incurred during occupation (see AN-Pierrefitte, Section 2.2.2. Sous-Série AJ 38).

Presents summary reports about wartime plunder, sales, and the fate of French public and private art collections during the war and restitution operations thereafter. Comments on the controversial 2,000 plus unclaimed paintings turned over to French museums as the MNR.

A collection of articles from a ‘Study Day’ organized by the Service historique de la Défense, 8 November 2016, devoted to the twice-seized French archives returned from Moscow, starting with an overview about the difficult and lengthy negotiations with Russia on the part of the French Foreign Ministry. Coverage extends to various state records, including police and military, Masonic archives, labor (CTG) records, and examples of private papers, including Léon Blum and Cécile Brunschvieg.

A French-language transcript of the original catalogue held by AMAE-La Courneuve, 209 SUP/585/R43, with lengthy introduction and other analyses. Includes images from the Göring Collection for many of the 1,376 entries. Lack of indexes impede reference use.

An important history and analysis of postwar and post-Holocaust ‘repatriation,’ restitution, and ‘redistribution’ of wartime looted Jewish books.

Traces operation of the Möbel-Aktion in Paris and reproduces with considerable commentary an album of original M-Aktion photographs (found in Paris after the war) that surfaced in MCCP. The album is now located among the records of the Trust Administration for Cultural Assets (Treuhandverwaltung für Kulturgut, TVK), in the Bundesarchiv Koblenz, B 323/311 (see Section 3.1.1.3.3.). Online images from original album: https://www.bild.bundesarchiv.de (search: B 323 Bild-311).

In the initial half of the book Grimsted devotes separate chapters to the major German agencies responsible for archival plunder. In the second half, participating archivists from France, Belgium, the Netherlands, and Luxembourg, as well as The Rothschild Archive in London, describe the long negotiations for archival restitution. Each country chapter includes English translations of the legal agreements and lists all the record groups returned to each country with their present locations.

A brief summary of cultural seizures and losses in France as a result of Nazi occupation, and efforts at retrieval and restitution. The author was in charge of the relevant French Foreign Ministry records long closed to the public before 2009.

Online at: https://www.diplomatie.gouv.fr/sites/archives_diplo/schloss/sommaire.html#spoliation.

In an introduction to the albums of photographs, the author provides a brief background sketch of the ERR and its library plunder, and a capsule survey of the Offenbach depository. The most complete copies of those photograph albums are now held in the U.S. National Archives in College Park, MD, and displayed online along with OAD records at Fold3.com.

An essential collection of short scholarly articles “reflecting the current state of research” (p. xix), focusing on provenance of the Gurlitt Collection by leading specialists – most in German with English abstracts. Note the opening article by Andrea Baressel-Brand, “Provenienzrecherche Gurlitt: Überblick, Methoden und Erbhnisse” (pp. 1–18). Several reports cover specific paintings, others discuss general issues raised by discovery and research on the collection, including Gurlitt’s acquisitions. Of particular relevance to French research, see the articles by Johannes Gramlich and Vanessa von Kolpinski noted separately herein.

German edn (original): Der Central Collecting Point in München. Kunstschutz, Restitution, Neubeginn. Munich/Berlin: Deutscher Kunstverlag, 2015; = Veröffentlichungen des Zentralinstituts für Kunstgeschichte in München, no. 34.

An authoritative, semi-popular, and very well-illustrated account of the organization, operations, and achievements of the MCCP. Includes brief summaries of major restitution to individual countries throughout Europe with added names of country representatives and examples of major works of art recovered and returned, followed by major domestic returns within Germany. Includes a survey of subsequent German TVK efforts to continue the restitution. Provides limited citation of archival sources and an extensive bibliography.

An initial chapter provides a helpful account of the plunder of art during the German occupation especially by the ERR and the M-Aktion/ Western Office (Dienststelle Westen) of the Reich Ministry for the Occupied Eastern Territories. A subsequent chapter surveys postwar restitution under the Commission for the Recovery of Art (CRA), 1944–1949, with explanation of the mechanism for restitution from Germany and compensation under West Germany’s Federal Compensation Law (Bundesrückerstattungsgesetz, BRüG). Specific attention is devoted to the 2,000 unrestituted works of art consigned by the Commissions on Choice (Commissions de choix), 1949–1953, to the MNR. Describes research resources, bibliography, and appended French documents on restitution and the fate of works of art not identified as to owners.

The introduction (in English and French) presents a helpful account of the plunder and dispersal of art during the Second World War, with emphasis on ERR activities in France.

A revealing journalistic account, with scattered fresh Russian archival documentation.

English version: https://clinton.presidentiallibraries.us/items/show/29352.

Summarizes the findings of the Mattéoli Commission.

A well-documented and highly readable account of cultural plunder during the NS regime and the efforts of the Western Allies to retrieve and return the loot.

Analyzes Nazi/ERR art looting throughout Europe, especially in the West, with coverage of the ERR competition with other German agencies and Rosenberg’s alliance with Göring.

A well-researched study of Bruno Lohse (1911–2007), focused on his role as Göring’s liaison with the ERR’s art operations in occupied Paris, his postwar acquittal and activities in a revived network of former NS-era art dealers. Augmented by the author’s personal interviews with Lohse and others in his circle. With revealing analysis, but often remaining questions about the fate of looted paintings.

The most extensive biography of Alfred Rosenberg to date, with a helpful bibliography of primary and secondary literature, including most of Rosenberg’s own publications.

Based on the author’s doctoral dissertation. Several film accounts and interviews are available on YouTube, including one in the series “Les voix de l’histoire.” A press release and several reviews are available online, particularly on the occasion of the related 2019 exhibition at the Mémorial de la Shoah in Paris.

A well-annotated edition of the reports Rose Valland submitted to French Museum director Jacques Jaujard from the original in the Archives of the National Museums (AMN). Earlier held in the Louvre, the original MSS are now held in AN-Pierrefitte (Versement 20144792/276: “Recueil des rapports de Rose Valland au directeur des Musées nationaux, 1941–1944.”).

Poste served as a U.S. Army MFA&A officer in Germany.
The first comprehensive study of libraries during the German occupation brings together extensive data from a wealth of sources, with good survey chapters on library developments and collaboration in France. Provides examples of prominent French individuals and institutions whose libraries were confiscated, drawn from recently available French postwar claims and restitution files. Based primarily on documentation in France, and hence weaker on explanation of seizures by the ERR and M-Aktion versus SD and Gestapo, and other German agencies. An appendix renders the listings from the March and April 1941 ERR seizure lists. Poulain’s supplemental expanded database of individual and institutional library seizure victims can be accessed online at the above websites. See also Poulain’s survey, “Les spoliations des bibliothèques privées par les nazis en France: des milliers de personnes victimes d’un vol de masse.” In Saisies, spoliations et logiques de restitution. Selected edited papers from the March 2017 international conference in Paris, with focus on those relating to France. The original presentations are available on the Enssib website.

A Swedish journalist’s highly readable account that fills an important gap in popular literature on European-wide Nazi library looting. Based on a wide variety of secondary sources and interviews in numerous countries with prominent librarians who have recently been dealing with lost or displaced books. In France Rydell focuses on the victimized Alliance Israélite Universelle as an example of the most important Jewish collection seized and the Turgenev Russian Library as the most important Russian émigré collection outside of the Soviet Union. His broad sweep from Berlin to Vilnius and Thessalonica, Prague, and Amsterdam, puts the French book seizures in a pan-European context. His symbolic emphasis on the emotional importance of individual returns to heirs should be heard by many who might want to call a halt to discovery and restitution efforts 70 years after their tragic loss.

An important summary of efforts in book restitution and reflection on its importance in connection with the Holocaust.

A reconstruction of the Dresden catalogue for the paintings chosen for the Linz museum with reproduction of available images (with MCCP numbers added). Images used are primarily from BArch. *B 323/45–88.

A well-informed, popularized account of the wartime French art scene. Well-researched chapters (with minimal footnotes) recount the activities of the ERR and the Jeu de Paume processing operation. Subsequent chapters depict Göring-directed purchases and sale operations, including exchanges, and provide details about some of the major players. While the serious researcher might appreciate more direct citation of sources, the author nonetheless provides a distinct flavor of developments.

A published lecture in Groningen by the MCCP director of the with appended documents and illustrative photographs. See the extensive related bibliography (pp. 207–19) and the selected plates with images of paintings chosen for the museum (pp. 223–417).

A rich collection of conference proceedings with articles on archival and library plunder and restitution throughout Europe. It includes important articles by international specialists on the seizure and restitution (or non-restitution) of French books and archives, with reports on the French archives restituted from Moscow.

A helpful report focusing specifically on books turned over to the ERR by the M-Aktion, with emphasis on France and the Netherlands. Now supplemented for France with additional research by Martine Poulain.

Valland’s extraordinary and extremely well-informed first-hand account of the French art scene during the war with an emphasis on the ERR art processing in the Jeu de Paume, where the author represented (albeit ‘spy’) of the Museums of France. Most recently augmented with an introduction by Isabelle Le Masne de Chermont and Didier Schulmann, with extensive bibliography. See an additional compilation of Valland’s wartime notes and observations in a postwar commemorative volume held by the AMN (see Section 2.2.12.1.) and additional materials (including photographs used in the book) and her postwar restitution files in AMAE-La Courneuve (see Section 2.1.1.).

Weinreich, Max. Hitler’s Professors: The Part of Scholarship in Germany’s Crimes Against the Jewish People. New Haven 1999.

Recounts the background and operation of the Möbel-Aktion in France for the removal of all furnishings from the residences of Jews who had fled or been deported. The authors discuss removal operations, shipments, and complicated issues of restitution or compensation of affected families after the war. Also includes a section on the removal and return of pianos and other musical instruments, which involved the ERR Special Staff Music (Sonderstab Musik). As apparent in this study, many remaining archival sources for individual claims and restitution transfers are now located in Israel and Berlin (personal claims files), while some related organizational materials are found in the records of the General Commissariat for Jewish Questions (CGQJ – AJ/38) in the AN-Pierrefitte.

An impressive catalogue raisonné that includes provenance details about the individual items in the Göring Collection (many more than previously known) and quality color illustrations, compiled by the curator of the U.S. National Gallery of Art.
2.0.3.3. INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS (IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER)

Bilingual proceedings of the conference at the Foreign Literature Library (VGBIL), Moscow, 10–11 April 2000, with extensive international and Russian participation, focused on wartime displaced cultural treasures. Unfortunately, the proceedings, published bi-lingually, are no longer online.

Proceedings of the May 2005 Hannover Symposium include many contributions on library seizures, dispersal, and restitution issues from the N-S regime and the Second World War.

Proceedings from the second conference organized by the Czech Documentation Centre, 22–24 November 2005, with important contributions on cultural losses and restitution issues.

Proceedings of the third Hannover Symposium include many contributions on library seizures, dispersal, and restitution issues from the N-S regime.

Several additional articles from the colloquium follow in the same issue, including the Piketty article below.

Fellmann’s extensive monograph on the history of the illustrious Palais de Tokyo in Paris that had housed the Musée National d’Art Moderne before German invasion (from his doctoral dissertation at the University of Hamburg) devotes a small but revealing section to wartime German occupation. The Palais de Tokyo then served as one of the principal storage sites for pianos, and quite possibly other musical instruments, confiscated by the Möbel-Aktion from abandoned Jewish lodgings. Earlier, his related unpublished presentations include one at a

A leading AN archivist describes Spring 1945 letters to the French Restitution Service (in AN-Pierrefitte AJ/38/cartons 5941–5960, among others; see Section 2.2.2.), revealing details about the fate of pianos seized during German occupation. The letters by survivors whose apartments had been emptied during Occupation (presumably by the Möbel-Aktion) were anxious to retrieve their pianos. Some of the 3,100 pianos covered had been transported to Germany, but others were abandoned in Paris. The article notes sample letters and related sources documents in the same fonds regarding the restitution process.

This fascinating and well-researched account details the confiscation of 175,000 bells from various countries throughout Europe by the Reich Office for Metals; 150,000 of those were melted down for bronze and tin. Present statistics for repatriation of those that survived the war. In France — because of Vichy protests — only 1,962 bells from Alsace and Lorraine were confiscated, and only 37 were repatriated intact after the war.

In her contribution, Carla Shapreau relates the wartime confiscation of the Guillaume de Machaut Manuscript, one of 432 objects Paris art dealer George Wildenstein had deposited in his Paris safe at the Banque de France, before he fled to New York. The entire lot was confiscated by the Devisenschutzkommando. The codex of collected Machaut works, originally from the collection of the Duc de Berry (1340–1416), was turned over to the ERR Sonderstab Music and sent to Germany, probably to Leipzig. In ca. 1943, it was evacuated to the Bavarian town of Raitenhaslach, where the Sonderstab used a brewery to store its hoard of musical instruments, sheet music, books, phonograph records, and other musicalia. Shapreau describes the items found and their transfer to MCCP, with illustrations of related documents.

A brief account of confiscation of musical instruments in various countries with emphasis on Stradavarius violins.

Discusses the surviving records of a major French violin workshop, as indicative of commerce in violins during the Nazi period and a guide to provenance, attribution, and valuation of instruments purchased, sold, or confiscated during the Nazi Era.

Vries, Willem de. Sonderstab Musik: Music Confiscations by the Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg under the Nazi Occupation of Western Europe. Amsterdam: Amsterdam University Press, 1996.

While primarily focused on ERR music operations and the Sonderstab Musik, the author brings together considerable available documentation on the ERR and its general organization and activities, although prepared before the author had consulted the additional ERR files in Kyiv (TsDAVO). Case studies on the plunder of French collections include Wanda Landowska, the Polish harpsichordist resident in France.

Regrettably, the French edition, twenty years after initial publication, was not thoroughly updated with research in the many newly available French and other sources.

2.0.3.5. Exhibition Catalogues

Presents many of the documents exhibited with commentary, thus providing a visual introduction with pertinent examples to developments against the Jews of France during the German occupation.

Presentations with illustrations of the 12 chronological or subject sequences within the political and social context of the decade covered by the exhibition, with over 300 works of art by 80 artists working in France during the war. A major final section consists of related short article entries in what the French call an ‘abécédaire’ and an extensive bibliography.

See the introductory article by Alain Prévet and Thierry Bajou, “La récente identification de tableaux spoliés à l’artiste Fédor Löwenstein,” pp. 33–35, which presents an example of works of art marked for destruction in the Salle de Martyrs in the Jeu de Paume that were miraculously saved and recently identified.

Online version at (only French/English introduction): http://www2.culture.gouv.fr/documentation/mnr/AH/MnR-apercu-hist.htm.

A bilingual catalogue of an exhibition at the Israel Museum, Jerusalem (IMJ) (18 Feb.–3 June 2008) and the Musée d’art et d’histoire du Judaïsme, Paris (24 June–28 Sept. 2008). Presents 53 high-profile examples from the MNR collection of paintings returned to France, for which the owners or heirs were not identified; some of them were seized and processed by the ERR, as their ERR codes indicate. Quality, colored illustrations accompany professional descriptions and provenance notes. In a few cases, provenance and introductory notes have been updated since publication of the aforementioned 2004 catalogue of MNR paintings. All of the paintings exhibited are now displayed by subject categories, with introductory segments and additional explanation about the exhibition on the website of the IMJ (see Israel chapter, Section 6.4.2.). The introduction to the published catalogue (in English and French) presents a helpful account of the plunder and dispersal of art during the Second World War, with an emphasis on ERR activities in France.

Online at: http://www2.culture.gouv.fr/documentation/mnr/pres.htm as described above.

The printed version is a well-researched catalogue with black and white illustrations and detailed explanatory notes about the 983 MNR early paintings through the nineteenth century... confined to the Louvre and the Musée d’Orsay. The catalogue is arranged alphabetically by artist within eight designated country schools and a final miscellaneous group. Provenance summaries include the wartime migration of the paintings with reference to available catalogue numbers for the Göring and Linz collections, for example, as well as registration numbers from the Munich Central Collecting Point (MCCP) and Baden-Baden when available. The introduction elucidates many important sources and explains many of the research difficulties encountered in France and abroad. By contrast, the most recent online POP database presents colored images of all but 78 of the total 2,210 MNRs, with sculpture and decorative arts, as well as paintings.

The first complete list of all of the MNRs in French national museums issued as a press release, which included details for each of the ca. 2,000 works of art included, on the basis of the MNR database publicly accessible for the first time in November 1996. Issued in connection with the public exhibition of many of the works of art in the Louvre, Sèvres, the Musée d’Orsay, and Versailles, and 20 provincial museums. A separate catalogue was issued by the Centre Pompidou. See the more complete coverage in the 2004 catalogue on the Rose Valland website (Section 2.0.2.2.).

Online version: https://www.centrepompidou.fr/media/document/16/20/162019290558fd1ac7d3a4cabb0dbf2/normal.pdf.

A catalogue prepared for the 1997 exhibition of 39 works of art (24 paintings, 1 tapestry, 20 drawings, and 4 sculptures) of the MNR collection of unidentified provenance deposited with the Musée national d’art moderne. Black and white images and provenance details (to the extent known) are provided for each item, including verso inscriptions, citations regarding wartime migration and postwar retrieval, with bibliography and exhibition history. Didier Schulmann’s introduction, “Histoire face aux œuvres,” briefly sketches the history of wartime art plunder in France and the postwar restitution difficulties that resulted in these works of art being assigned to the MNR collection, where most of them still await identity of their owner or heirs and appropriate claim. The online version lacks images.

A catalogue prepared for the 1994 exhibition of 21 works of art (paintings and drawings) among 28 that surfaced in Magdeburg in 1974, but had to await German Reunification for repatriation from Germany.

Lists 283 objects of art of different types exhibited. Does not include names of owners. The first edition covers only objects from national collections.

The Diplomatic Archives of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (AMAE; since May 2017, officially the Ministry for Europe and Foreign Affairs) – in its Centre for Diplomatic Archives in La Courneuve – now holds many of the most important French diplomatic archives going back to early centuries. Since 2009, those files, long housed in the Foreign Ministry complex at the Quai d’Orsay, were transferred to the new contemporary archival complex in La Courneuve (a short distance on the RER northeast of Paris).

Holdings in the second AMAE Centre for Diplomatic Archives in Nantes – comprising records of French MAE diplomatic services abroad, including embassies, consulates, and French cultural centers, as well as French representation in international organizations and commissions – are not covered here. Nor is there any attempt below to cover the many other complexes of Foreign Ministry diplomatic records now held in La Courneuve.

In the context and focus of this Guide, the La Courneuve Diplomatic Archival Centre holds the most important and most extensive French documentation on the wartime ERR plunder and displacement of French-owned cultural property, especially art, under German occupation and the Vichy Regime during the Second World War, together with the records of the French government agencies most closely involved with the postwar retrieval and restitution of public and private cultural items alienated abroad in the course of the war. Postwar retrieval of the ERR French cultural loot was handled by the main French agencies involved generally in postwar retrieval, processing, and restitution of cultural property. Hence, originals or copies of many ERR documents have been incorporated and intermixed within the records of those French art retrieval agencies, the largest part of which remain in the La Courneuve Centre. These ERR documents thus became essential reference sources for retrieval of ERR looted art, as well as library materials from predominantly private libraries and archives.

It should be noted as well that France was the only continental Western European Allied country occupied by Germany during the war that participated in the postwar occupation of Germany and Austria (with the United Kingdom and the United States), with its cultural Collecting Point in Baden-Baden. Related French government records involved with cultural processing, repatriation, and restitution are now centralized in La Courneuve. Many remaining files within those records covered here also relate to looted cultural property and restitution issues for other countries throughout the European Continent – cultural valuables belonging to government and public institutions, as well as private individuals. France was specifically representing Belgium, the Netherlands, and Luxembourg in many of those postwar operations; hence, these records are also of significant relevance to cultural retrieval and restitution for these European neighbors.

Four major archival complexes related to Cultural Retrieval in La Courneuve:

1. 209SUP (Les archives de la “récupération artistique,” Sections 2.1.1. and 2.1.1.7.)
   First is a complex of records intermixed from various agencies, now usually referred to in French as the Archives de la récupération artistique (Records of Art Retrieval). The main part of this complex, comprising 1148 cartons (coded 209SUP) is a large collection of records from postwar French government cultural retrieval agencies held before 2009 at the Quai d’Orsay. Included are the records of the Commission for Art Retrieval (Commission de récupération artistique, CRA, 1944–1949) and related agencies involved with post-Second World War research, retrieval, repatriation, processing of postwar claims, and restitution of cultural property. In addition to the CRA, at least four other agencies have documentation intermixed in this complex of records:

   - Office des biens et intérêts privés, OBIP [Office of Private Property and Interests]
   - Bureau central des restitutions, BCR [Central Restitution Office, Baden-Baden]
   - Service de remise en place des œuvres d’art, SRPOA [Restitution Service for Works of Art]
   - Bureau d’investigation artistique, BIA [Office for Art Investigation]

   The initial section (Section 2.1.1.1.) comprises French copies of the ERR inventories for the art collections processed in the Jeu de Paume, and a few of the shipping lists to ERR art repositories (originals of both are now online in the Bundesarchiv in Koblenz, as explained below).

   This intermixed complex of records covers the retrieval, repatriation, and restitution to French owners (or heirs) of art, archives, library materials, and other cultural property that was confiscated, looted, ‘sold,’ or otherwise disappeared from private and state entities and individuals – whether ‘displaced’ domestically or alienated abroad – during the National Socialist Regime, and especially under German occupation in France during the Second World War. Many wartime files and scattered documents created by, or related to, Nazi plundering agencies – such as the Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg (ERR) – that seized, ‘purchased,’ or otherwise acquired cultural property in occupied France and other occupied European countries – are incorporated in these records (see Section 2.1.1. below for a more detailed description of the 209SUP collection).
Formerly coded ‘RA’ and held at the Quai d’Orsay, the complex was long presided over by the legendary French curator, Rose Valland, and was often colloquially referred to as ‘Fonds RV.’ These materials were not publicly available at the Quai d’Orsay before their 2009 transfer to La Courneuve. By 2015, initial reprocessing was completed, with most files available for public access either digitally or in original paper copies (as described in the June 2017 edition of this chapter). Recent 2019 and 2020 descriptive efforts referenced here (now on the MAE website) provide updated, more detailed inventories of six series of postwar files within this collection.

In 2016, this large first complex was augmented by a small collection of related documents accessioned from the Archives of the French National Museums (AMN). While most AMN files with related documentation were transferred from the Louvre to the Archives nationales (AN-Pierrefitte) in 2015, La Courneuve accessioned 16 cartons with 67 ‘articles’ in February 2016 (coded 20160007AC/1–67; see Section 2.1.1.7.). As apparent from the descriptions below, they contain additional documentation relating to the ERR art-processing activities during wartime German occupation in the Jeu de Paume, as well as some postwar documents with CRA correspondence relating to victims of wartime looting and restitution.

2. OBIP (Office des biens et intérêts privés – Section 2.1.2.)
Second (Section 2.1.2., coded BIP, in several subseries) are the extensive records of the Office of Private Property and Interests (Office des biens et intérêts privés, OBIP), transferred in 2010 from the MAE Centre for Diplomatic Archives in Nantes (Centre des archives diplomatiques de Nantes, CADN). As of early 2021, not all of the relevant OBIP records have been thoroughly processed and optimally described for research availability. Digital finding aids are found only in the on-site archival administrative and reference system (MNESYS).

3. ZFO (Zone française d’occupation – Section 2.1.3.)
Third (Section 2.1.3., in several series), the MAE archive in La Courneuve now also holds the records of French occupation authorities in Germany and Austria (ZFO), earlier housed in the Archives de l’occupation française in Colmar (Haut-Rhin). All of these records have been reprocessed and opened to researchers in La Courneuve (see Section 2.1.3.), although improved reference access is still pending in some series, and none of the paper finding aids are available on the Internet.

Among these ZFO records, some files contain references to inquiries regarding location of claimed cultural property (including ERR loot) from many foreign countries found in the French Occupation Zone in Germany. The coverage below does not cover the French Zone in Austria.

4. Selections from Other French Diplomatic Archives (Section 2.1.4.)
Fourth (Section 2.1.4.), many other series of wartime and postwar records in the French Diplomatic Archives – some examples mentioned and described briefly below – may also have significant bearing on wartime cultural seizures and displacements, especially their postwar retrieval. Given that French cultural property ended up in various foreign countries, documents related to restitution issues may be found in numerous diplomatic records. Among potential 76 The term ‘cartons’ (rather than boxes, as often in English) is used here, being closer to French usage in AMAE, which might assist researchers using the archive.

77 The OBIP records, when still in Nantes, were described briefly in the 2011 Survey in Section 2.2.
78 Only a brief outline survey is included below because many of the potentially relevant OBIP series were not fully processed and available to the compiler for examination by 2017.
importance for documentation relating to wartime cultural seizures are records of the French Government-in-Exile in London and Algiers, along with several archival series among the records of the Vichy regime now available in La Courneuve.

Data regarding postwar retrieval and restitution, as well as documents relating to specific cases of French cultural property found abroad, may also be found in selected series from several Central Services of the postwar FRMAE. These include the Directorate of Economic and Financial Affairs (Direction des affaires économiques et financières), the European Directorate (Direction d’Europe), and the Archives Directorate (Direction des archives), among others.

ACCESS IN LA COURNEUVE READING ROOM

Most cartons – with a maximum of six cartons per day – may be ordered directly to the Reading Room through the computerized system (MNESYS). During periods with increased number of readers and reduced staff, the daily maximum has been reduced to four cartons.

Digitized cartons with dossiers and files within them may be viewed on Reading Room computers.

See more details about access to the Art Retrieval records (209SUP) below.

REPRODUCTION SERVICE: Photography, Photocopying at La Courneuve

Photography by individual readers is permitted in the Reading Room without flash and without tripods or other stands. Photocopying documents in the 209SUP collection is prohibited.

Quality reproduction of documents can be ordered through the archive reproduction service (details are available with the Head of the Reading Room).
MNESYS – On-Site Computerized System for Reference Materials (Finding Aids and Databases) and Researcher Document Orders

The overall computerized archival administrative software complex currently used in La Courneuve (MNESYS) provides a digital facility for administrative control of the archival holdings and simultaneously provides a reference system for description of the fonds and series held by the archive. Portions of the system are openly available to researchers on dedicated on-site terminals in both the Inventory Room and the Reading Room. These terminals provide researcher access to public portions of various digital finding aids and reference databases. Simultaneously, MNESYS provides a computerized system for researchers to order documents for study in the Reading Room.

RA Database (from earlier ARBCS Database)

See Section 2.1.1. for notes about the RA Database (and the earlier ARBCS Database from which it was drawn) covering the 209SUP Collection, available to researchers on-site in La Courneuve, providing 12,000 entries with specific coverage, especially of proper names in that collection.

DESCRIPTION OF THE ART RETRIEVAL COLLECTION:
“RÉCUPÉRATION ARTISTIQUE” (209SUP): ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS AND DISCLAIMER

Descriptive work for the CRA Collection (now the 209SUP Collection) began at the Quai d’Orsay in the years before 2009, in connection with the preparation of the 2011 edition of this Guide (then entitled Survey), kindly facilitated by MAE archivist Marie Hamon (the collection was still designated ‘RA,’ or often loosely ‘RV’ with reference to Rose Valland). Following Hamon’s retirement in December 2008, and public opening of the collection with the 2008 French Archival Law, work started on the ERR-related files with Marie Gallup, then in charge of the MAEE Library and Personal Papers. Subsequently, work continued with Anne Liskenne, who took charge of the CRA Collection in preparation for the move to La Courneuve. Once transferred to La Courneuve in 2009, Liskenne supervised reprocessing of what became the 209SUP Collection through mid-2015. Following initial publication of the Survey in 2011, verification continued as additional files became publicly available; Anne Liskenne provided helpful consultations before her transfer to a new AMAE post at the end of 2015. She deserves much appreciation and considerable praise for her steadfast efforts to make these materials publicly accessible. In connection with research and descriptive efforts in La Courneuve, appreciation is also due Ambassador Frédéric Baleine du Laurens, director of the Centre for Diplomatic Archives (2009–2013), and subsequently, Chargé de Mission to the Director, through 2016.

As the updated 2017 French Chapter took shape during the summers of 2015 and 2016, AMAE archivist Marie-Pascale Krumnow was also of much assistance. Since Sébastien Chauffour took charge of the 209SUP Collection in September 2016, he has diligently helped resolve numerous queries, and advised in expanding coverage of the OBIP and ZFO collections. During fall 2016 and spring of 2017, Frederike Mulot ably assisted during preparation of the June 2017 chapter.

Launch of the December 2019 German chapter of this Guide revealed newly online records in BArch Koblenz from postwar retrieval and restitution processing at the OMGUS MFA&A-run Munich and Wiesbaden Central Collection Points (MCCP and WCCP, 1945–1949), subsequently incorporated into the records of the German Trust Administration for Cultural Assets (TVK, Bestand B 323, 1952–1962). The TVK records hence include many U.S. MFA&A records remaining in Germany from the MCCP and WCCP. These contain many original ERR inventories, shipping data, and other reports on wartime cultural seizures and processing of French and Belgian Jewish art collections at the Jeu de Paume; records also cover the M-Aktion and related ERR loot, as well as postwar retrieval, processing, and repatriation of dispersed cultural property. These BArch files now online, are vitally relevant for seized French and Belgian cultural property, and for many French files described in La Courneuve. Accordingly, updating the French and Belgian chapters of the ERR Archival Guide became crucial with appropriate cross-references and links to the TVK documents newly available online, including many most essential ERR documents directly hyperlinked starting with the updated 2019 German chapter (further updated in December 2021).

While reediting this French coverage during 2020–2021, references and new data are also added based on the recent expanded finding aids for La Courneuve holdings by or under direction of AMAE archivist Sébastien Chauffour, to whom the compiler is exceedingly grateful for clarifying various issues, and who promises more updated inventories soon.

Regrettably, the COVID-19 pandemic has prevented on-site verification by the compiler during 2020–2021. Hopefully, archivists and researchers who may consult this text will be kind enough to convey to the compiler any errors and inaccuracies found and suggest improvements.
2.1.1. ARCHIVES DE LA “RÉCUPÉRATION ARTISTIQUE”

[RECORDS OF “ART RETRIEVAL” (FOR Looted CULTURAL PROPERTY)]

(209SUP/CARTONS 1–1148 AND 20160007AC/ARTICLES 1–67)

Earlier AMAE name:
“Collection des fonds des services de la récupération artistique” (earlier coded RA)

This huge collection containing 1,148 archival cartons (boxes), now officially designated with the code 209SUP – combines the surviving records or parts thereof from several different postwar French agencies predominantly involved in the investigation of wartime plunder and postwar retrieval, identification, and restitution of looted cultural property. Those agencies attempted to locate the over 100,000 art objects removed from France, while Rose Valland’s 1951 report (quoted above) suggests that only 61,233 cultural items could be returned or accounted for. The ERR was hardly responsible for all of the wartime looting, although it is often difficult to determine exactly what proportion of that loot should be attributed to the ERR and its associates. Nevertheless, many original and copies of important ERR or ERR-related files are incorporated in these records, and many files relate to the fate and retrieval of ERR loot. (See individual online inventories below for the separate series under ‘Finding Aids.’)

Commission de Récupération Artistique (CRA) [Commission for Art Retrieval]

Of key importance are the records of the Commission for Art Retrieval (CRA), created 24 November 1944 under the Ministry of National Education. The purpose of the CRA was to search for and identify displaced cultural items and assist in their repatriation and restitution to their owners or heirs (ayant droits).\(^80\) The CRA was initially based in the Jeu de Paume Museum and presided over by Albert S. Henraux. The ERR had used the Jeu de Paume during German occupation as a major collection and registration center for plundered works of art from France and Belgium.

Rose Valland. During ERR art processing activity in the Jeu de Paume during occupation, the legendary Louvre curator Rose Valland represented the Museums of France in the Jeu de Paume, clandestinely reporting to Henraux.\(^81\) Later, she became a senior curator in the Louvre and served \(^80\) For the legal basis of the CRA and its administrative functions in relation to other French government agencies in the early stage of its work, see the brief report by Michel Florisone, “La Commission française de récupération artistique,” Mouseion 55–56 (1946), pp. 67–73.

as CRA secretary. As a captain in the French First Army, Valland simultaneously headed French offices for retrieval and repatriation efforts in Germany and Austria. Accordingly, 209SUP also includes most of Rose Valland’s postwar research files and office records resulting from her several functions, including cultural retrieval from the Central Reparations and Restitution Bureau in Baden-Baden (Bureau central des récupération et restitutions de Baden-Baden) at the headquarters of the French Military Occupation Zone Authority, together with the Baden-Baden Central Collecting Point, and the Service for the Retrieval of Works of Art (Service de remise en place des oeuvres d’art, SRPOA) in Berlin. Of importance for ERR loot, these files also include copies and some originals of many vital ERR inventories of art collections the ERR processed in the Jeu de Paume, as well as shipping documents and later inventories of the collections in ERR art repositories, and during postwar retrieval and restitution/repatriation processing.

Also found in this collection are some files from the corresponding office of the agency handling cultural restitution under the French Group (Groupe français) of the Allied Control Commission (Commission alliée de Contrôle) in Berlin. As head of both the Berlin and the Baden-Baden restitution offices, Valland personally oversaw and conducted French art recovery efforts. The Office of Art Investigation (Bureau d’investigation artistique, BIA), as part of French military intelligence, served her offices in both Berlin and Baden-Baden; incoming BIA files are accordingly intermixed with several sections of the 209SUP records.

Sous-commission des livres (SCL) [CRA Sub-Commission for Books]
(see inventories in Sections 2.1.1.3. and 2.1.1.5.)

The 209SUP Collection today also includes a major component of files of the CRA Sub-Commission for Books, presided over by Jenny Delseaux of the Bibliothèque nationale.82 That SCL segment in 209SUP, previously located elsewhere, was added to the CRA collection in 2004.
However, another large and important group of SCL records is held in the Archives Nationales (AN-Pierrefitte), as part of Series F/17 (Ministry of Education) (see Section 2.2.7.). Together, both groups of SCL records document library and manuscript losses and include files with lists of individual and institutional victims; notes on the restitution and distribution of looted books found in France and/or repatriated; and inventories or shipping lists for convoys with books received from abroad.83

Following the formal disbandment of the CRA (24 November 1949), and effectively by the end of 1949, many of its functions were continued by OBIP, its post-1953 successor, SBIP, and other agencies.84 The 209SUP Collection nevertheless contains files resulting from Rose Valland and typescript (Paris, 1976). The MAE 209SUP Collection now holds a reference copy reproduced from a copy held by the Library of International Contemporary Documentation (Bibliothèque de documentation internationale contemporaine), University of Paris IX in Nanterre.

documentation for books returned to individuals and institutions, based on these sources in note 7, especially at:
84 Decree no. 49-1344 of 30 Sept. 1949 regarding the termination of the CRA specified OBIP as a successor organization and gave provisions for the disposal of cultural property not yet restituted. That decree also specified her associates continued work in retrieval and restitution processing.

The end of Allied Occupation authorities in Germany officially by the end of 1949 also brought the official closing down of the French Collecting Point handling restitution processing in Baden-Baden. However, some French art processing continued there, with subsequent shipments to Paris.
Rose Valland thereafter continued involvement with claims and cultural restitution in the early 1950s in Berlin, where she still worked with SRPOA. She and her assistants continued research efforts to locate still-missing works of art. After her return to France in April 1952, she worked with what was then called the Service for Protection of Works of Art (Service de protection des oeuvres d’art, SPOA) under the Directorate of French Museums (Direction des Musées de France) in the Louvre.

Many CRA and related agency files from Germany (both from Baden-Baden and Berlin) were returned to Paris between June 1952 and March 1954; many of them remained in Valland’s office in the Louvre until her retirement in 1968. Some files remained with her in her home, where she continued restitution research almost until her death in 1980. In 1982, they were turned over to the Musée du château de Bois-Préau (Rueil-Malmaison), before transfer to the Quai d’Orsay in 1992 by the Direction of the French Museums. The CRA records have accordingly suffered from several transfers since their creation.85

Among the other government agencies represented in the 209SUP collection are newly opened files from the Commissions on Choice, the agency responsible for allocations and restitution of works of art and books to their owners. The Secretariat of the Commissions on Choice (Secrétariat des Commissions de Choix) was established in Paris in April 1949 to approve restitution of individual works of art to their legal owners or heirs. When that was not possible in cases where works of art were not identified or claimed, it was the Commissions’ responsibility to sign off on their alternate disposition, either to the state Domaines agency for sale or to be transferred to national museums for registration in the MNR collection. Eight Commission meetings were held between 1949 and 1953.86 While some important Commission files are now available among the 209SUP collection, others are found among the OBIP records from CADN (see for example, Section 2.1.3.5.: 22BIP, especially articles 76 and 84). Other files relating the work of the Commissions and subsequent Domaines sales will be found among the records of the National Museums (AMN) in AN-Pierrefitte.

that the records of the CRA would be held by the Commission for the History of the Occupation and Liberation of France (Commission d’histoire de l’occupation et la libération de la France), and that any secret files would be closed for 50 years (Journal officiel, 2 Oct. 1949). The French text is online at:

Postwar Claim Files – CRA and OBIP (see Section 2.1.1.5.)

N.B. 209SUP: CARTONS *1–73, see below
Section 2.1.1.5.: Postwar Claims Files:
  2.1.1.1. CRA Claims, Cartons *1–73.
  2.1.1.5.2. OBIP Claims, Cartons 591–705; and 726–737.

The CRA processed claims for cultural objects (books as well as art) submitted by French institutions, individuals, families, and businesses whose cultural property was seized during the German occupation. Accordingly, the CRA claims files are of particular importance for tracing the fate of looted cultural property. However, the principal French claims office was traditionally the Office of Private Property and Interests (Office des biens et intérêts privés, OBIP), a French Government agency established December 1919 that also operated under the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; in 1953, OBIP was reorganized as the Service for Private Property and Interests (Service des biens et intérêts privés, SBIP). As such, claimants for cultural property usually first filed claims with OBIP, but in many cases, OBIP claims for cultural property (or copies thereof) were forwarded to CRA. This was especially true for claims for works of art, libraries, and other valuable cultural property to be possibly retrieved from abroad.

The 209SUP collection in AMAE-La Courneuve now maintains a separate series of claims files of OBIP provenance, namely extensive claims for art and library losses, including many submitted by individual and private institutional claimants, their attorneys, or other representatives. Both OBIP and CRA claims files involving cultural property are now open for public research in La Courneuve, with their original OBIP and CRA claim numbers as part of the 209SUP collection. Cartons 1–73 contain CRA claims, while Cartons 591–705, and 726–737 for OBIP claims.

N.B. More detailed coverage of the two series of French claims files (CRA and OBIP) with the 209SUP collection, are grouped together in Section 2.1.1.5. Additional OBIP claims, especially for non-cultural property, may be found in the OBIP records from Nantes (see Section 2.1.3.).

Photographs (see inventory of contents in Section 2.1.1.6.)

All of the photographs that were initially interfiled within folders or files in the 209SUP collection – predominantly from OBIP and CRA claims files – have been removed, placed in photo albums, and recently digitized (as listed below). Many of the lists or inventories within claims files had links to images, or additional lists of images were frequently included, but these lists or captions were not transferred with the photograph prints. Accordingly, correlation of carton numbers for photographs with reference to those lists and captions for the images named in claims for individual ERR Jeu de Paume collections have not all been preserved. Thus, the task of fully identifying the photographs will still require considerable archival efforts. Most of the images –

87 Copies of many French claims are also available at the National Archives in College Park (NACP), because copies were forwarded to U.S. restitution authorities. These are conveniently listed with individual names in the AAM Guide to Provenance Research, pp. 80–86. The French claim numbers indicated are still valid, but the collection is now available to researchers only on microfilm, NARA Microfilm Publications M 1947 and online at https://www.fold3.com/. See the descriptive listing at https://www.archives.gov/research/holocaust/art/key-series-descriptions/omgus-cultural-property-claims.html, with more details in the U.S. chapter (see Section 10.1.5.3.4.).
many still unidentified, and some identified only as to the named collection from which they were drawn – are now available for consultation in digital form in the main Reading Room at La Courneuve.

Additional references to appropriate carton numbers for additional images elsewhere for specific named collections have been added to the chart of French art collection seizure victims processed in the Jeu de Paume in Appendix 1.88

AMN Collection – 20160007AC (Section 2.1.1.7.)

Many related wartime files with Valland documentation in the extensive Archives of the National Museums (AMN) were transferred in 2015 to the National Archives and now held in the AN-Pierrefitte (see Section 2.2.12.). One small group of sixteen cartons (with 67 ‘articles’) from the AMN archives – containing files closely related to the ERR art seizures and processing in the Jeu de Paume and CRA postwar receipts of ERR loot was accessioned by La Courneuve (February 2016) – is now held in the separate series 20160007AC (see below Section 2.1.1.7.).

ERR-Related Components

In connection with their delegated function to retrieve and to restitute plundered works of art (including books and archives) to their rightful owners, the aforementioned postwar French agencies fell heir to many remaining ERR files (or copies). Some of these documents, including some found in Paris after the war, were acquired as originals or as carbon copies. Others were discovered by Valland and her colleagues in Germany. Still others were obtained in the form of copies from U.S. authorities at the Central Collecting Points in Germany. Some were prepared for the International Military Tribunal (IMT), or for French domestic war crimes trials, including military trials of key ERR personnel. Some of the documents, as indicated below, remain as integral files in the present arrangement of the 209SUP collection. However, not all of those that Valland labeled “Archives Rosenberg” are, strictly speaking, of ERR provenance, because they were frequently intermixed with other wartime or postwar documentation. In most cases later annotations were added to the ERR originals either by postwar French authorities or at the U.S. collecting points. This is particularly evident in the case of the AMAE copies of ERR inventories of plundered French art collections processed in the Jeu du Paume and the ERR art repositories (see Sections 2.1.1.1.) the originals of which are now online in BArch Koblenz.

Alternatively, many of the files, including those from Valland’s offices, contain incorporated documents (mostly copies) created by the ERR, some of which may remain in their original form. Many of them have been taken out of the context of their creation for use in research or restitution proceedings and hence bear later annotations or addenda. For example, a copy of an ERR seizure report or an inventory of a specific plundered French collection may be found in the postwar investigatory file about the fate of that collection and its restitution; or it may have been used in a war crimes trial or in the investigation into the fate of a specific work of art, and may be found among those records.

Nonetheless, this 209SUP collection retains key importance for this Guide, not only in terms of surviving ERR documentation. Many of the documents have even more value today in terms of identifying and tracking the fate of the cultural property plundered and dispersed by the ERR and related German agencies. Many of the postwar investigation, retrieval, and restitution files shed direct light on ERR and M-Aktion operations and aims, as well as specific collections seized or specific paintings sold, exchanged, or destroyed. More evidence is available in the reports or transcripts of postwar interrogations of ERR staff members, accomplices, and art dealers, as well as the investigations conducted by Rose Valland and her staff. Some of the interrogation reports found here are French translations of U.S. documents and have long been known from U.S. or German sources. In numerous cases, however, additional evidence or clarification can often be found in supplemental documents with them or interfiled within Rose Valland’s massive correspondence – including with former ERR staff – and further interrogations conducted by French authorities.

Access to the 209SUP Collection – in La Courneuve Reading Room

Most cartons – with a maximum of six cartons per day – may be ordered directly to the Reading Room through the computerized system (MNESYS). During periods with increased number of readers and reduced staff, the daily maximum has been reduced to four cartons.

*Those 209SUP files that have been digitized may be consulted on dedicated computers in the main Reading Room.

AMAE Statement on Access (October 2015)

Many files, and especially postwar claims, contain personal information of private individuals, their families, or heirs. The 2008 French archival law lowers the closure period for such documentation from 60 to 50 years from the date of creation. The December 2015 regulations opening more categories of legal records related to the Second World War has increased public availability. Some files require special permission (dérogeration). In line with EU privacy regulations, French authorities have refrained from putting these records on the Internet.
ACCESS TO DIGITIZED FILES in the 209SUP Collection

Cartons preceded by an asterisk (*) have been digitized and are accessible to researchers exclusively on dedicated computers in the Reading Room.

Some cartons still scheduled for digitization cannot currently be communicated to researchers given their fragile condition; inquiries and special arrangement may be possible with advance request to the Head of the Reading Room.

The chart of 209SUP below indicates digitized cartons as reported by La Courneuve in July 2021. The numbers indicated differ slightly from those indicated on the MAE website:

Understandably, because the digitization process remains underway, the number of files available to researchers digitally will be increasing, hence researchers should inquire on site for the latest listing.

The older French explanation and list (dated 8 November 2019) is now already outdated:

Survey and Administrative Histories

See additional entries in the bibliographic listings above (Section 2.0.2.).

Now outdated for location and present arrangement of the 209SUP Collection (previously RA) now in AMAE-La Courneuve, these pages in the Piketty Guide provide a brief agency history and survey. The collection was still closed for researchers when the Guide was prepared, and hence the author was not permitted to survey the Quai d’Orsay materials first-hand. The second part of Guide des recherches has a very helpful chapter on researching works of art with a succinct background explanation of the German mechanisms of plunder and the French restitution process (pp. 215–33).

A study of postwar German restitution (1943–1954) with attention to cultural property.

Briefly recounts the formation of the CRA and its function in relation to other French government agencies.

Provides well-researched illustrated pages on the history of the collection, detailed provenance entries for the 333 paintings covered, including inventory references, biographic identification of people and organizations involved, a timeline of key events in the history of the collection, facsimiles of related documents, together with updated essays on different aspects of the collection.

DESCRIPTIVE COVERAGE OF 209SUP – TECHNICAL NOTE

This 209SUP Collection has been described herein in more detail than other fonds in AMAE-La Courneuve because of its unique importance and the fact that it became publicly available only in 2009. During the decade since its public availability, thanks to archivists in La Courneuve, 209SUP has become the best described of the four major archival components covered in the chapter. The collection contains considerable previously unknown documentation revealing details of cultural plunder, retrieval, repatriation, and restitution efforts in France (with no prior published descriptions). While coverage herein emphasizes selected files of the most obvious ERR relevance, many of related interest are mentioned in passing, and even more are available that pertain to the general issues of wartime ‘spoliation’ (as the term most often used in French), and the postwar fate and retrieval efforts for looted cultural property.

Cartons in the first subseries below (Cartons 90–107 – see Sections 2.1.1.1.1.–4.), covering the French copies of ERR Jeu de Paume inventories and shipping lists, have all been examined and described in detail by this compiler. As will be explained, these should now be compared when appropriate to the original inventories and much more extensive shipping lists – all now online – as described in the latest German chapter of this Guide (Chapter 3: Germany, December 2021), with hyperlinks to the original texts of the BArch ERR files themselves; and links to others.

Descriptions in subsequent series below are presented in detail only when the compiler has had an opportunity to scrutinize the files within archival cartons or specific ‘articles,’ as arranged in La Courneuve. In other cases, limited descriptions given in English are based directly on the most recent, expanded 2019/2021 French inventories, to which researchers should refer for additional and more detailed listings.

Archival signatures (côtes) for files below have been updated to the extent possible as of mid-2021, thanks to and on the basis of the new online finding aids and consultations with AMAE archivist Sébastien Chauffour. Over the years, several sets of numbers have been assigned to many of the files within these cartons, as well as to the cartons themselves. Many of the archival cartons once had ‘RV’ designations (as part of the Rose Valland collection) that were subsequently changed to ‘RA’ while the collection was still held at the Quai d’Orsay. Presumably, definitive numeration has been established for most of the RA collection (209SUP), as reflected in the finding aids available online by mid-2021, for which hyperlinks are provided below. However, those digital finding aids available on-line – and especially the RA Database in-site – now provide much more extensive coverage of personal names and works of art covered in various files. Previous archival signatures are provided in parentheses below in some of the series, when carton numbers differ from those with the earlier ‘RA’ or ‘RV’ codes (earlier designations may still be found on many specific files). Use of only the current 209SUP signatures should be used, however, when ordering cartons for delivery to the Reading Room.

(*) An asterisk preceding a signature (côte) in the coverage below indicates the carton has been digitized, and hence available on dedicated computers on-site in La Courneuve.
2.1.1.1. Lists and Inventories of the Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg (ERR), and Related Documents

209SUP: Cartons *90–*107 (copies and some original documents)

The most important ERR documents relating to the seizure of art works in the 209SUP Collection are these photocopies of selected ERR inventories in Section 2.1.1.1.1. (received from MCCP in 1949–1950) and shipping lists in Section 2.1.1.1.3. (received from the U.S. Dept. of State, November 1958). The inventories in this subseries were copied from the originals in Munich at the time MCCP was closing in 1949. Accordingly, they differ significantly from the further-updated and annotated originals now held in the Bundesarchiv Koblenz (Bestand B 323), as described (and hyperlinked to digital copies) in the German chapter of this Guide and in Appendix 1. The Koblenz originals are all also now online through the BArch database reference system, Invenio, with German descriptions.

The French copies in La Courneuve for tracing ERR loot from France are of key importance for two reasons. First, there are annotations added at the Munich Central Collecting Point (MCCP) before the 1949 transfer of the copies to France; and second, there are additional French annotations and markings about repatriation and eventual restitution made for individual items during French restitution proceedings (not found on the originals in BArch Koblenz).

The shipping lists described below include only copies of the limited ones (from U.S. 1958 microfilms) held in the U.S. National Archives in College Park, MD (NACP), and now online at Fold3.com. More extensive ERR shipping lists held in BArch Koblenz (B 323) are also now online, as described in the German chapter of this Guide (with added direct links to the full texts on the Internet).

Descriptions of the files in this series below are divided into four subseries according to the provenance or nature of documents, all of which are covered together as a single separate series in the La Courneuve finding aid within the 209SUP collection.

Earlier archival signatures (including RA carton numbers and the previous internal French office file numbers A1–A31) are given in parentheses below only when different than the current numbers, all of which are now prefaced by ‘209SUP’ rather than ‘RA’ or ‘RV.’

N.B. Spelling of most names of the collection owners for Jeu de Paume ERR Collections has been corrected as used in France, with the ERR rendition usually in parentheses, but some variants may be found below.

Access to Digital Copies

() All files in this subseries have been restored and digitized since transfer to La Courneuve – as indicated with an asterisk () and hence are now available to researchers in the main Reading Room on dedicated computers.

The second section of the printed-out loose-leaf notebook finding aid for the 209SUP collection (see above) available in the Inventory Room provides brief coverage for the cartons with inventories in Sections 2.1.1.1.1–2.1.1.1.3., as well as related collected documents in the Rose Valland series “Archives Rosenberg–I–IV” in Section 2.1.1.1.4.

N.B. Content of Carton 107 (described below) is not listed in the current AMAE finding aid (online in 2021) but has been added to the series; a digital copy is now available in La Courneuve.

Lists archival signatures for available versions of the ERR inventories and related archival sources for the looted works of art seized from French and Belgian Jewish victims seized by the ERR and processed in the Jeu de Paume. Organized alphabetically by victims’ names (with life dates and professional designation, if available), this chart includes hyperlinks to the digitized original ERR inventories and shipping lists for the ERR Jeu de Paume collections now held in BArch Koblenz, *B 323. Also provides references to images of individual works of art, ERR shipping lists, postwar French claims (in 209SUP), and other related documents held in BArch, U.S. NACP (and online at Fold3.com), as well as AMAE-La Courneuve.

209SUP, CARTONS *90/3–*99/26, *100

ACCESS – DIGITIZED CARTONS

All of the cartons in this series have been digitized and are accessible to researchers on dedicated computers in the Reading Room. Hence, all cartons are preceded by an asterisk (*).

The files within the ERR series in La Courneuve, now assigned to carton numbers 90–103, contain recently restored and digitized French copies of many (but not all) original ERR working object-level inventories for works of art in the confiscated French and Belgian Jewish collections processed by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume adjacent to the Louvre. The La Courneuve copies were produced from the German originals in 1949 by the U.S. Army when MCCP was closing and transferred to French authorities. The originals had been found in Neuschwanstein after the war and transferred to MCCP; they are now held in BArch Koblenz, Bestand (fond) B 323 (TVK). As of 2019, all of those German originals are digitized and online, hyperlinked to both the German chapter (December 2019) and Appendix 1 of this Guide.

After these ERR inventories were found in the ERR repositories at the end of the war (mostly in Neuschwanstein), they were used by the MCCP for restitution processing. In many cases, Munich numbers (Mü) were added in pen or pencil for those items that reached the MCCP. Indication of “exit” dates were also noted for items repatriated/restituted to France from Munich, as well as for those items sent to Paris in the restitution shipments directly from Neuschwanstein (autumn 1945) or Buxheim (February–March 1946).

The ERR originals – after the U.S. copies were given to France in 1949 – continued to be used and updated by the Trust Administration for Cultural Assets (Treuhandverwaltung für Kulturgut, TVK) in Munich until 1962. Hence, the French copies differ today significantly from the ERR typescript originals or carbon copies in the TVK records in BArch Koblenz, B 323 (now online).

Most of the inventories in 209SUP, which Valland referred to as part of the “Archives Rosenberg,” were initially prepared by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume (1941–1944) or in the ERR art repositories in Germany to which the French and Belgian collections were shipped. Most were prepared on printed ERR inventory sheets, all of which bear original ERR code numbers for each item (also marked on the items themselves). They were signed by the compiler, whose name(s) is indicated in the heading along with the date of preparation. Most have added typed data (with date) about the agency from which the works of art were received – such as the Currency Protection Commando (Devisenschutzkommando, DSK) or the Dienststelle Westen (i.e., Möbel-Aktion) – or other place or agency of seizure; the names of the ERR personnel responsible for the seizure; and the depot where the collection was registered in the Jeu de Paume (continuing pages repeat essential data at the top). Some folders contain more than one inventory, having been prepared at different times or covering different parts of the same collection. Some indicate the repository in Germany or Austria to which the collection was sent. Some contain shipping crate lists and additional documents relating to the collections.

Some of the inventories were prepared, augmented, or had parts retyped in the ERR destination repository or the ERR office in Füssen (near Neuschwanstein Castle, codenamed Hans, or Lager Hans [Depot Hans]). Some of the original folder covers have the stamp of the 90 The receipt of this collection of ERR inventories (with MCCP annotations) is acknowledged in CRA documents now filed as 209SUP 101/27 (earlier RA 101 [A-17], folder 1). This includes both the receipt from OBIP, and a list of the inventories received (see below).

91 The German digital copies are accessible both through INVENIO on the BArch website, and with direct hyperlinks from their listings in the B 323 in the German chapter of the ERR Archival Guide. A digital copy of the German chapter (December 2021) is available for download at https://www.errproject.org/guide.php. See also Appendix 1: “A Correlation Table for Sources Regarding the Art Collections Seized from French and Belgian Jewish Owners and Processed by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume, 1940–1944” (November 2019), which also provides hyperlinks to the German digital copies in BArch, as well as lists of related additional sources and images of individual works of art.
ERR office in Füssen (ERR Dienststelle Füssen-Hohenschwangau, Haus Bethanien). Some inventories for collections sent to other ERR Bavarian art repositories have notes to that effect (such as the Monastery of Buxheim, LAGER BU[xheim], or simply BU), or often a note as to the date and crate number in which specific items were received; some have additional text with explanatory notes (e.g., about shipping problems). Some indicate that additional photographs of the items were prepared in Füssen. Many items listed have added notes or stamps with ERR codes for the receiving repository, or subsequent repository to which they were transferred later (e.g., Lager Peter [Altaussee]). Meanwhile for those items transferred to Adolf Hitler, the inventories are stamped “A.H.”; those to Hermann Göring are stamped “H.G.”

Many Impressionist pieces and other works of modern art considered ‘degenerate’ by the Nazis were crossed out on the inventories, with notes added in ink indicating transfers to the Möbel-Aktion for sale (zum Verkauf) or for exchange (Tausch or Tauschbild), while others were marked as destroyed (vernichtet). Some items bear annotations regarding their disposition. These handwritten notes were presumably all made by the ERR in Paris or the repositories. Spot checks already reveal that not all indicated actions were actually carried out (e.g., some marked “destroyed” have been preserved).

Most of the (German-language) descriptions for the items sent to Germany are repeated in the data found on the ca. 20,000 Jeu de Paume registration cards held by the U.S. National Archives, College Park (see the U.S. Chapter of this Guide, Section 10.1.5.5.), but further comparative checking is required. Digitized images of these cards, together with images from the ERR Fotothek in the Bundesarchiv in Koblenz (B 323), are now available online in the Jeu de Paume Database, “Cultural Plunder by the Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg (ERR): Database of Art Objects at the Jeu de Paume.”

The inventories and related documents for each collection remain in separate violet-colored German NSDAP folders. The folders have the collection name stamped on the cover and are arranged alphabetically by collection. With the original inventories now in BArch Koblenz, an initial MCCP German-language summary sheet for each collection (prepared later by the TVK) notes how many items had been found and returned to date. Many of the initial sheets in the French copies bear additional French notations, most signed by the individual verifying the data (most dated 1950 or 1951, e.g., “Wagner, juin 1950”), with notes regarding the preparation of French file cards for individual items (see the card files listed in Section 2.1.1.4., 209SUP/Cartons 827–832). Most French copies of the inventories bear further annotations by French restitution authorities regarding the repatriation or restitution status of individual items. For example, an added “R” in red (usually on the verso of the preceding page opposite the entry) indicates the return of an object to France.

92 For example, the inventory for Mme Wassermann’s collection is in part dated “Füssen, 15.5.44,” while the folder for [Veil-Picard] (Weil-Picard in ERR documents) has no Jeu de Paume inventory. The Weinberger inventory, as another example, indicates that photographs were prepared in Füssen (Jan. 1943).

93 The database, directed by Marc Masurovsky, at https://www.errproject.org/jeudopaume/, continues to be expanded as part of the ERR project of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany (Claims Conference), with technical assistance from the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum (USHMM; see the U.S. chapter, Section 10.2.3.).

94 Some of the original files in BArch Koblenz, B 323, retain the same type of lavender covers, which may have been reused by the MCCP or the TVK.

95 See the correlation table in Appendix 1 to this Guide listing the original inventories (BArch Koblenz, B 323) from which these photocopies were made. Hyperlinks are provided to digitized copies of the full original texts.
It should be emphasized that these French copies listed below held in La Courneuve (209SUP, Cartons *90/3–*100/28), often with supplemental French data, differ significantly from the German originals held in BArch Koblenz (Bestand B 323). The German originals are now all available online, with hyperlinks from both the German chapter and Appendix 1 of this Guide, and also within online BArch Invenio listings.

N.B. In the list below, owners’ names are corrected to forms used in France, with significant corrections in brackets, while the ERR versions of names – as well as ERR codes for individual collections – appear in parentheses.

97 A final file in carton 95/13 entitled “Complément aux inventaires” (supplement to the inventories) – contains an original letter from Ardelia Hall to Rose Valland (12 Dec. 1962) with a list of her answers to French inquiries and clarifications and additions based on her personal analysis of U.S. files and the ERR Jeu de Paume card file held by NARA, as well as notes on 34 collections for which the French had not received inventories. The letter also discusses ERR “destruction” of paintings indicated on some inventories. The collections for which inventories were missing in the lists above of French copies are apparent in Appendix 1.
98 The collection belonging to Baron Jean Cassel van Doorn (1882–1952), a Belgian citizen, was taken from Cannes by the SD, not the ERR, although several ERR staff members were involved with the appraisal and packing of the collection in Paris. The collection was not processed in the Jeu de Paume. Hence, the inventory was apparently not prepared by the ERR, although Rose Valland and French authorities attributed it to the ERR after the war, and many French sources list Cassel among the ERR JdP victims.

2.1.1.1.2. RELATED DOCUMENTATION FROM U.S. SOURCES REGARDING THE ERR FRENCH JEU DE PAUME INVENTORIES

209SUP, CARTONS *101–*102

*Carton 101/27 (RA 101/27/A17), 1949–1950
Documents received from MCCP by French Restitution Bureau in Baden-Baden.99

Folder [1]: “Liste des tapisseries confisquées par l’ERR” – lists confiscated carpets with ERR codes and owners’ names (presumably a French translation of the one in Bundesarchiv B 323/315), with French restitution notes.

Folder [2]: “Rapport final du CCP Munich” [Final report of Munich CCP] with the official French receipt for copies of ERR inventories in Section 2.1.1.1.1. from the MCCP by Baden-Baden via OBIP (received 3 May 1950); additional documents enclosed:
– Names and addresses of proprietors whose ERR loot was transferred to France.
– Summary list with statistics for the restitution status of named French collections, including those slated by the ERR for sale or destruction.

– Supplementary list of French individuals whose plundered art was returned, but for which ERR inventories are lacking in AMAE-La Courneuve. All of the German originals are now online with hyperlinks from both the German chapter and Appendix 1 of this Guide, as well as in BArch-Koblenz, with Invenio listings online.

*Carton 102/35 (RA 105/35/A30)
Documents sent to Rose Valland by Ardelia Hall (U.S. Dept. of State) with letter (18 Nov. 1958), noting of enclosure of copies of ERR shipping lists now described in Section 2.1.1.1.3. Made from originals among captured records in Washington, DC (see the U.S. chapter, Section 10.1.5.) and several related ERR documents:
– List of nine ERR art shipments from France in 1943–August 1944.
– Details of transport to Nikolsburg, 4 May 1944, listing ERR coded crate list.
– Chart of transports to Altaussee from other ERR repositories in Germany.
– Notes from an interrogation of Schiedlausky.
– Several documents from Robert Scholz regarding ERR plundered French art collections, including French translation of March 1943 quarterly report of Sonderstab Bildende Kunst.

99 Copies of these documents and related subsequent ones will be found online in BArch Koblenz, B 323, although not together in single files.
2.1.1.1.3. ERR Shipping Lists for French Art Collections to ERR Repositories

*209SUP, Carton 103

Most of the ERR documents in the four cartons/files that follow are printed photocopies from U.S. microfilms (NARA A3889), recently restored and digitized in La Courneuve for reader on-site computer access. Apparently, some documents may have been acquired from other sources because all do not correspond to the copies in U.S. NACP (available online at Fold3.com). The documents consist of ERR shipping crate lists and/or crate inventories (with ERR collection codes for items contained) for six shipments in 1943 and 1944 from Paris to ERR repositories in Austria, namely:

Nikolsburg (Czech Mikulov; code NI or KLAUS);
Schloss Seisenegg (Amstetten district; code ERNST), and Alaussee (code PETER).

There is also a fragmentary shipping list from Herrenviemsee (code MAX) to Alaussee.

N.B. More complete files of original shipping lists are all now online in BArch Koblenz in *B 323/300–305, 312, and 314 (the last file also includes lists from Nice [Nizzaliste] and Neuwied). Hyperlinks are available to digital copies of those ERR originals in the German chapter of this Guide. 100

Included are German copies of crate lists (with ERR crate codes, i.e. often differing from ERR collection codes), and/or crate inventories for French collections from the Jeu de Paume, including M-Aktion collections. The U.S. copies are referenced in Ardelia Hall’s letter to Rose Valland (18 November 1958) in Carton 102/35 above (Section 2.1.1.1.2.). 101

*Carton 103/29 (RA 102/29):

ERR Crate Lists and Inventories for Shipments from Paris to Nikolsburg (now Czech Mikulov), transports of 15 November and 21 December 1943

Many of the crates of art taken to Nikolsburg were subsequently transferred to Alaussee in early 1944. With the arrival of the Red Army in 1945, the castle in Nikolsburg was burned (reportedly intentionally). Remaining fragments of the works of art there were returned to France in 1947/48 shipments from Prague (see 209SUP, Cartons 375/P6, 378/P9, 404/P46/24, and 444/P105–107 below for details). Crate inventories list items from the following ERR-coded private collections.

100 Most of these are available online in connection with the updated German chapter for this Guide, and also in the BArch reference database Invenio. *B 323/314 also includes shipping lists for collections from Nice (Nizzaliste), and the Neuwied Collection.

101 They do not completely match up with the German originals (or copies) held in the U.S. National Archives in College Park (NACP), RG 260 (U.S. Office of Military Government in Germany, OMGUS), Ardelia Hall Collection (A1, Entry 519). The NACP copies are not arranged in a separate file, and are available to readers only on microfilm, with copies online at Fold3.com in the revised edition of NARA Microfilm Publication A3389, roll 9, online at: https://www.fold3.com/image/115/271383001; roll 10: https://www.fold3.com/image/115/271042629. Later identical copies are arranged within the MCCP Administrative Records, filmed as NARA Microfilm Publication M1946, roll 124: https://www.fold3.com/image/114/283748319.

A few lists from other sources have apparently been added to the French subseries below. More complete extant shipping lists in BArch Koblenz (B 323) are described and available online with hyperlinks in the German chapter of this Guide (December 2019; see Section 3.1.1.2.), *B 323/300–305, and 312.

*Carton 104/32 (RA 104/32/A23/[485]) [from Berlin SRPOA]:
[\textit{Rose Valland title}] \textit{“Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg I,” 1943–1952}
\textit{Kunsterfassungsaktion} ERR. Postwar research Files brought together by Rose Valland with some wartime documents incorporated (not all related documents have been kept together in scanned file, and the alphabetical order was lost):
– Letter of Walter Borchers (ERR, 1 May 1946).
– List (dated 1951) of major German wartime purchases of art by dealers, some with lists of paintings, including 12 sold to Dr Gurlitt, 11 Dec. 1942.
– Collection Bacri Frères (photos withdrawn), photostat of ERR confiscation inventory (12 Oct. 1942 with ERR code “BC”, most stamped “Lager BU[xheim]”), with lists of paintings removed (1 July 1940), additional French inventories, reports, and investigative correspondence.
– Bayeux Tapestry (Apr.–Nov. 1943), Hermann Bunjes (not ERR).
– Ambassador Otto Abetz, and reference to relevant documents.
– Contents of catalogues of Jewish art collections seized and held at the German Embassy in Paris lists.
– Notes on interrogation of Werner Koeppen (ERR deputy chief).
– Examples of transfers to Gustav Rochlitz for sale in Switzerland, etc. (1943–1952).
– Alliance israélite universelle seizures, with related rare books and paintings taken from apartment of Maurice Leven, 1947 letters regarding his papers and early rare books in the cellar of the Alliance israélite universelle and their confiscation by the ERR, with specific references to ERR library staff including Walther Grothe (director of the Central Library of the Hohe Schule of the NSDAP [Zentralbibliothek der Hohen Schule der NSDAP, ZBHS])\textsuperscript{105} and Peter Wörnke (ERR in Belgium, later Paris, earlier Hamburg Library).
– Maurice Rothschild, correspondence, inventory of art not returned, etc.
– Martin Bormann Collection, with list of paintings seized in Biarritz (1948–1952) (photos removed).
– Paintings seized from M. [Rob?] Lefort des Ylouses, 83 av de la Californie, Nice.

*Carton 104/33 (RA 104/33/A24/[484] [100bis]) [from Berlin SRPOA]:
[\textit{Valland title}] \textit{“Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg II,” 1943–1959}
Postwar research files in alphabetical order brought together by Rose Valland with some wartime documents incorporated:
– Karl Haberstock (art dealer for Hitler’s museum in Linz): documents regarding Roger Dequoy and the Wildenstein Collection.
– Andreas Hofer (art dealer for Göring).
– Arthur Kannenberg (Hitler’s head butler).
– Bruno Lohse (deputy head of ERR in Paris), interrogation, mostly regarding the Schloss Collection.

\textsuperscript{104} Although many of the documents in these folders were labeled ‘ERR,’ and many are related to ERR seizures, they are all not original ERR documents or even copies thereof.

\textsuperscript{105} The Hohe Schule was a projected postwar university-level training center envisioned by Rosenberg for the Nazi elite.
*Carton 104/33 (continued): “Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg II.” 1943–1959
  – IMT (Tribunal Militaire Internationale, TMI) summaries of PS documents related to art, the ERR, and other French IMT documents, newspaper clippings relating to French investigations and trials of ERR personnel in Paris, French government research bulletins, and extracts of documents.
  – Modern art sold in Paris, report based on ERR archives and French interrogations, with compiled charts listing paintings with ERR collection codes (covering respectively 115, 65, and 75 paintings).
  – Modern paintings exchanged by the ERR, based on ERR archives, a typed original list of ERR exchanges, with ERR codes, and a section for those restituted or not restituted (as of 1952), including some identified from the ERR UNB collection.

*Carton 105/34 (RA 105/34/A25/[483]) [from Berlin SRPOA]:
  Collection Schloss, and Affaires Scholz, Sieger, Wendland, Wüster
  Postwar research Files in alphabetical order brought together by Rose Valland with some wartime documents incorporated (S–W):
  – Collection Adolphe Schloss ([1943], 1948–1952), details regarding seizure with Linz agent Erhard Göpel as the principal negotiator for the seizure, with involvement of Robert Scholz, head of ERR Special Staff Fine Arts (Sonderstab Bildende Kunst), and Bruno Lohse of the ERR. Note part of the collection was at least briefly in the JdP.
  – Affaire Robert Scholz (1948–1951), Valland correspondence (many original with French translations) with him regarding specific items and hiding places; original letters by Scholz regarding his involvement in organizing the removal of explosives from mine shafts in Altaussee and parallel efforts (night of 2–3 May 1945).
  – Dealers Erwin Sieger, Hans Wendland, and Adolf Wüster, with considerable correspondence and reports about sales and restitution research.

  [Valland title] “Einsatzstab Rosenberg IV,” 1940:
  Recherche de la Police Secrète allemande sur des loges maçonniques et les archives israélites de la France (31 July–12 November 1940 [10 January 1941]) – Badly worn original and photocopy (from MBF records).
  – An original volume of police reports prepared for the ERR (Akte Nr 1342a) by the Secret Field Police (Geheime Feldpolizei, GFP) and Field Gendarmerie (Feldgendarmerie) sent to the Military Commandant in France (Militärbeeführer in Frankreich, MBF), Administrative Staff, Administration Department (Verwaltungsstab, Abteilung Verwaltung), 31 July–6 Sept. 1940 [10 Jan. 1941]).
  – Individual documents describe holdings of books and archives found (and presumably seized) in cities and towns outside of Paris, predominantly private Jewish home libraries, as well as some Masonic lodges, some in considerable detail. Summary lists of cities covered, and libraries found (20 Sept. 1940; 28 Oct. 1940), “Erfassung von Freimaurerlogen sowie von Bibliotheken und Archiven in jüdischem Besitz” [Registration of Free Mason Lodges as well as of Libraries and Archives in Jewish Possession]. The additional photocopy in the same carton here has slips with French-language notes, suggesting its use in claims processing.

Archives Rosenberg, Bunjes Kunstschutz: Correspondence II, 1941 (see additional Bunjes documents in Carton 398/P36 in Section 2.1.1.2.5.)
– Outgoing correspondence of Dr Hermann Bunjes (original carbon copies), starting Sept.–Oct. 1941.
– Bunjes’ official journal recording MBF (Militärbefehlshaber in Frankreich) ordinances.
– Copies of reports to MBF from Currency Protection Commando (Devisenschutzkommando, DSK) to MBF (carbon copies), with lists of art confiscated from family collections transferred to ERR: Seizures from Wassermann, Sara Rosenstein, and others.
– Reports (some with inventories) of other seizure: Rothschilds; David-Weill (130 crates from château de Sourches, April 1941); Raoul-Meyer (DSK); Mme P. Heilbronn (DSK); Wanda Landowska (St. Leu-la-Fôret); and Louis Hirsch (DSK).

*Carton 107/A33 (RA 108/A35):106
“Cahiers d’Emballage,” from the German Embassy (Paris), [1941–1943] l’Ambassade d’Allemagne / Schenker [German shipping firm])
Cover markings: “Pusey Beaumont Crassier, Garde Meuble Emballage and Transport d’objets d’art; 23, 25, 27 rue des Petites-Écuries, Paris,” “Dossiers personnels de Rose Valland,” and

N.B. These Valland “Cahiers” have yet to be adequately analyzed by specialists in reporting about looted works of art from various French collections that were shipped out of France by the ERR during the war, including details about paintings conveyed to ERR staff and associates in charge (see Folder 1) from the Jeu de Paume. Note that a few French collections named with fragmentary lists of contents are not on the ERR JdP list. Others appear to differ in number of items from those listed in surviving ERR inventories, for example, L. Reinach (nine crates), while the ERR Reinach inventory lists only four items.

106 This carton was available to researchers in 2016, although it is not listed in the current online finding aid for this series (as of 2021). The description above reflects the compiler’s de visu examination of the contents.

[Folder 1] 107 “Dossiers personnels de Rose Valland, I”

Original (carbon copies) five vols. of lists, crate inventories, and Valland notes for items leaving the Jeu de Paume for shipment to Germany (via the German Embassy, by Schenker). A note signed by Valland in the first volume identifies the five notebooks as having been found after the Germans left Paris, representing all of the goods sent from the Jeu de Paume (with some received from the German Embassy). (Valland note: “Ces cinq cahiers d’emballage représentant la totalité des biens emballés au Jeu de Paume et en partie à l’ambassade d’Allemagne. Ils ont été remis par M Crassier après le départ [signé] R. Valland.”) – Lists crates for individual proprietors, shipments (some from the German Embassy) include those for:

  – Alfred Rosenberg.
  – Kurt von Behr (vol. 1, fols 65–87).
  – other ERR staff (with list of names and addresses, fol. 89).
  – Ambassador Abetz.

– Some sheets cover ERR office materials, such as photographs, equipment, and ERR documentation (two crates with ERR codes for inventories included, a few dated May–June 1942).

– List of ERR French collection code numbers for items in the UNB collection, including some collections not on the ERR Jeu de Paume lists.

– 1942: “Rothschild, Lefort des Ylouses, Seligmann Alphandery, Leven.”

– Notes regarding art objects not inventoried, e.g., Collection Schloss (crates 1–15).

[Folder 2] “Dossiers personnels de Rose Valland, I”

– “Inventaires d’emballage,” sheets typed after the war from handwritten lists prepared by Rose Valland (as per note above on inside cover of Folder 1 above). Typed transcriptions of the five registers of outgoing crates from the Jeu de Paume in Folder 107[1]. A sixth typescript also remains, but the original notebook is missing.

[Folder 3] on folder cover: former code 108/A35

– Expéditions en Allemagne. Inventaire des caisses emballées en France par l’ERR.

– Inventaire des collections, 1942: Rothschild, Lefort des Ylouses, Seligmann-Alphandéry, Leven:

  – (no. 1) “Caisses emballées au Louvre pour [von Behr],” s.d.

  (11 Mar. 1942; packed 54, av d’Iéna); and 50 crates (26 Nov. 1942); Collection lists alphabetically with additional typed copies [similar to Folder 2 above]; some have names and addresses of owners.

  – (no. 3) A – (no. 9) M
  – (no. 4) B – (no. 10) N–P
  – (no. 5) C – (no. 11) R
  – (no. 6) D–F – (no. 12) S (includes part of Schloss Collection)
  – (no. 7) G–K
  – (no. 8) L (Paul Lebattant) – (no. 13) T–Z.

107 Folder numbers have been added here for clarity, but many existing numbers within the carton were askew when last examined.
2.1.1.2. Postwar Research Files (Most Collected by Rose Valland, with Some Wartime Documents, Many Related to the ERR)

2.1.1.2.1. Postwar Research Files – Dossiers “Series A”

209SUP, Cartons 108/A32–213/A202

Creating Agency:
Service français de récupération artistique, 1944–1974
[French Service for Art Retrieval]

Series “A” includes intermixed files covering activities of the Collecting Points, convoys sent to France, and processing for individual claims, with files from Baden-Baden and Berlin.

Finding Aid

This updated and expanded 2019 inventory provides much more complete description of files in Series A cartons (starting p. 19) than the previous version: [“… 209SUP. Répertoire numérique détaillé”]: Dossiers de la "série A."

Includes extensive lists of names of persons and artists with details of works of art involved (most now listed in RA database). Only selections from the series are described below, especially involving ERR collections and their victimized owners.

N.B. Selected summary descriptions below are based on the compiler’s scrutiny of limited cartons, as well as the expanded 2019 French inventory, to which researchers should refer for more complete listings.

The RA Database may also provide helpful (described above – available only at on-site computers in La Courneuve) for locating specific names of individuals and works of art with reference to carton numbers and dossiers.

2.1.1.2.2. POSTWAR RESEARCH FILES – DOSSIERS “SÉRIE B”

209SUP, CARTONS 215/B1–292/B154

CREATING AGENCIES:

- Service français de récupération artistique, 1944–1974
  [French Service for Art Retrieval]
- Service de remise en place des œuvres d’art (SRPOA)
  [Retrieval Service for Works of Art]
- Bureau d’investigation artistique (BIA)
  [Office for Art Investigation]
- Fonds Rose Valland

The vast majority of “Series B” in the 209SUP Collection (Cartons 215/B1–292/B154) are numbered BIA files (dossiers BIA 1–4086) containing inquiries about looted or otherwise displaced cultural items involving restitution claims from institutions and individuals (including many individual Germans) handled by Rose Valland’s offices in Baden-Baden CCP or Berlin.

Given the current availability of the expanded 2019 online finding aid covering these cartons, with references to personal names and displaced cultural items covered in many files, only selected numbered BIA dossiers are highlighted below. Particular attention is paid to files covering ERR staff and their cultural seizures and the fate and retrieval of ERR loot – mostly art and library materials. In addition to extensive coverage of activities in the French Occupation Zone of Germany (ZFO), mention is also made below of significant items found in – or of provenance in – other European countries, and hence subject to restitution. Many additional files listed but not included below relate to investigation of claims for named items deemed of French private or institutional provenance, acquired by Germans or otherwise displaced during the war (many from Alsace and Lorraine, areas annexed to the Reich).

Finding Aid

Ministère des Affaires étrangères, Centre des archives diplomatiques de La Courneuve.

Cartons 215/B1–B289/B148 include BIA dossiers nos. 1–4086, most (but not all) in numerical order, with B-1 as an alphabetical register.

The updated and expanded 2019 finding aid for this series, unlike the initial one, provides a detailed inventory of subject content of individual files, many including names of individuals involved, as well artists and works of art, books, and other cultural property seized during the war and subject to claim covered in numbered files.

N.B. Selected summary descriptions below are based on the compiler’s scrutiny of limited cartons, as well as the expanded 2019 French inventory, to which researchers should refer for names and works of art of specific ERR confiscations and sales in France.
The RA Database may also provide helpful (described above – available at on-site computers in La Courneuve) for locating specific names of individuals and works of art with reference to carton numbers and BIA dossiers.

2.1.1.2.3. Postwar Research Files – Dossiers “Série C”

209SUP, Cartons 293/C1–321/C45 [322–323 not used]112

Creating Agencies:

Commission de la récupération artistique (CRA)
[Commission for the Recovery of Art]

[Retrieval Service for Works of Art]

Commissions de choix des œuvres d’art (CCOA)
[Commissions on Choice for art works]

This series of 42 dossiers arranged in 31 cartons (2 missing) contains documents diverse both in terms of subjects and creating agencies. Most were initially created or assembled by Rose Valland. The majority of files included relate to cultural claims and restitution processing in the Baden-Baden CCP, including inquiries regarding looted items claimed for restitution. The opening description in the expanded November 2019 inventory provides a summary of the entire series, followed by detailed listings of numbered files in each dossier.

Only selected file-level (and fewer document-level) descriptions are provided for the cartons listed below, particularly those relevant to ERR activities and fate of ERR loot.

Access – Digitized Cartons

All of the cartons in Series C have been digitized and are accessible to researchers on dedicated computers in the Reading Room. Hence, all cartons are preceded by an asterisk (*).

Finding Aid

The recently updated and considerably expanded 2019 inventory of the various dossiers in Série C replaces the earlier (undated) La Courneuve summary finding aid, providing a detailed inventory of subject content of individual files, including many names of individuals and looted cultural items involved.

112 A note at the end of the 2019 finding aid explains that Carton 322 has not been located, and Carton 323 has been transferred to the series “Albums photographiques.”
N.B. Selected summary descriptions below are based on the compiler’s scrutiny of limited cartons, as well as the expanded 2019 French inventory, to which researchers should refer for more complete listings.

The RA Database may also provide helpful (described above – available only at on-site computers in La Courneuve) for locating specific names of individuals and works of art with reference to carton numbers and dossiers.

2.1.1.2.4. Postwar Research Files – Dossiers “Series D”

209SUP, Cartons 325/D3–363/D70 [364–369 codes not used]

Creating Agencies:
- Service français de récupération artistique, 1944–1974
  [French Service for Art Retrieval]
- Service de remise en place des œuvres d’art (SRPOA)
  [Retrieval Service for Works of Art]
- Bureau central des restitutions (BCR)
  [Central Restitution Office]

The 38 Cartons – 209SUP/325–363, containing dossiers D3–D70 – in Series D contain mainly dossiers from the Fine Arts Section of the Public Education Division for the French Occupation Zone (ZFO) operating in Baden-Baden, predominantly including restitution files from Baden-Baden CCP. Many of the files appear to be the work of Rose Valland’s assistant, Mme Azambre, as noted in the updated and expanded December 2019 online inventory.

Only selected dossiers and files with the D-dossiers are highlighted below with file-level (and occasional document-level) description, namely those of general importance for retrieval and restitution developments and identification of looted cultural treasures, including books and archives, and repatriation. Special attention is on matters or specific cases of particular relevance to the ERR activities, its victims and fate of ERR loot. Coverage also notes cases involving other European countries where the ERR was active, or potentially involving ERR loot, especially the Beleux countries that France was representing for restitution matters.

Access – Digitized Cartons

Cartons preceded by an asterisk (*) have been digitized and are accessible to researchers on dedicated computers in the Reading Room. In this series, as of mid-2021, Cartons *324–*350 are available digitally.

Finding Aid

The recently updated and considerably expanded 2019 inventory of the dossiers in ‘Série D’ replaces the earlier (undated) La Courneuve summary finding aid, providing a detailed inventory of subject content of individual files, including names of individuals and looted cultural items involved.

The RA Database may also provide helpful (described above – available only at on-site computers in La Courneuve) for locating specific names of individuals and works of art with reference to carton numbers and dossiers.
N.B. Selected summary descriptions below are based on the compiler’s scrutiny of limited cartons, as well as the expanded 2019 French inventory, to which researchers should refer for more complete listings.

2.1.1.2.5. POSTWAR RESEARCH FILES – DOSSIERS “SERIES P”

209SUP, CARTONS 370/P1–555/P266

CREATING AGENCIES:
Service français de récupération artistique, 1944–1974
[French Service for Art Retrieval]
Service de remise en place des œuvres d’art (SRPOA)
[Retrieval Service for Works of Art]
Bureau central de restitutions (BCR)
[Central Restitution Office, Baden Baden]
Office des biens et intérêts privés (OBIP and SBIP)
[Office of Private Property and Interests]

The 185 Cartons in Series P – 370/P1–555/P266 (with numbered dossiers P1 through P266 and additional sub-files within) comprise predominantly records from the Fine Arts Section of the Public Education Division for the French Occupation Zone (ZFO) operating in Baden-Baden, mostly relating to retrieval and repatriation/restitution of cultural property processed at the Baden-Baden CCP. Files include French enquiries and visits in different occupation zones, restitution inquiries and documentations, in- and out-shipments, and research correspondence. These are now described in considerable detail in the newly updated December 2020 online inventory on the Ministry website, only summary selections from which are presented below.

Special attention below is on specific cases of relevance to ERR staff and activities, its known victims, and the fate and restitution of ERR loot. Limited sub-dossiers and files within are highlighted as examples here with brief file-level (and occasionally document-level) description. Coverage also notes documents involving other European countries where the ERR was active, or potentially related to ERR loot, especially Belgium and the Netherlands, which France was officially representing for postwar retrieval and restitution. Because French restitution authorities were also active in Eastern Europe, their revealing reports and inventories of looted cultural property discovered in Poland, Czechoslovakia, and the Soviet Occupation Zones of Germany and Austria are also mentioned below. In addition, coverage extends to selected important and newly available documentation on general wartime looting and postwar retrieval issues.

ACCESS – DIGITIZED CARTONS

Cartons preceded by an asterisk (*) have been digitized and are accessible to researchers on dedicated computers in the Reading Room. In Series P, Cartons *390–*396, *483, *491, and *549 are available digitally as of August 2021.

Finding Aid

Ministère des Affaires Étrangères, Centre des archives diplomatiques de la Courneuve.
The new 2020 inventory considerably expands the initial brief La Courneuve coverage, with identification of numbered folders and files within each carton, providing a detailed inventory of subject content of individual files. It has more specific details and a better layout than many of the recent inventories of other series. In many cases names are given for individual victims of looting; claimants and works of art involved are named in description of files covered (with artists and titles).

Although the inventory title suggests coverage starts with Carton 383, actual coverage starts with Carton 370.

N.B. A further updated version of the Series P inventory is expected on the AMAE website.

N.B. A few files examined by the compiler are highlighted with folder/file-level detail, but most descriptions in English below are revised, based on the greatly expanded online French inventory (December 2020), which should be consulted for details about additional contents.

The RA Database may also provide helpful (described above – available only at on-site computers in La Courneuve) for locating specific names of individuals and works of art with reference to carton numbers and dossiers.

– Depots of looted books in Poland, Czechoslovakia, and USSR – Breslau (Wróclaw, Drebkau [SE Brandenburg]), Racibórz, Sława, Waldenburg (Walbrzych).

126 The codename “Aktion Bertha” or “Operation Bertha” involved seizure of the Cassel art collection by the SD and Vichy police in Cannes and Ruoms (near Ardèche). The operation did not involve ERR personnel, except for Lohse representing Göring with the ERR in Paris, although Rose Valland assigned an ERR designation (CAS) to the Cassel Collection files now in AMAE. The collection was appraised in the Jeu de Paume, but the ERR apparently did not prepare the inventory, nor did the collection go to an ERR repository. The collection was found after the war with Austrian collections from Thürnthal designated for the Linz Museum that had been taken to Altaussee. Baron Cassel van Doorn (b. Brussels 1881, d. Englewood, NJ 1952; his wife née Marguerite van Doorn).

2.1.1.2.6. Postwar Research Files – Dossiers “Series R”

209SUP, Cartons 556/R1–590/R50

Creating Agencies:
- Service français de récupération artistique, 1944–1974
  [French Service for Art Restitution]
- Service de remise en place des œuvres d’art (SRPOA)
  [Service for the Return of Works of Art]
- Service de protection des œuvres d’art (SPOA)
  [Service for Protection of Works of Art]

“Series R” consists of Rose Valland research files on individual French collections seized during occupation, most of them seized by the ERR, and a number of important additional Valland reports from her related restitution investigations.

Access – Digitized Cartons

All cartons in Series R have been digitized and are accessible on dedicated computers in the Reading Room. Hence, an asterisk (*) precedes all cartons.

Finding Aid

The new 2020 inventory considerably expands and replaces the initial brief La Courneuve inventory with detailed identification of carton contents and individual files within. Cartons are usually divided into two (or more) dossiers numbered R1–R50.

N.B. A further updated version of the Series R inventory is expected on the AMAE website.

N.B. Selected summary descriptions below are based on the compiler’s scrutiny of limited cartons, as well as the expanded 2020 French inventory, to which researchers should refer for more complete listings.

The RA Database may also provide helpful (described above – available only at on-site computers in La Courneuve) for locating specific names of individuals and works of art with reference to carton numbers.

2.1.1.2.7. POSTWAR RESEARCH FILES – VARIOUS (FILES OF ROSE VALLAND)

209SUP, CARTONS 706–725

Most of these dossiers and folders/files within were brought together by Rose Valland from her own office records, those of her associates, or related files from other agencies. Detailed contents of Carton 710/R39 – of special relevance to the ERR art loot in the Jeu de Paume – is summarized here as an example. Otherwise only brief indications are provided. File/folder-level description of this series of Rose Valland’s dossiers is now available in the ARBCS/RA Database.

2.1.1.2.8. Postwar Research Files – Miscellaneous

209SUP, Cartons 888–905

Most of the miscellaneous files within 18 cartons in this section were collected or prepared by Rose Valland. They have yet to be fully processed and described in more detail in a digital finding aid available on the website. Brief notes regarding selected files have been added on the basis of available description in the earlier ARBCS database, except for Cartons 892 and 893 (former RA 876) earlier examined by the compiler.

N.B. Five additional files listed briefly at the end of this section (current p. FR-227), as of Fall 2021, were not formally considered part of this series of Postwar Research Files.

The newly updated 2020 digital finding aid for these three small subseries of SCL book restitution files provide detailed list of individual names covered in Cartons *921–927, *1061–*1065, and *1100–*1111.

Lists names and addresses, number of CRA claims (if available), details about materials found and/or claimed, and year(s) of restitution.

N.B. The final subseries with Cartons *1100–1145 is also covered by an earlier inventory, listed at the beginning of that subseries below.

Only a few names and addresses are listed below as examples that appear on priority ERR library seizure lists and/or among owners of ERR Jeu de Paume processed collections, but there are undoubtedly more ERR victims included. They are listed below in the order they appear in the 2020 inventory.

209SUP, CARTONS *1061–*1065: SOUS-COMMISSION DES LIVRES (SCL)

The following five cartons contain numerous named restitution files for looted library books – predominantly for individuals and a few institutions or organizations. Only the very few names listed below can be matched to ERR priority seizure library lists, and two or three whose art collections were also seized with the Jeu de Paume art collections. Presumably, many of the seizures involved with these restitutions came in connection with the Möbel-Aktion or other German antisemitic programs.

209SUP, CARTONS *1100–*1145: SOUS-COMMISSION DES LIVRES (SCL)

This subseries of SCL records was added to the CRA Collection (now designated 209SUP) at the Quai d’Orsay in 2004. It is made up predominantly of individual name files for individual and institutional claims and restitution of books retrieved after the war. Since a large percentage of the books from institutional and personal libraries were seized by the ERR (including those seized by the M-Aktion), this series is of particular relevance to the fate of ERR loot. In a few cases, there may be references or copies of ERR documents among these files. This series includes some reports with details of contents for some of the French repatriation transports from ERR depots, such as the ZBHS collections in Tanzenberg in Austria (Carton *1129), some from Salzburg and Linz, and from Prague, as well as those that passed through the MCCP and Offenbach Archival Depot (OAD) in the U.S. Occupation Zone in Germany.
Finding Aid

[“… 209SUP. Répertoire numérique détaillé”]:

Online at: https://www.diplomatie.gouv.fr/IMG/pdf/Bibliotheques_pillees_-_dossiers_individuels_cle8c1a88.pdf.

This is probably based on a preliminary box list for the SCL series was initially prepared when it was still at the Quai d’Orsay as part of the CRA collection (now 209 SUP) covering the former Cartons RA *1100–1145.

N.B. See also the coverage for these 209SUP Cartons *1100–1145 in the afore-mentioned 2020 finding aid online at: https://www.diplomatie.gouv.fr/IMG/pdf/209sup_921-927_1061-1065_1100-1145_pour_site_web_coquilles_corrigees_cle8e171e.pdf.

Note the French title of this series suggests all relate to the preparation of Répertoire des Biens spoliés, vol. 7: Archives, manuscrits et livres rares (covering archives, rare books, and manuscripts). It would appear that many of these files, some containing copies of OBIP claims, were used by the Commissions on Choice and for attribution of owners in preparation for restitution, and in many cases, there are lists of books returned to their owners.

Only a few selected files are highlighted here, especially those covering individual or private institutional libraries, many known to have been among the priority seizures by the ERR. Many of those were also victims of art seizures, in which case parts of their libraries may well have gone to the Jeu de Paume. These serve as examples of the riches and details of the documents available in this series, many of which were drawn from OBIP claims files, and lists of books and manuscripts retrieved or those reported lost.134

2.1.1.4. CARD FILES (FICHIERS) FROM THE CRA COLLECTION (NOW 209SUP)

209SUP, CARTONS 738–887

The descriptions provided here are selective, based initially on examination by the compiler. Additional details have been added following reprocessing as indicated in the latest finding aid prepared at La Courneuve, which should be consulted for further details. Previous ‘RA’ signatures are included in parentheses for this series, because almost all of the carton numbers have been changed. Not all of the card files (fichiers) from the CRA collection have been identified as to their creator.

Online at: https://www.diplomatie.gouv.fr/IMG/pdf/Fichiers_CRA_et_autres_cle02ff52.pdf.
The title at the start of the file notes coverage to only Carton 809, but in fact there is brief coverage to Carton 887.

ACCESS – DIGITIZED CARTONS OF CARD FILES

Card files (fichiers) preceded by an asterisk (*) have been digitized and are accessible to researchers on dedicated computers in the Reading Room.

As of mid-2021, the following cartons have been digitized: Cartons *738–*809; *822–*856; *860–*867; and *872–*873
Digitization is planned for additional cartons at the rate of 20–25 per month. Card files not digitized as of mid-2021, including others listed below (given their often-fragile condition), are accessible only by special permission of the archivist in charge.

Cartons *738–*809: CRA Card Files of Works of Art Claimed by Owners, 1944–1949
Printed cards in French (with data typed) compiled on the basis of claims by owners of seized paintings, engravings, and drawings – with place and date of seizure of items, descriptions, and inventory numbers (OBIP claim numbers), some with ERR numbers. Includes several sub-files arranged by type of object and alphabetically. Cards with a red manuscript ‘R’ and other red markings indicate that the objects designated have been restituted to owners or heirs.

135 Earlier reports have suggested that the MAE Archives held a French-language copy of the ERR Jeu de Paume card file – the original German version of which, with about 21,000 cards, is now at the U.S. in NACP – but that is not the case. To clarify the MAE Archives card-file holdings, descriptions are provided here of all card files (fichiers) examined by this compiler de visu in April 2008 at the Quai d’Orsay. A few have been examined more recently in La Courneuve.
*738–*754: Paintings (including graphic arts) alphabetically by artist. (French database finding aid indicates alphabetical breakdown by cartons).

*755–*756: Paintings (including graphic arts) grouped by country or schools.
A final section in Carton 756 lists miniatures, manuscripts, rare books, maps, and miscellaneous documents grouped by country.

*757: Miniatures, manuscripts, rare books, maps, and miscellaneous pieces, by country or type of work.

*758–*760: Paintings and graphic art (including those not signed) by subject category and époque, etc.

*769, *783–*784, 794: Sculptures, grouped by period or artist, or geographic area.

*778–*779: Silverware

*786: Musical instruments

*797–*798: Jewelry

*780–*782: Miscellaneous objets d'art, glass, ceramics, porcelain, vases, and others.

*799: Tapestries

*800–*801: Rugs

*803–*805: Declarations of seizure and inventories of looted objects by owners (A–Z). (photos from Carton 803 are now held with Photographs, Cartons 991–992—see Section 2.1.1.6.)

*805–*807: David-Weill Collection

*807–*808: Bacri Collection

*808: Bronstein, Bruhl, Dreyfus, and Calmann-Levy Collections.

*809: Édouard de Rothschild Collection, cards arranged alphabetically within object category.

*810: Maurice de Rothschild Collection, inventories (with photos), covering a wide range of miscellaneous objects grouped by category, including jewelry, ceramics, porcelain, glass, clocks, and other antique objects and decorative arts.

Cartons 811–816:

811–812 (RA 811–812): Address Files of OBIP Claimants

*824–*826 (RA 823–824): German Purchases in France not repatriated
Files compiled by CRA, including purchases for Linz, paintings, sculptures, tapestries
  Some with photos remaining; some marked ‘R’ (restituted).
  *824 (RA 823): arranged by name of artist or school (paintings, drawings, engravings).
  *825–*826 (RA 823–824): arranged by categories (sculpture, carpets, and tapestries).

*827–*832 (RA 825–829), *868 (RA 856): Cards with data from ERR Inventories
Postwar French card file (fichier) of ERR confiscations (boxes labeled “Spoliations Rosenberg”), with partial data from ERR inventories (copies received from MCCP) for works of art, typewritten on French small cards (n.d. [ca. early 1950s]), with names of owners (some with addresses), with literal French translation of the German description. Grouped alphabetically by type of object.
  Paintings are arranged by artists with name of artist, title, and size, with ERR collection codes (including M-Aktion). Many of the cards provide identification of owners and addresses, with sources of data. The ERR depository destination is sometimes included (e.g. HANS, codename for Neuschwanstein). Additional handwritten notes give dates of repatriation from Germany to France; ‘R’ added in red pen for restitution to French owners (giving details). Cards also note if the work was destroyed or exchanged by the Germans.136
  *827 (RA 825): A–C
  *828 (RA 825): D–G
  *829 (RA 826): H–M
  *830 (RA 827): N–S
  *831 (RA 828): T–Z; and varia by century
  *832 (RA 829): French-school artists divided by school, period, and owners.

*833–*838, *839–*851 (RA 830–839): Repatriation from Germany
A file of paper slips (most in English) for art objects repatriated from Germany, with shipment numbers, dates, and repository (MCCP, Neuschwanstein, Baden-Baden, etc.), with names of artist, title, and repository registration numbers with dates, with indication of restitution details.
  *833–*834 (RA 830): Paintings (A–L).
  *837–*838 (RA 832): Ceramics porcelain, leatherwork.
  *839–*840 (RA 833): Tapestries, sculpture, and weapons.

  *848–*849 (RA 837): Books, manuscripts, porcelain, ceramics, silverware.
  *850–*851 (RA 838–839): English-language cards for objects from different zones, including furniture, sculpture, and miscellaneous objects.

---

136 Note that other, often more complete copies of those Property Art Cards, now held in the Bundesarchiv-Koblenz, Bestand B 323, can now be found in the MCCP Database on the website of the German Historical Museum in Berlin; English version at https://www.dhm.de/datenbank/ccp/dhm_ccp.php?seite=9&lang=en. Copies of the MCCP property cards in the U.S. OMGUS records are available online at https://www.fold3.com.
Cartons *852–*856 (RA 840–844): Repatriation from Germany (Fiches américaines)

Original U.S. Munich (MCCP) Property Cards Art (some carbon copies) for items repatriated to France. Data mostly in English, in numerical order by repository (or Munich) numbers. Many cards bear names of proprietors with ERR code numbers, repository names and numbers, with indication that some were still in ERR crates (unopened). Numbers within cartons are arranged by incoming convoy, and by MCCP and ERR repository number (with gaps).

*852 (RA 840): Neuschwanstein nos. 644–1221; Buxheim nos. 1–591; and Munich nos. 2–344 (Aussee 2/1–270/113).

*853 (RA 841): Munich no. 345 (Aussee 271/1) to Munich no. 1369 (Aussee 1163/45); almost all bear ERR codes and indications if photos are available.

*854 (RA 842): From Munich no. 1373 (Aussee 1175/1) to no. 10,847 (Aussee 6061).

*855 (RA 843): The first section contains Munich no. 10,848 (Aussee 6062) to Munich nos. 30,479 (with gaps), includes items from Altaussee, Herrenchiemsee, and other sites. An additional section contains French cards (same size as Munich ones) covering furniture “mobiliar (by type) – fichier RA,” but lacking ERR or Munich numbers.

*856 (RA 844): U.S. MCCP Property Cards starting with Munich no. 10,028 (Aussee 3244), listing books and manuscripts interspersed with sculpture and paintings, with some divided by type of object, in order of Munich number within types. For some manuscripts, each folio is on a separate card (e.g., Mü 362/Aussee 286/1–51), but other cards cover a box of 50 books, or a parcel of 9 books. Includes objects from Altaussee, Neuschwanstein, and a few from Kogl.

Cartons *857–*860 (RA 845–848): Card Files for French Convoys from US Zone in Germany covering objects returned:

*857 (RA 845): French paper slips from 1\(^{\text{st}}\) and 2\(^{\text{nd}}\) transport from Füssen to France (2\(^{\text{e}}\) convoi Füssen, Nov. 1945), the ERR railway depot for Neuschwanstein, although MCCP numbers were assigned (starting with Mü no. 649). Most slips have French titles and ERR code numbers. Also a few identified as “Dorotheum peintures A–F,” presumably associated the Dorotheum in Vienna.

*858 (RA 846): One-third contains more U.S. MCCP Property Cards for convoys from Füssen, covering furniture, paintings, sculptures, tapestries, all from Neuschwanstein and with Neuschwanstein numbers; most also have ERR code numbers. The other two-thirds are French slips for the 3\(^{\text{rd}}\) French Convoy from Füssen (Neuschwanstein – “Füssen 3\(^{\text{e}}\) convoi”), with two sets of numbers, the second set of which are ERR code numbers.

*859 (RA 847): Neuschwanstein card file arranged by number and category of objects, similar to U.S. MCCP Property Cards Art. A second card file covers the repository in Füssen.

*860 (RA 848): U.S. MCCP Property Cards Art for shipment to Paris from Buxheim, covering different types of artworks intermixed, with Munich (Mü) and Buxheim numbers. Most have ERR code numbers with owners indicated.

Cartons *861–*862 (RA 849–850): Cards for Convoys from French Zone in Germany

*861 (RA 849): French printed inventory cards from Baden-Baden CCP (similar in format to U.S. Property Cards Art) with printed heading “CCP de Baden-Baden – Fiche d’inventaire.” Inventory nos. 1–1102. A small final section has similar French cards for the French repository of Neustadt CCP Krupp (nos. 1001–1101). Printed cards have blanks filled in for owners, depot of origin, date, and destination, but do not bear ERR numbers because few of those had been seized by the ERR.

\(^{137}\) Note that many items returned directly to Paris from Füssen (Neuschwanstein) were assigned MCCP numbers.
*862 (RA 850): Inventory cards from Neustadt CCP Krupp. Continues nos. 1102–1357 with additional group nos. 1041–1208 (not sequential and with gaps). Covers paintings, tapestries, sculptures, and furniture, with indication of those restituted.

Cartons *863–*864 (RA 851–852): Entries from 39 ERR Photo Albums in U.S. possession (now in NACP)
Cards with entries from the U.S.-retrieved 39 ERR photo albums presented to Hitler with images of 2,013 art objects from French collections (see U.S. chapter, Section 10.1.8.3.1.), typed on French cards, most grouped by ERR codes, either the individual named collections or the M-Aktion paintings (MA-B) in French translation. (For copies of these cards Rose Valland received from Ardelia Hall, see 209SUP Carton 585/R44.)

Cartons *865–*867 (RA 853–855): Card Files of Repatriated Items
Card file of paintings, sculpture, furniture, and objets d'art registered by the ERR with ERR code numbers, details about the item, date, and convoy number to Paris.

Cartons 868–871 (RA 856–867): Various CRA Card Files 868 (RA 856): File of art objects registered by the ERR (furniture, porcelain, rugs, tapestries).
  – File of photographs of paintings sold by the Dorotheum (1940–1945).
  – File of tapestries held in MCCP, with details about the object, transfer dates, Munich numbers, arrival, exit at MCCP.
869 (RA 857): CRA file based on export files (paintings, sculptures, tapestries), alphabetically by artist, with data on transactions.
870–871 (RA 858): File on paintings, but difficult to use.

Cartons *872–*873 (RA 859–860):
French cards covering art objects retrieved from Baden-Baden, with entries for the organization or individual responsible for seizure (spoliateur) and from whom seized (spolié), organized by type of object (most decorative arts and miscellaneous). Includes OBIP numbers and dates of repatriation to the French government (marked “exit”), but not clear if they were returned to owners.
*872 (RA 859): Collections, scientific books, silver, jewels, pianos, and furniture.
*873 (RA 860): Furniture and museum pieces.

Cartons 874–877 (RA 861–863): Summary Files on Restituted objects (to 1950s)
(with references to OBIP numbers to 4079)

Cartons 878–881 (RA 864–867): Various Locator Files for Objects Restituted Abroad and Still Displaced Art 878 (RA 865): File of cultural items remitted to different foreign countries (German owners and owners in Belgium, Netherlands, USSR, Poland) with details of object, provenance, CCP nos., owner, date of transfer (to ca. 1949).
  – Card file on clocks (most returned), description, convoy number, and owner.
  – Baden-Baden card file on restitutions to Belgium, the Netherlands, and USSR (with provenance, artist, title of work, and card number) (to ca. 1949).
879 (RA 866): Locations in Axis countries of works of art purchased in France (from Aix-la-Chapelle [Aachen] to Hohenschwangau) with details of transactions and eventual owner.
880–881 (RA 867): Locations in Axis countries of works of art purchased in France (from Kamer to Zwickau) with details of transactions and eventual owner, including Göring (modifications to ca. 1955).
Cartons 882–887 (RA 868–870): Card Files for Plundered Books with OBIP numbers

Card files listing looted books, many of them correlated to Répertoire des biens spoliés, vol. 7; the first two boxes with ca. 3 x 5-inch cards (most groups handwritten on the back of printed cards from the Bibliothèque nationale from 1938 and 1939); on the basis of OBIP claims and with references to OBIP claim numbers.

882–884 (RA 868):
(1) Grouped alphabetically by title or subject, owners identified in the lower right corner; some cards cover sets up to 50 volumes.
(2) Cards separated into groups, such as “bindings [réliures]”; “collections”; journals (journaux et revues); and albums, etc.
(3) Address file with library, institutional, and individual phone numbers, used in book processing for restitution.

885–886 (RA 869): Carton marked “Fiches exclues du catalogue de Berlin,” as presumably contents were excluded from Répertoire des biens spoliés, vol. 7; some packets specifically marked as not included. However, some groups of cards have claim case numbers typed in (with OBIP claim numbers). Specific groups are identified from listed libraries, such as the collection of Jean (Hans) Fürstenberg (including incunabula), books from the Turgenev Library (Bibliothèque russe Tourgénieff), and others named on ERR library seizure lists.

887 (RA 870): Card file compiled by the Sous-Commission des Livres (SCL) concerning victims of library seizure. Large format cards with names and addresses of libraries plundered (both institutions and individuals), including listings by the SCL; alphabetical by owners’ names.
2.1.1.5. FRENCH POSTWAR CLAIMS FILES (FOR LOOTED CULTURAL PROPERTY)

2.1.1.1.1. CRA Claims, Cartons *1–73

ERR-Related Component

Individual claim files remain for most French Jews and other victims whose art collections were processed by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume in Paris, and for many others whose art, libraries, and archives were seized by the ERR or other German agents. Where such files have been identified, they are indicated in Column 10 of the chart in Appendix 1. Discrepancies may be found between the names and addresses of owners plundered and postwar addresses of owners, heirs, or their attorneys named in CRA or OBIP claims; hence, accurate coordination is not always possible.

These CRA claims files also represent many of the same or additional institutions or individuals whose library or music collections were seized by other ERR units. Many may be represented by art collections that went into the ERR Unknown (Unbekannt, UNB) collection, or that came to the ERR through seizures by the Möbel-Aktion and were consequently assigned ERR codes in the M-Aktion collections in the Jeu de Paume. Recently the Jeu de Paume Database (based in Washington, DC) has identified the owners of many of the art objects seized by the ERR that are in the UNB and M-Aktion collections; those will now be found in the database. 138

Many of the same names for victims of art seizure will also be found on ERR seizure lists for books or musicalia that were processed elsewhere by the ERR or the M-Aktion. Accordingly, many of the files contain copies of ERR seizure receipts or other documents, working inventories or lists of losses from the owners, or contemporary attestations of seizure.

Noticeably, many other institutions or families filed claims for plundered belongings that were seized or confiscated by other German agencies, rather than by the ERR. Many books and archives, for example, were seized by the Gestapo, or the SD (Security Service), and went to RSHA collections, rather than those of the ERR. Still other items were lost through forced sales or Aryanization proceedings, or otherwise looted during the war.

Photographs: In most cases, photographs originally included in individual claims files were separated out and placed in albums within the photographic series described above (Cartons 933–1044). Sometimes, cross-references are provided. Many such photographs of artworks processed in the Jeu de Paume may supplement or confirm those that appear online in the Jeu de Paume database at: https://www.errproject.org/jeudepaume/.

Access

Most of these files, listed by number and name of claimant, are now freely open to researchers with online finding aids. Given French privacy laws, before 2008, most claims files were closed to public research, accessible only to archivists at AMAE and to researchers with written permission from owners or heirs to specific files. The 2008 French archival law lowered the period of closure to 50 years from the date of creation.

138 “Cultural Plunder by the Einsatzstab Reichsleiter Rosenberg (ERR): Database of Art Objects at the Jeu de Paume” is a project of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany (Claims Conference), directed by Marc Masurovsky with technical assistance from the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (USHMM): https://www.errproject.org/jeudepaume/ (see the U.S. chapter, Section 10.2.3.).
2.1.1.5.1. CRA CLAIMS FILES (DOSSIERS DES PROPRIÉTAIRES SPOILIÉS)

209SUP: CARTONS *1–73

After its establishment in November 1944, the CRA kept working files for owners or institutional proprietors whose cultural property (art, furniture, jewels, books, and archives, among other items) had been plundered or otherwise confiscated by the Germans during the occupation. Separate files include those for public institutions such as museums (Musée de Malmaison, Musée du Luxembourg, etc.), semi-public institutions such as the Polish Library in Paris (Bibliothèque polonaise de Paris), the Turgenev Russian Library (Bibliothèque russe Tourgénieff), the Petliura Ukrainian Library, or the Alliance israélite universelle, and private gallery owners, dealers specializing in art, books, and antiquities, families, and individuals, including many households whose furnishings (including works of art and books) were removed by the Möbel-Aktion. Files likewise remain for most of the individuals, especially Jews and Masons whose art collections and libraries were plundered by the ERR or other Nazi agencies. It should be noted, however, that OBIP (SBIP after 1953) was the primary government agency servicing claims files for individual French citizens. Hence for many institutional and individual victims of wartime plunder, postwar claims were first filed with OBIP. However, because the CRA was initially processing wartime-looted cultural property retrieved after the war from 1944 to 1949 (property both found in France and/or repatriated from abroad), the CRA took over many of the OBIP files containing claims for cultural property, and/or portions or copies thereof.

Some of the individual files may contain only a single letter of inquiry and a reply from the CRA, but others consist of lengthy formal claims for plundered cultural property, with subsidiary files with inventories, supporting documentation (such as appraisals, attestations, and related correspondence with French restitution offices, including OBIP, the CRA, and the Commission on Choice), and formal restitution transfer documents and receipts. In some cases, the files have one or more subdivisions for correspondence and inventories. Occasional files contain copies of ERR or other wartime seizure inventories, although the inventories found here were usually ones compiled by or for the owners, and hence should be checked against ERR inventories.

Some other CRA files, especially starting in mid-1946 (i.e. above the number 46.632.1656), contain inventories of losses compiled by OBIP and correspondence relating to communication with owners, when they could be located. Some of the inventories and documents from these OBIP or CRA files were submitted to the U.S. Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives (MFA&A) section of the U.S. Office of Military Government in Germany (OMGUS) for claims; hence copies of the original claims will be found among claims files in OMGUS records in the U.S. National Archives in College Park (NACP) or TVK records in the Bundesarchiv Koblenz. However, the CRA and OBIP files are likely to contain more extensive documentation from restitution proceedings.

The CRA claims files were recently reprocessed in La Courneuve as a separate series within 209SUP and are now arranged in 73 archival cartons numbered 1–73. Within the cartons, individual files are not arranged alphabetically, but rather by numbers in order of receipt of the first communication from the owner. File numbers start with the last two digits of the year the file was opened, followed by a number in the sequence of files for that specific year; those starting in 1946 bear an additional number denoting its place in the total sequence of cumulative claims starting in 1945. Thus Cartons 1–39 contain the claims submitted in 1945, numbered 1–1024 (from 1/45.01 through 39/45.1024). Cartons 40–56 include the 680 claims submitted in 1946; following the carton number and year, numbers run from 1–680, followed by a second number of the claim in the total sequence of those received (from 40/46.1.1025 through 56/46.680.1704). Claims for 1947 numbered similarly start in Carton 56 (from 56/47.1.1705 through 62/47/275.1979), and so forth.

The names and address of the owners usually appear on the file folders. In many cases, however, the names may belong to the legal heirs (ayants droit—often indicated as “Succession”) of owners no longer living, who died or perished in the Holocaust, frequently presented by an attorney representing the family or firm seeking restitution. In some cases, heirs may have had a different family name, and in a few cases, the ERR inventories used names of family members no longer living when the collection was seized, but who had been responsible for acquiring the collection. Similarly, addresses may be postwar addresses within France or abroad. Consequently, the owners plundered or addresses from which their belongings were seized are not always immediately obvious, and often do not correspond to those listed in German seizure documents. The newly expanded 2019 AMAE-La Courneuve online finding aid (publicly available on the Internet) identifies files for all of the individual claimants.

Finding Aid

The new 2019 online finding aid lists individual claim files within cartons, including the CRA carton and dossier number, full name of claimant, with additional data, listing documents and titles of files within, and inclusive dates of documents included. Indexing of data from these files is underway at La Courneuve.

ACCESS

Cartons preceded by an asterisk (*) have been digitized and are accessible to researchers on dedicated computers in the Reading Room. In this series, only Cartons *1 and *12bis have been digitized; the rest may be ordered in their original paper versions.
2.1.1.5.2. OBIP CLAIMS FILES
(Dossiers individuels déposés à l’Office des biens et intérêts privés)

209SUP: Cartons 591–705; 726–737:
Dossiers de réclamation nominatifs (personal name files)

Starting immediately after the war, individuals and private institutional claimants normally filed claims for cultural property losses with the government agency that handled such matters, the Office of Private Property and Interests (Office des biens et intérêts privés, OBIP). As a government agency for dealing with individual French citizens abroad and French personal property abroad, OBIP continued to operate under the auspices of the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs. As noted earlier, because CRA was handling the retrieval and restitution arrangements for cultural property (both art and libraries), claims files developed for owners with both OBIP and CRA. In many cases OBIP forwarded claims files (or copies of relevant portions) to CRA, but within the CRA records, OBIP claims files were maintained as a separate series. Hence the extent of copies of both versions within the current 209SUP collection.

Following the official disbandment of the CRA in 1949, OBIP continued to carry out many CRA functions, including restitution processing based on individual and private institutional claims. While CRA was handling restitution (until the end of 1949), most of the relevant correspondence would be filed in the CRA claim files. Nevertheless, a large portion of OBIP claims files remained with the CRA collection. Since the move to La Courneuve they have been processed and described as a separate series, all of which is now open for public access in the reading room.

These files include individual and institutional claims bearing numbers from 28006 through 56022 with many gaps, because these cartons include claims primarily relating only to cultural property, although some looted jewels and household furnishings are frequently covered as well.

It should be noted that it was the OBIP claims files that were used as the basis for the published series of registers of French wartime losses – Répertoire des biens spoliés en France durant la guerre 1939–1945, 8 vols. with supplements. ([Berlin], 1947–1952); OBIP claim numbers are cited for listings in those volumes (see Section 2.1.1.6.3.).

Additional OBIP claims files, and other segments of OBIP records that remained in the MAE Nantes facility have been transferred to La Courneuve, where reprocessing is underway.
Finding Aid

The online finding aid lists the full names of both individual and institutional claimants for cultural property with the OBIP claim number and dates covered. These include owners of the major French Jewish-owned art collections processed by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume, as well as other wartime cultural losses. Cartons 591–598 cover mostly looted libraries, while Cartons 686–705 and 726–737 cover libraries exclusively. Some library losses were from state ministries, local and communal libraries, other state, academic, and private institutional collections (including Masonic lodges), as well as many personal private libraries.
2.1.1.6. Photographs
(Extracted from Textual Files, Including Claims)

209SUP, Cartons *933–*1044 (unused numbers: 941–961)

The photographs in this subseries of cartons listed below were earlier removed from the textual records within the 209SUP collection (earlier CRA/RA) and are now arranged separately in albums with separate glassine sleeves in cartons with captions and related documentation, if available. The largest portion drawn from the CRA and OBIP claims files for art and other culture objects.

The photographs are now organized by name of collection owners and predominantly comprise images furnished by individual families or organizations with their OBIP or CRA claims, as well as those taken from the general 209SUP records. Some of them were printed as images in Répertoire des biens spoliés, vol. 2 and supplements. Captions or identification notes are available for some, but for many individual images regrettably now lack captions. The box number from which the photographic prints were pulled is often indicated (earlier RA numbers), but full captions or reconstruction of their source or location and their context in their parent files of textual records would now be exceedingly difficult to establish.

The entire collection has recently been digitized for research availability, but many images lack complete captions or further identification. Many are referenced only with the name of the individual or institutional owner of named French collections.

Some of the photographs submitted with individual or institutional claims illustrate works of art seized by or on behalf of the ERR, many of which were processed by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume. In most cases, however, cross-references are lacking to the ERR codes assigned for objects in those French Jewish collections, corresponding to the ERR inventories listed above and noted in the charts in Appendix 1.139

Noticeably, however, these files also include images of many works of art that were not seized by the ERR, and therefore were not processed in the Jeu de Paume. Hence, they may or may not be included in the Jeu de Paume (JdP) Database, or they may involve additional works of art that have been added later to the JdP Database.

Nevertheless, many of these images – including those for works of art not processed in the Jeu de Paume – correspond to the 30,000 works of art now included in the ERR Project JdP Database. It is to be hoped that eventually more of these images can also be added to the database, perhaps as alternates, but especially to provide images for entries now lacking them.

139 The online Jeu de Paume Database for the ERR collections currently includes only images prepared during the war by the ERR, reproduced from the ERR Fotothek in the Bundesarchiv-Koblenz (Bestand B323), along with some additional remaining ERR images found in the U.S. National Archives in College Park and the Central Institute for Art History in Munich.
Finding Aid

“Récupération artistique: Inventaire des albums de photographies (209SUP/933 à 1044).”

The current online La Courneuve finding aid lists all family or institutional names included in each carton. References in the text below indicate the alphabetical range of names included in each carton. A copy of the same inventory is also available on the computers in the La Courneuve Reading Room, where the digital copies of the photographs may be consulted.

See also Appendix 1 (Table 1) of this Guide, which gives correlated listings of archival sources for French Jewish art collections processed by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume. 209SUP carton numbers containing related photographs for individual collections have been added to the extent possible. That table also lists archival locations – in Germany (Bundesarchiv in Koblenz) and/or the U.S. (National Archives in College Park, MD) – for other photographs of works of art in the ERR French Jewish collections.

(Rose Valland – Baden-Baden)

Repositories in Germany: Baden-Baden, e.g., “Schloss favorite” (with some sample art objects); Buxheim (with English captions, from U.S.); Saarbruck; Neustadt; Neuwied; Munich: MCCP (with RA nos.), art, photos of CCP (with English captions); Neuschwanstein postcards and photos of evacuation (fall 1945).

Austria: Altaussee – Seehotel; Bad Wildungen (3 missing paintings acquired in France); Klessheim (U.S. Forces Austria) – inventory with photos.

Belgium: Bains l’Alleud.

Repositories used for art evacuated from French museums (marked with cross-reference to earlier Cartons RA 849–850): châteaux de Montal, Souches, Chambord, Valençay, Brissac; Louvre (1940–1944), packing for evacuation; loading Edouard Rothschild collections at château de Ferrière-en-Brie; Paris: Jeu de Paume – lion shot down and barbed wire; ex libris of Hermann Göring (many used in Rose Valland book).

Baden-Baden CCP: pictures of paintings, most with numbers, or with Wiesbaden CCP numbers; “inventaire BIA” (Office of Art Investigation). Some with sale records from Lepke, Lange, and Böhler (Munich).
2.1.1.7. VERSEMENT 20160007AC (COMPLÉMENTAIRE 2015):
SERVICE DES BIBLIOTHÈQUES, DES ARCHIVES ET DE LA DOCUMENTATION GÉNÉRALE DES MUSÉES DE FRANCE (AMN)
SPOLIATIONS ALLEMANDES, RÉCUPÉRATION ARTISTIQUE, 1939–2009
[COLLECTION FROM THE ARCHIVES OF FRENCH NATIONAL MUSEUMS WITH DOCUMENTATION FROM THE ERR OCCUPATION OF THE JEU DE PAUME]

67 articles in 14 cartons (files 1–53); 13 rolls of fragile microfilm in carton 14 (not currently available to readers); 1 box (hunting trophy); and 1 dossier.

A collection of 16 cartons (with ‘articles’ [usually files within] numbered 1–67) transferred by the Service of French Museums (February 2016) from the Archives of the National Museums (AMN) held until 2015 in the Louvre with documentation relating to the ERR occupation of the Jeu de Paume and the fate of ERR wartime looted cultural valuables. Includes ERR guard registers with daily entries from the Jeu de Paume signed with passwords by ERR staff with names of the officer and three or four guards. Some postwar documents include address notebooks and registers for mail from CRA with names and/or addresses of victims of looting, inquiry files of the CRA and the Service for Return of Works of Art intended for restitution (Service de remise en place des œuvres d’art, SRPOA), under the French High Commissariat, and the copies of the volume of Répertoire des biens spoliés that were annotated by Rose Valland and others.

2.1.2. Office des biens et intérêts privés (OBIP)

[Office of Private Property and Interests]

The Office of Private Property and Interests (OBIP) was created by decrees in July 1917 and December 1919, organized at the end of the First World War to collect individual declarations and deal with the identification and retrieval of private property that had come under enemy control, along with other related interests of French citizens abroad. Reactivated (by decrees in October and November 1939), following Liberation at the end of the Second World War in December 1944, OBIP was assigned the tasks of gathering claims, and identifying, retrieving, and restituting property seized by the enemy in France and alienated abroad during German occupation. The agency was placed jointly under the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Ministry of Finance.

OBIP processed claims for lost property received from French individuals and organizations, sent out experts to locate French property (including cultural property) plundered from state as well as from private individuals and institutions presumably located abroad, and assisted in restitution proceedings for repatriated property to individuals and organizations.

Following the closing down of the Commission for Recovery of Art (CRA) at the end of 1949, OBIP took over CRA operations regarding cultural retrieval, repatriation, and restitution processing. OBIP was accordingly in charge of key cultural restitution proceedings during 1950–1952. Hence OBIP worked closely with the eight Commissions de choix [Commissions on Choice] (December 1949–December 1953) that handled allocation of cultural property retrieved, restitution, or alternate disposition, four of which dealt with books. 141 Accordingly, OBIP records contain files relating to these proceedings and the subsequent restitution, assignment of items to the MNR collection, or sales of retrieved cultural property by the state agency Domaines. Such files may be expected to contain significant data about identification and attribution efforts (or lack thereof), subsequent allocation, and hence the fate of cultural property retrieved from abroad that was not restituted to owners or heirs. 142

In December 1953, OBIP was reestablished as the Service for Private Property and Interests (Service des biens et intérêts privés, SBIP), continuing effectively until 1955. When OBIP was closed down as a separate agency in 1955, its functions were reorganized under the Directorate of Economic Affairs (Direction des affaires économiques), where it functioned until 1967.

Before 2010, all of the OBIP records were held in the MAE Centre for Diplomatic Archives in Nantes (Centre des archives diplomatiques de Nantes, CADN), except the series of OBIP claims files (predominantly for cultural property) that were transferred to CRA for prospective postwar retrieval and restitution and remained within the CRA Collection (now 209SUP, Cartons 591–705). In 2010 all of the OBIP records were transferred to La Courneuve, where many of them are still being reprocessed for public availability.

142 Of particular importance is the revealing discussion of these issues by Isabelle Le Masne de Chermont (above notes 25 and 26, and 29) and in several chapters of the 2013 study by Corinne Bouchoux, “Si les tableaux pouvaient parler...,” above note 27.

Access

Since the OBIP records were transferred to La Courneuve in 2010 from CADN, archival processing and description continues.

As of 2021, only documents in 13BIP, and only those 50 or more years from their creation, are open for limited public research. Other files may have restrictions, if they contain private information on documents created less than 50 years ago. Temporary delivery problems may be encountered for many files, especially those newly opened for public research.

Finding Aids

A finding aid for public research in 13BIP is being completed in mid-2021 and will soon be available online. Current finding aids are available (most in PDF files) in the on-site reference system (MNESYS) for those series for which reprocessing has been completed and that are open for public access.

Survey (Published)

Provides a brief agency history and survey of OBIP holdings in Nantes. Later chapters on research regarding specific subjects provide additional scattered comments on the OBIP archives, with illustrations of the types of documents to be found there, and other parts of the OBIP records held elsewhere.

2.1.2.2. 13BIP: OFFICE DES BIENS ET INTÉRÊTS PRIVÉS (OBIP):

SERVICE DES SPOLIATIONS ALLEMANDES EN FRANCE (SPAF), 1945–1960

[SERVICE FOR GERMAN SPOILATION IN FRANCE]

434 numbered cartons (394 cartons with 29,900 individual name files; 1 carton with files of general matters; 10 cartons of registers; and 29 boxes of card files). ca. 4.5 linear meters.

This OBIP series contains documents from offices of SPAF, charged with handling declarations by individuals of assets seized by the Germans in France during wartime occupation. Assets covered included movable as well as unmovable property, covering works of art in various categories, financial assets, and also industrial goods. Declarations could be filed by a physical person possessing the lost items, or a delegated authority such as a banking establishment.

ACCESS

As of December 2021, documents 50 years old or more may be open to the public.

Finding Aids

Online at: Available in the on-site reference system (MNESYS) – “MNESYS MN–13BIP.pdf.”

As of mid-2021, the revised, more extensive finding aid will soon be online, providing a more detailed breakdown of included files in individual cartons, and a name list covering the 29,000 name files, based on the earlier SPAF Database from Nantes, which has now been transformed into the 13BIP finding aid:

“Spoliations allemandes en France (SPAF) Base de données informatisée.”

The Excel data files, including name files (fichiers nominatifs) of OBIP claimants – and items reported missing that had been seized and suspected as having been taken out of France – Excel SPAF98.xls – earlier prepared in Nantes.

395: Lists of files for German seizures in France opened by OBIP – State of registered files (registration no., file no., observations).
– Register for registration of individual files (SPAF no. and individual name)
  nos. 30001–47538; nos. 47500–53999; nos. 54000–58100.
– Register for registration of “Jewels, American Zone.”
– Lists of files for foreigners.

396–405: Registers of declarations (following the Regulation [arrêté] of 16 April 1945).
Vols. 1–9: In order of date and registration number, vol. 1 (15 June–30 Oct. 1945) through vol. 9
  (nos. 17417–19442).

406–434: Card files (alphabetical by names of persons registered)
See breakdown of individual carton contents in PDF finding aid.

SERVICE DES BIENS PRÉEXISTANTS (1939–1998)
[SERVICE FOR PREEXISTING ASSETS]

52.96 linear metres; 507 cartons (including 31 with general documents); 474 name files; along with card files and registers.

This OBIP series was produced by offices that handled declarations by individuals of their preexisting property assets seized in a belligerent country. Coverage includes moveable goods such as furniture or other cultural property, immovable property such as buildings or industrial installations, and stock or other financial assets. The files are divided by country: Germany, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Poland, Romania, Yugoslavia, and other countries (in alphabetical order).
Declarations cover real estate, including business properties, financial obligations and bank accounts, and other possessions. Cultural property, including art objects and furniture may be included, but will be found mixed in with industrial, commercial, and other non-cultural items.

2.1.2.4. 17BIP: Office des Biens et Intérêts Privés (OBIP):
Berlin, 1939–1953

11.70 linear meters; 104 articles.

This OBIP series comprises the records of the OBIP General Delegation in Germany with its office in Berlin. Its functions involved the location and identification of the assets of French citizens and institutions that were located in Berlin on the basis of claims or requests for information sent from OBIP in Paris and the Strasbourg delegation.

Named files of claimants are arranged in alphabetical dossiers (articles).

2.1.2.5. 22BIP: Office des Biens et Intérêts Privés (OBIP):

11.80 linear metres; 92 articles.

This series of OBIP records will be of particular interest for research about wartime cultural plunder and postwar retrieval and restitution. The series contains files dealing with the restitution process for cultural assets seized by German occupation forces and transferred abroad.\footnote{145}{This was one of the main series of OBIP records utilized in Nantes by Corinne Bouchoux for her monograph, “Si les tableaux pouvaient parler...”; see above note 25. Specific files Bouchoux consulted for her doctoral dissertation are listed in the bibliography of the dissertation version at HAK https://tel.archives-ouvertes.fr/tel-00951875. However, since the OBIP records have been reprocessed after transfer to La Courneuve in 2010, exact correlation with present ‘article’ numbers has not been possible.}

Articles 1–18 contain more general documentation, which is described in somewhat more detail in the PDF finding aid. Articles 19–62 cover the retrieval, repatriation, and restitution processing of assets located abroad. Most of the files do not include many cultural assets, although some of the more specific named Belgian files (Articles 55–60) may include some materials seized by the ERR, such as items taken from Belgian Masonic lodges as well as art from private individuals (see Article 56, for example).

Articles 63–84 are described in more detail, especially the series covering “Restitution of works of art and cultural objects, 1904–1980.” Included there, for example, are records of the Commissions on Choice, including the compte-rendus of Commission meetings (1949–1953); official restitution receipts for items identified and returned to their owners or heirs; documents on transfer of works of art to Domaines for sale; and bulletins of the Domaines sales (1948–1956). Since OBIP was dealing with restitution to owners in France after closing down of CRA in 1949, these files are key sources for tracing the fate of cultural valuables seized by the ERR, many of which have yet to return to their prewar owners or heirs.

2.1.2.6. 27BIP: Office des Biens et intérêts privés (OBIP):
République fédérale Allemagne et Allemagne réunifiée,
1939–2003 [Federal Republic of Germany and Reunified Germany]

48 cartons.

This series – specified as an OBIP series dealing with the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) – contains records of the MAE central administrative offices dealing with OBIP matters. These include files relating to looted cultural assets and related negotiations with Germany on restitution and compensation issues, as well as files on other subjects, including forced labor.

Access
As of mid-2021, this series is still being reprocessed at La Courneuve, and will require preparation of an inventory before the files can be opened for public research. Files postdating 1990 are not yet accessible.

Finding Aid
As of mid-2021 an inventory for this series is not available.

2.1.2.7. 437QO (earlier 28BIP): OBIP: Répertoire des biens spoliés
Durant la guerre, 1939–1945
[Copies of the Printed French Registers of War Losses]

10 cartons.

On the basis of OBIP claims, starting in 1947, French occupation authorities in Germany issued a multi-volume series of registers providing a compendium of lost property of all types, printed for limited circulation. Noticeably, these volumes listed items claimed but not yet restituted by the time of publication, and hence did not cover all of the items removed from France. See full bibliographic details and announcement of the online version (see Section 2.0.2.2. – B[4]).

Répertoire des biens spoliés en France durant la guerre 1939–1945. 8 vols. with Removed from France during the War 1939–1945. Added German and Russian titles.
The Rose Valland website provides PDF files for the entire series.
Updated working copies of volume 2 and supplements covering missing works of art with penciled annotations by Rose Valland assistants, partially through 1965, with notes regarding repatriation to France and/or in many cases, restitution to the owners of individual items. The original annotated volumes are now in La Courneuve (see Section 2.1.1.7. – 20160007AC, articles 25, 26, 28, and 30).
Finding Aid

Cartons 1–8: Each of the ten cartons contains a printed copy of a single volume, 1–8. Of relevance to the subject of this Guide are the following (all online, soon to be upgraded – see above Section 2.0.2.2.2.):

2: Vol. 2: Tableaux, tapisseries et sculptures / Paintings, tapestries and sculpture. Contains an alphabetical index of painters. Online at: http://www2.culture.gouv.fr/documentation/mnr/RBS/T_2.pdf. Most relevant for looted art, lists selected looted art objects with, short titles, artists, names of owners, OBIP claim numbers, and some with photographs. Two copies are preserved, one with photographs. Three supplements were subsequently published (see Carton 9).

9: Objets d’art, 1er supplément aux tomes II, III et IV; 2e supplément aux tomes II, III et IV; Objets d’art et livres rares, 3e supplément aux tomes II, III, IV et VII; all online at the same website (soon to be upgraded – see above Section 2.0.2.2.2.)

10: Contains an unnumbered volume listing pure-bred horses seized in France.
2.1.3. Archives de l’Occupation française en Allemagne (ZFO)

[Records of French Occupation in Germany]

ca. 8 linear kilometers.

These ZFO records were created by offices of the French Occupation Authorities in Germany (1945–1949) and Austria (1945–1955), as well as the French Military Government in Berlin (1945–1952), together with those of the Tripartite occupation agencies (France, the United States, and Great Britain). Formerly held in the AMAE repository in Colmar (1952–2010), these voluminous records have been reprocessed since transfer to La Courneuve. Most of the series and file numbers have been changed, and many still lack detailed user-friendly finding aids to assist researcher access.

Documents from French offices in the French Zone of Occupation in Austria form a separate series within the ZFO records, but are not described below.

For the French Occupation Zone in postwar Germany, within the French Group of the Control Council (Groupe français du conseil de contrôle, GFCC), the Reparations and Restitution Division (Division Réparations-Restitutions) was in charge of retrieval and repatriation of French property, restitution of German property, and repatriation of property belonging to other countries found in the French Zone. Relevant files contain documents resulting from research regarding claims from different foreign countries, evaluation, and restitution transfers (when items were located), along with considerable related correspondence. It should be noted however, that some of the related research reports and correspondence files regarding claims from abroad, and even some copies of claims themselves, will be found in what is now the 209SUP complex (Section 2.1.1.), coming from offices headed by Rose Valland in Baden-Baden and Berlin.

Finding Aids

Adequately detailed finding aids that identify or specifically point the researcher to cultural property are currently not available for all subseries, although in many instances older inventories from Colmar are gradually being reprocessed in La Courneuve. In some instances, it is difficult to find precise correlation tables for earlier file signatures as per their arrangement in Colmar. Detailed series of finding aids in notebook format are available for some series in the La Courneuve Inventory Room. However, at the start, researcher consultation with the responsible archivist is to be recommended.

ARCHIVES DES SERVICES FRANÇAIS D’OCCUPATION EN ALLEMAGNE (ZFO)

[RECORDS OF FRENCH OCCUPATION IN GERMANY]

Within the records of the French Zone of Occupation in Germany (ZFO Allemagne), the most relevant files relating to cultural retrieval, foreign claims, and restitution (or repatriation) will be found within the records from the General Directorate of Economic and Financial Affairs (Direction générale des Affaires économiques et financières, AEF). In most cases however, even within that series and its subseries (and certainly in other series) files or documents relating to foreign looted cultural property are not arranged in separate files or subseries. Usually in currently available finding aids, there are no indications of the existence of such documents within the files. Even in office lists or registers of files, or a single incoming or outgoing register will list intermixed documents dealing with industrial, commercial, and other types of property, together with cultural objects, and even horses and wine.

Listings are also given below for two of the series of files representing the records produced in the two German Länder within the French Zone, namely the Rhineland Palatinate, with its capital in Mainz, and the Land of South Baden (German Südbaden, French Bade-Sud) – later part of Baden-Württemberg – in which the French had their Occupation Headquarters in Baden-Baden. Rose Valland’s offices were located there, and French authorities also established their major ‘Collecting Point’ and restitution processing center for cultural property (parallel to those in the British and American Zones). More of the records of the offices under Valland’s supervision handling the location, identification, retrieval, and where possible repatriation of cultural property, are likely found intermixed among the files in the 209SUP collection, than in the ZFO records.

On the provincial level, some relevant files result from French efforts, similar to those in the American and British Zones, searching for and frequently finding a significant quantity of foreign works of art, library books, and other cultural property of questionable provenance in local libraries and museums, or in private hands. The French also inspected castles and monasteries, churches and mines, along with other buildings that had served as evacuation sites during the war, repositories where the Germans had stored cultural property evacuated from archives, libraries, and museums in major cities; in some cases, foreign loot may have been intermixed. A few files listed as examples below came from special search missions in local museums, libraries or other public buildings, and also private living quarters, where they frequently found cultural property of questionable provenance, including foreign works of art and library books, among other items. Some such items may have been purchased or confiscated by N-S agencies during the war from German Jews who were fleeing the country or were deported; others were ‘trophy’ brought home in German soldiers’ knapsacks, possibility looted abroad or purchased illegally. In major German museums, the French found important works of art purchased abroad, or loot that had been seized abroad and deposited by N-S agencies.

Documents relating to cultural property handled by the French Military Government office in the French Sector of Berlin (GMFB) may be found in the separate subseries for the French Sector in Berlin. But again, files from Rose Valland’s and the French staff handling cultural retrieval and restitution in Berlin would most likely be found in the 209SUP collection, while some will also be found among the OBIP records described above.

Documents from parallel French offices in the French Zone of Occupation in Austria form a separate series not described below.

2.1.3.1. SÉRIE AEF:

DIRECTION GÉNÉRALE DES AFFAIRES ÉCONOMIQUES ET FINANCIÈRES

[GENERAL DIRECTORATE FOR ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL AFFAIRS]

Within this series, many of the most important files relating to foreign claims and restitution are organized by foreign claimant country containing both foreign claims and out-shipments. In many instances subseries of files grouped alphabetically by country contain claims and related correspondence on specific cases, as is apparent in some of the examples described below. Such groupings, however, are not so indicated in the current folder-level inventories available. Noticeably, data regarding cultural restitution in many files, including claims files, correspondence, transfer papers, and shipping lists are intermixed with non-cultural materials.

2.1.3.1.1. 1AEF – AFFAIRES ÉCONOMIQUES ET FINANCIÈRES / 1ER VERSEMENT, 1945–1955

Finding Aids

Printouts of the multiple inventory segments are available in notebook format (Inventory Room, shelf 14). Current signatures for individual files appear to the left of file descriptions, while the former Colmar numeration is provided on the right.

Example of relevant files:

1AEF/266: Restitution of works of art seized in France, 1952–1957.

Includes diverse documents involving different individual cases, including art objects being returned to France, requests for restitution or indemnity, reports on specific cases, and administrative communications between French (Rose Valland and SRPOA) and German (TVK) restitution authorities, 1952–1954.
2.1.3.1.2. 2AEF – AFFAIRES ÉCONOMIQUES ET FINANCIÈRES / 2E VERSEMENT, 1945–1955

4172 articles.

The files described as examples in this series below contain information about individual claims for looted cultural objects submitted to French restitution authorities, most of them arranged by claimant country (in alphabetical order of French country names). Those described here are from groupings of processing files containing incoming claims together with related correspondence, inquiries, with reports on searches for specific claims. Other groups of files contain data on outgoing restitution shipments. In all cases, cultural items are interspersed with commercial, industrial goods, and even livestock and wine. Separate sequences containing all the incoming claims or outgoing transfers for different countries are not specified, as these types of documents appear to be intermixed in existing files.

Note that registers of works of art of French provenance being processed in Baden-Baden are to be found in 209SUP, some of which may also contain items of foreign provenance. However, many fewer works of art were found after the war in the ZFO than was the case in the U.S. Zone. As a result, French restitution services did not establish the same type of Central Collecting Points, such as Munich CCP and Wiesbaden CCP in the U.S. Zone, nor did they use individual ‘property cards art’ as were used in MCCP and WCCP.

“Inventaire: Articles 1 à 2666.” 295 p.
“Inventaire: Articles 3815 à 4170.” 86 p.
“Table de concordance, Articles 1 à 4172.” 93 p.

A paper copy of the printout in a loose-leaf binder is available (Inventory Room, shelf 14), but some pages are missing. Individual files (dossiers) are listed – in some series under rubrics of claimant country, with type of object and location if found. Cultural objects are intermixed with electric motors, industrial materials, and even animals; claims forms, correspondence, and requests for research are often intermixed. No subject guidelines are provided to orient researchers by type of cases or subject categories, which in many cases are intermixed, making it extremely difficult to locate potentially relevant files, to locate the processing file for a specific claim, or to follow the process of a specific claim within the massive complex.

N.B. Inventory listings provide only earlier Colmar numbers, and hence, until a new inventory is available, must be verified in the ‘Table de concordance’ for the current numbers needed to order articles in the on-site computer system (MNESYS).

Examples of potentially relevant files:
Given the current finding aids available both the current article numbers (in bold) and the earlier Colmar numbers (in parentheses) are provided below.
Several groups of files containing claims, correspondence, and related inquiries from foreign countries, grouped together alphabetically by French name of country.

Belgium: claims and correspondence concerning returns, including archives, paintings, and books, among industrial products, trucks, fur coats, and wine.

Greece: claims for cultural property seized, books, paintings, carpets, coins, and ancient antiquities, coins, and jewels, including:
- Nazi-looted 4th c. BC marble statue [Aphrodite (Venus)] and “Lion of Kythera (Cythère).”

Italy: claims for art objects not yet located, 1950.

Netherlands: claims, inquiries, and related correspondence for various cultural objects, including paintings, books, furniture, carpets, porcelain, pianos, and coins.

Luxembourg: claims for various cultural property, antique furniture, paintings, sculptures, other art objects, and a piano.

Norway: claims for art treasures with correspondence, including:
- Masonic Grand Lodge of Norway, claim for portraits of Swedish King Oscar II and Charles XV, and 4,000–4500 books including a rare Bible, seized by the SD.
- Elsa Lie of Oslo, claim for two paintings seized in Riga.
- Claim for exhibits seized from the Oslo Army Museum.

Poland: claims and locations, mostly industrial; a few claims for art and archeological objects interspersed, including furniture.

[Soviet Union] (Russie): Claims, inquiries, retrieval reports and processing correspondence.
- Documents interspersed on art objects seized in various Soviet museums in Baden-Baden, 8 paintings, 5 icons, silver crucifix; Gospel with miniatures and 1755 letter with Russian imperial seal; stamp collection.
- Letter reporting on Georg Winter (ERR head in Ukraine) as director of State Archive in Luneburg in the British Zone (30 Sept. 1947) [119/4137/III].
- Soviet claims and correspondence for 600+ works of art seized by the Germans from the Museum of Russian Art in Kyiv.
- Reports regarding Soviet claim for 6-8,000 books from the Astronomical Observatory of the USSR Academy of Sciences in Simiez (Yalta), Crimea.

Czechoslovakia: one or more folders about art objects retrieved among industrial items.

Yugoslavia: claims for cultural objects (nos. 1503–1655), including paintings, decorative arts, books, and religious objects.

Documents regarding items located and subject to restitution being transferred to Baden-Baden:
- Retrieval of 159 crates of Rothschild Frères bank archives (taken by ERR from Paris) being shipped to Baden-Baden in June 1950, from Kreis St Goarshausen (on the Rhine south of Koblenz).
- Most documents classified alphabetically by country, mostly non-cultural items.
- Most documents classified alphabetically by country, mostly non-cultural items:
  - Paintings among other objects to be restituted to the Netherlands.
  - Retrieval of a painting claimed by Czechoslovakia and its shipment to Baden-Baden.

[PROVINCIAL DELEGATION FOR THE RHINELAND PALATINATE]

A few files of relevance to looted or questionably acquired cultural property and its restitution are cited among the series of ZFO of provincial-level records for French offices in the Rhineland-Palatinate (in two accession subseries – 1RP and 2RP). Under the Directorate for Cultural Services, the Fine Arts Section (Section des Beaux-Arts) sent delegations to survey German museums and libraries in the area. They were searching for and frequently found a significant quantity of foreign works of art and library books, and other cultural property of questionable provenance.

Some questionable cultural items they found may have been seized, purchased, or confiscated during the war by German soldiers abroad; others may have come from German Jews as they were fleeing, or confiscated after their deportation. However, since German Jewish property was rarely handled by the ERR, most such cases are not considered in this Guide. Most important for present treatment would be cultural items purchased or seized abroad and accessioned during the war by German museum or libraries, or loot that had been seized abroad and deposited in cultural repositories within the French Zone.

2.1.4. OTHER AMAE FONDS POTENTIALLY RELEVANT FOR RESEARCH ON SPOLIATION, RETRIEVAL, AND RESTITUTION

The groups of records listed below, as recommended by AMAE archivists, contain scattered documents of potential importance relating to wartime cultural spoliation and the postwar retrieval and restitution of cultural property seized by the ERR and other German agencies during the wartime occupation, sold abroad, or otherwise alienated from France. More of these groups of records are now opened to the public, but in many cases, more detailed inventories are still needed.

A selection of these fonds is listed in the AMAE-La Courneuve website “Introduction (2015)” as ‘supplemental’ to the 209SUP collection. These also appear in the MAEDI 2016 survey posted on the London website of the Central Registry of Nazi-Looted Art. But neither of those provide adequately detailed references to locate relevant documentation.

From available sources and consultation with AMAE archivists, and in some cases with examination of the files themselves, a few specific cartons or files are listed below as examples, when they would appear relevant to ERR or related cultural seizures, and the fate or retrieval of looted cultural property. Otherwise in the records indicated, the researcher will need further consultation with knowledgeable archivists on specific subjects.

Finding Aids

As of early 2021, only in a few instances do available finding aids provide enough detail for the researcher to determine the possible content or relevance to the subject of this Guide.

Though the finding aid is no longer available online, a general overall orientation of wartime-period fonds covers relevant files: the Vichy Regime; the French National Committee (CNF), London; the French Committee for National Liberation (CFLN), Algiers; and the Provisional Government of the French Republic (GRPF), London, Algiers.

Links to relevant finding aids are available at: https://www.diplomatie.gouv.fr/fr/archives-diplomatiques/s-oriente

A minimal list of fonds and available finding aids for the post-1944 period is also posted.

[ARCHIVES OF THE MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF THE FRENCH STATE, 1940–1944]

From available sources and consultation with AMAE archivists, and if possible, with examination of the files themselves, a few examples would appear relevant to ERR or related cultural seizures, and the fate of looted cultural property. Otherwise, in the records indicated, the researcher will need further consultation with knowledgeable archivists on specific subjects.

Finding Aids

Separate finding aids (PDF) are available for the subseries “Londres,” “Alger,” “Dossiers du commissaire aux Affaires étrangères,” as well as an “index,” in the online reference system MNESYS.
2.1.4.3. RECORDS OF SELECTED CENTRAL SERVICES OF THE MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS (CGAAA), POST-1945

Selected subseries may potentially be relevant to the postwar location of looted cultural property. Those listed below, which are open for access and for which finding aids are available, provide examples.

2.1.4.3.1. FRMAE, DIRECTION GÉNÉRALE DES AFFAIRES POLITIQUES ET DIRECTIONS GÉOGRAPHIQUES: EUROPE

[GENERAL DIRECTORATE OF POLITICAL AFFAIRS, GEOGRAPHIC DIRECTORATES: EUROPE]

Some documents may possibly be found in this series relating to the location, restitution, or indemnification for cultural goods seized in France during the war in different countries. Finding aids for the subseries for Germany and Austria are listed below, but available finding aids do not provide sufficiently detailed indication.

178QO: ALLEMAGNE (GERMANY)

Finding Aid

“Europe: Allemagne 1944–1949. FR MAE 178QO Répertoire numérique détaillé.”
Paper copy in the Inventory Room (shelf 87).
Online version: A PDF file is available at on-site computers.

Examples of files of potential interest:

178QO/110: Germans in France, Apr. 1945–June 1949
   /117: French property, Apr. 1945–Apr.1949

182QO: AUTRICHE (AUSTRIA)

Finding Aids

“Europe: Autriche 1944–1949. FR MAE 182QO. Répertoire numérique détaillé.”

Frenchmen and French Goods in Austria [Français et biens français en Autriche]
2.1.4.3.2. 372QO: Secretariat des Conferences Internationales / Allemagne, 1944–1959

[Secretariat for International Conferences: Germany]

Finding Aid

Online version: PDF file in the on-site reference system (MNESYS).

Examples of files of potential interest:

- 372QO/86–91: Nuremberg Trial, including Göring deposition.

2.1.4.3.3. FRMAE, Direction des Affaires Économiques et Financières

[Directorate of Economic and Financial Affairs]

Files with relevant documentation on the retrieval/restitution of seized cultural property may be found in the following subseries:

19QO: Sous-série Accords techniques [Technical Agreements], 1944–1954

Most of the files in Subseries 19QO relate specifically to commercial and industrial enterprises owned by French citizens in different countries (organized by country), scattered files may cover cultural possessions. Some documentation may be found regarding revindication of objects discovered in countries not occupied by Allied Forces.

Finding Aid

New version forthcoming.

Digital version: Available in the on-site reference system (MNESYS).

Access

The 19QO subseries was opened for research in May 2016, but the content of cartons ordered requires checking by an archivist before delivery (up to one-week required). Some documents may be under dérogation or may have been removed from public access to conform to Code du Patrimoine regulations.
Specific cases relating to fine arts are found in the following entries:

19QO/8: Recovery of works of art:
19QO/77: Goods seized by the enemy in neutral countries:
   – General; includes separate files for works of art, and films among other items.
19QO/79: Recovery of works of art:
   – Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, Greece, Hungary, and Italy.
19QO/80: Recovery of works of art:
   – Luxembourg, Monaco, Norway, Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Sweden, Switzerland: General issues, various, including Galeries Fisher (Lucerne).
19QO/81: Recovery of works of art:
   – Switzerland:
     – Hans Wendland case (art dealer for Göring).
     – Jean Engel case (art dealer).
     – Alexandrine de Rothschild, Cahen (Antwerp), Lindon, Levi de Benzion.
     – Czechoslovakia, Turkey, USSR, Yugoslavia, Ireland, Egypt, Japan, Argentina, Iceland.
19QO/106: Industrial, literary, and artistic property – In countries of South America.
   – In countries of Africa, Asia, and Australia.
19QO/107–110: Commercial, industrial, German literary and artistic property seized by the Allies; restitution, German reparations.
19QO/121–126: War Damages (Dommages de guerre) in different countries.

153QO: Sous-série Affaires allemandes et autrichiennes [German and Austrian Affairs], 1945–1955: Question générale des réparations/restitutions, dossiers de particuliers [General question of reparation/restitution, files of individuals]

153QO/157–331 (through 1997):
2.1.4.4. FRMAE, DIRECTION DES ARCHIVES [ARCHIVES DIRECTORATE]

Given that the MAE Archives Directorate was negotiating retrieval and restitution of cultural property and archives with foreign countries, while maintaining a database on looted art at the Quai d’Orsay under the guidance of archivist Marie Hamon, it was directly involved with the fate of the MNRs; hence, the Archives of the Archives Directorate may indeed contain documents of interest to researchers in the subject of looted cultural property and archives.

Series and subseries are divided chronologically by accession (versement) date, most of them currently coded “INVA.”

CONSERVATION DES TRAITÉS ET ACCORDS [PRESERVATION OF TREATIES AND AGREEMENTS]

All French bilateral and multilateral treaties and agreements involving France in research, restitution, and indemnification for looted cultural goods, and especially works of art, are openly accessible on the Internet in the CADIC Archives et patrimoine Database: “Base des Traités et accords de la France.”

Finding Aids

Finding aids for several series of these records are available in the on-site reference system.

From the brief descriptions in the available finding aid, no relevant files were found.

2.1.4.4.1. 7-1: SÉRIE 7 (1990–1998)

The records for the following period 1990–1998 have more documents of interest for the subject of this Guide related to the recovery of art, archives, and other cultural property, especially:

(1) Restitution of MNRs: Starting in 1990 restitution decisions for the MNR collection was being handled by the Archives Director, and

(2) Restitution of French Archives from Moscow: After revelations of the seven linear kilometers of archives of French provenance in Moscow in late 1991, negotiations started for their recovery with the Franco-Russian diplomatic agreements of November 1992.
ACCESS

As of early 2021 these records are not available for research, and hence the finding aid for the 7FC series is also not available. A few key series are nonetheless indicated here, based on the 2016 General Outline Survey – “Recension des sources” of AMAE records relevant to cultural spoliation during the Second World War mentioned above.

7-1: Série 7: Reconstitution des archives détruites ou volées entre 1940 et 1944
[Reconstitution of archives destroyed or stolen during 1940–1944]

7FC: Restitution d’œuvres inventorisés MNR
[Restitution of art works registered as MNRs]

Documentation is found within these records relating to the decisions of the MAE Archives Directorate authorizing (or not) the restitution of works of art registered as MNRs.

7F2: Recherches instruites par la Commission pour l’indemnisation des victimes de spoliation (CIVS) [Research instigated by the [Mattéoli] Commission for the Compensation of Victims of Spoliation]

Name files for individual cases designated for research by the Directorate of Archives on behalf of victims or their heirs as requested by the CIVS. See more about the CIVS and its TED Database in Section 2.0.2.3.

7I: Négociations des accords diplomatiques avec la Russie *[148]
[Negotiations of diplomatic agreements with Russia]

Negotiations to enable the transfer to France of French archives looted by German occupation forces, and then seized by the Red Army and preserved in Russia.

Fonds restituted from Moscow (1993–2002): *[149]

“Fonds russes” restitués. As of December 2021, an updated version, promised some years ago, has yet to appear online, replacing the earlier one withdrawn from the AMAE website.

The new National Archives contemporary research Centre for records postdating the French Revolution opened in 2013 in Pierrefitte-sur-Seine (AN-Pierrefitte). This major site houses most of the AN holdings from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries that were held before 2013 at the historic AN complex in central Paris (CHAN), including personal papers. AN-Pierrefitte is now home to most of the materials covered in the 2011 edition of this Guide, previously held in the Paris-Site. It also houses the additional series described below, newly opened to public access including the archives of the French National Museums (AMN), previously held in the Louvre, transferred to the Archives Nationales in 2014. Most of the relevant records are now more publicly accessible with online finding aids within the AN ‘Virtual Inventory Room’ (Salle des inventaires virtuelle, SIV), most of which is available on the Internet.

The widely divergent groups of records in AN-Pierrefitte described below include several series (and subseries) with scattered documents bearing on ERR activities and seizures during German occupation, as well as on the postwar fate and restitution of ERR loot. Of particular general relevance with respect to ERR seizures – and even more to Möbel-Aktion loot – is Series AJ/38, comprising the records of the General Commissariat for Jewish Questions (CGQJ). That record group also combines records of the corresponding postwar Service for Restitution for Property of Victims of Laws and Measures of Spoliation, covering claims, retrieval, and restitution. Both agency records have been processed together because many of the files are intermixed (see Section 2.2.2.).

Also highlighted in the coverage below is Series AJ/40, comprising original German records remaining from the occupation in several subseries (see Section 2.2.3.). Of special interest are the major portions of records of the Military Commandant in France (Militärbefehlshaber in Frankreich, MBF) and the Military Commandant in Belgium and Northern France (MB BelgNfr; see Section 2.2.3.1.). Today, the records of those commanding German military-occupation agencies are split between France and Germany with another major portion in the German Federal Archives in Freiburg–Bundesarchiv-Militäarchiv (see the German chapter, Section 2.2.3.1.). Also held as part of the AJ/40 complex are many remaining files of the Currency Protection Commando (Devisenschutzkommando Frankreich, DSK). These include original reports of DSK seizures of Jewish art collections from bank vaults, frequently with inventories; most of the works of art seized were turned over to the ERR (see Section 2.2.3.2.).

AN-Pierrefitte also holds many court records from postwar investigations of individuals who had collaborated with the German occupation and the Vichy Regime, including domestic French war-crimes trials, known generally in French as ‘Les archives de l’épuration.’ Additional declassification has been possible following the archival regulation of December 2015, increasing access to more records relating to the Second World War, although some files may require special authorization by dérogation (a process that may take up to several months with forms available from the President of the Reading Room). Many Vichy leaders were tried by the High Court of Justice (Haute Cour de justice), records from which are classed as Series 3W. The Court of Justice of the Department of the Seine dealt with many individuals from lower political levels (Subseries Z/6). Considerable documentation was gathered in the course of these investigations, and documentation collected for individuals who did not actually stand trial remains in a subspecies of these records. A few examples of files from proceedings most relevant to ERR cultural seizures and the fate of seized art from Jewish collections are highlighted below (see Section 2.2.4.). Other related court records are described in the municipal Archives de Paris (see Section 2.4.).

Series F/12 contains another small group of postwar investigatory ‘purification’ (épuration) files from proceedings against art dealers operating in France during the occupation (see Section 2.2.6.). Many of these files contain lists of ‘looted’ or potentially ‘red-flag’ art that individual dealers sold to German purchasers (dealers, museums, and private persons).

One group of documents of ERR relevance often overlooked in remaining court records (including many documents of ERR provenance or related to the ERR), are those used in French background preparation and exhibits for the Trial of Major War Criminals at the International Military Tribunal (IMT; French TMI) in Nuremberg, which include proceedings against Alfred Rosenberg. French IMT records (see Section 2.2.5. Series BB/35/1–214) parallel those of American, British, Russian (i.e. Soviet) delegations described in other chapters of this Guide. The French IMT/TMI records noticeably contain considerable documentation not found in those of other countries.

A subseries of the records of the Ministry of Public Instruction, Subseries F/17 (Ministère de l’instruction publique), comprises 23 cartons from the records of French postwar CRA Sub-Commission on Books (Sous-Commission des livres, SCL), with extensive files of postwar library retrieval and restitution of Nazi-looted books found after the war within France and abroad (see Section 2.2.7.). Initially in the Archives Nationales, this group of 23 cartons was entitled “Bibliothèques pillées sous l’occupation, 1945–1953 [Libraries looted during the occupation].” A recent AN overview, however, now gives a more appropriate archival label, correctly identifying it as a portion of CRA/ SCL records. A related portion of SCL files, it should be noted, are now held in AMAE-La Courneuve within the 209SUP complex (see Section 2.1.1.3.).

Closely related to the contents of the CRA/SCL files is another recent acquisition of note: three cartons that are now arranged as a fond entitled “Les bibliothèques pendant la Seconde Guerre mondiale: documents divers concernant l’organisation et la gestion des collections” [Libraries during the Second World War: Diverse Documents Concerning Organization and Collection Management] (Versement 19910531/23–199104321/25). The fond contains significant documentation regarding looted French libraries during the war, among other files relating to library administration and collection management, including the official German lists of ‘forbidden’ books withdrawn from public libraries (see Section 2.2.7.1.).

The Archives of the French National Museums (Archives des Musées nationaux, AMN) were long held in the Louvre, as described in its earlier location in the 2011 edition of this Guide.
Starting at the end of 2014, all of the AMN holdings were transferred to the new AN-Pierrefitte Site. By the end of 2015, they were reprocessed with new archival signatures; correlation to their earlier AMN designations is given below to the extent available in updated Section 2.2.12. These include some of Rose Valland’s wartime notes and reports from the Jeu de Paume submitted to the director of National Museums in the Louvre, Jacques Jaujard, complementing the records of postwar French agencies handling the retrieval of cultural loot removed by German agencies now held in the MEA Diplomatic Archives Centre in La Courneuve. One small group of the AMN files, however, was accessioned in La Courneuve in 2016 (see Section 2.1.1.7.), comprising files related to Rose Valland’s activities in the Jeu de Paume during occupation, specifically involving ERR art loot, followed by another smaller group of files in 2017.

Finding Aids (General) Online: “Salle des inventaires virtuelle”

A virtual revolution in reference access to AN holdings has proceeded since the opening of the AN contemporary facilities in Pierrefitte. Digitized finding aids in the new Virtual Inventory Room – “Salle des inventaires virtuelle” – are now available for most of the series described below, creating a new level of ‘intellectual access’ to the Pierrefitte holdings. Earlier printed or paper editions have recently been reprocessed for online availability with accessible computers adjacent to the main reading room. Most of these inventories, which include administrative histories of the record groups (fonds) or series covered can be viewed worldwide on the Internet, as well as on the online Intranet system within the building. The online reference system is still under development, and hence changes should be anticipated in the various finding aids presented for individual series provided below, while additional or more detailed finding aids are in preparation for many series.

Earlier printed versions of many of the inventories are readily available on open shelves within the Inventory area adjacent to the main Reading Room.

Noticeably, most entries in the SIV reference system for individual fonds – or distinct ‘series’ or ‘subseries’ – in AN-Pierrefitte provide both an overview of vital data with the anglicized title ‘General Presentation,’ which includes a brief administrative history of the creating agency, related sources elsewhere, and bibliography. An adjacent link, ‘Content Detail,’ leads to ‘inventory-level’ description of each carton, file, or group of documents in numbered sequence. Together, these two components constitute the ‘Finding Aid,’ usually available in a separate link to a downloadable PDF. In describing the ‘Finding Aids’ for different fonds or series below, URLs are given for both components.

For many fonds or series, the SIV also contains a separate ‘Presentation of Archives’ – from the general AN Catalogue of Fonds (État des fonds) – with a general overview, administrative history of the creating agency, and related data.

The recent SIAF Internet Guide contains fond overviews for many entries covered, and usually provides a good starting place with links to the SIV finding aids.
DISCLAIMER AND ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In most series or subseries listed below, the selected files described in detail as examples represent documents examined de visu by the compiler, many already included in the 2011 edition of the Guide. Many other components were added in the June 2017 edition of this chapter – after the AN move to Pierrefitte. Time has not permitted a more complete or thorough on-site review for the present 2021 chapter. Additional files and groups of documents of relevance will undoubtedly be found in many of the same series or subseries. References have been verified thanks to available finding aids, many of them created only recently for several series and subseries, including many revised for online access in the ‘Virtual Inventory Room.’

Updated and expanded coverage of AN holdings since the move to Pierrefitte-sur-Seine has been greatly aided by AN archivist Caroline Piketty, whose 2000 Guide de recherche earlier provided considerable background. She kindly consulted with me earlier in connection with the 2011 edition of the Survey, and again in 2015–2016 in preparation for the 2017 version of this chapter. Consultations with her and several AN archivists in charge of different sections in Pierrefitte have aided verification and greatly contributed to inclusion of more newly available documentation. Particular thanks are due to Monique Leblois-Péchon, whose report for the Bibliothèque Kandinsky Summer University program (July 2015) and subsequent consultations have been exceedingly productive. Most helpful, she kindly furnished me a copy of her unpublished report “Spoliations et restitutions dans les fonds 1939–1945 des Archives nationales: inventaires détaillés et bases de données,” prepared for the June 2016 French-German Colloquium in Paris. Violaine Challéat-Fonck advised regarding some of the legal records covered. Special thanks also to Marine Zelverte, who has been charged with reprocessing the records received from the National Museums of France; Isabelle Le Masne de Chermont earlier introduced me to those materials, when she was still in charge of the archives in the Louvre. Later Alain Prévet advised to great profit on several occasions regarding more recent descriptions prepared under his direction, and in preparation for the transfer of the AMN to Pierrefitte.

Regrettably, because of the COVID-19 pandemic during 2020 and 2021, on-site visits and direct consultations with archivists has not been possible for this updated 2021 chapter. It would be exceedingly helpful if archivists and readers of this section would be kind enough to communicate any errors or omissions encountered, and suggest improvements or updates needed.
2.2.1. Sous-Série AB/XIX: Documents isolés et papiers d’érudits
* [Isolated Documents and Papers of Scholars]

This subseries – from a collection presented as a gift from the director of the Polish State Archives to the director of the Archives Nationales in May 1960 – has two separate entries. The first comprises fragmentary Masonic documents presumably from the Grande Loge de France, while the second, a collection of documents from a variety of predominantly French Jewish sources. Both were undoubtedly seized during occupation by the German Security Services or the ERR in France and turned over to the Reich Security Main Office (RSHA), Amt VII, dedicated to research on the ‘enemies of the Reich’ in Berlin.

In the summer and fall of 1943, the RSHA Amt VII evacuated most of their captured archives (collected in Berlin since 1934) to Silesia. Starting in 1944 most of the archives were housed in the main RSHA Amt VII Silesian archival evacuation center in the village of Wölfelsdorf (postwar Polish Wilkanów). Discovered there by the Red Army during the summer of 1945, almost all of the RSHA captured archives were seized and transferred to Moscow in the fall of 1945. The fragmentary documents now in AN-Pierrefitte may have been left behind by Soviet archivists, or else items the Poles found elsewhere in Silesia after the war.\(^{151}\)

Meanwhile, a small portion of the working Masonic archival files in the large RSHA Masonic archival collection, together with their Masonic reference library, was evacuated to the main RSHA Amt VII Masonic research center housed in Heinrich Himmler’s favorite castle on the Schlesiersee (postwar Polish Sława), where it operated from 1943 until January 1945.

It has not yet been possible to identify the provenance of all of the French Jewish documents contained in the second portion of this subseries. Information is not available as to where these documents were found by the Poles after the war; most probably they were left behind in Wölfelsdorf by the Soviets. Otherwise, quite possibly the Masonic documents were found in or in the vicinity of Sława.

This collection was presented to the director of the Archives Nationales in May 1960 as a gift from the director of the Polish State Archives.

AB/XIX/3367:
Documents concernant la franc-maçonnerie (XVIIIe et XIXe s.) et la guerre civile espagnole [Documents relating to Freemasonry (XVIII and XIX cc) and the Spanish Civil War]

A small collection of fragmentary Masonic documents originally part of the extensive archives seized by the ERR and SD in Paris, presumably from the Grand Loge de France, most of which were apparently turned over to the RSHA. The original French Masonic files in the small collection described here were most probably previously either a portion of the RSHA Masonic archival loot that ended the war in Wölfelsdorf or found by the Poles in the Sława vicinity or elsewhere in Silesia.

Scattered fragmentary documents include:
– Minutes of a Masonic meeting and inquiry by Oscar Wirth concerning possible Franco-German reconciliation.
– Correspondence between Wirth and Jean de Berne.
– Newspaper and journal articles (1876–1938).
– Funding appeals, refugee lists, and reports of evacuation and repatriation (1934–1940).

Related Portions of Nazi-Seized Masonic Archives from France

Bundesarchiv in Berlin-Lichterfelde (Bestand NS 58): The RSHA Amt VII administrative and research records from the Masonic Centre in Schlesiersee, were found after the war by the Poles. Held in Warsaw until 1997, they were exchanged for other documents of Polish provenance with the Bundesarchiv in 1997 and are now held by the Bundesarchiv in Berlin-Lichterfelde (Bestand R 58). Some of those RSHA files in Berlin contain a few additional original captured French Masonic documents from the same source as these interspersed. 152

Grande Loge de France, Archives, Paris: Most of the captured French Masonic files that were seized by Soviet authorities in Wölfelsdorf, Silesia, were returned to France from Moscow between 1992 and 2002, but the stray group of documents above (AB/XIX/3367) has yet to be united with them. The fonds of the Grande Loge de France that were returned from Moscow are now held in the Archives of the Grande Loge in Paris.153

AB/XIX/3368:

Documents concernant des associations et organismes professionels

[Documents concerning associations and professional organizations]

Fragmentary documents from several different associations and other organizations, not all of them Jewish. At least some may have been seized by the ERR or the Gestapo in Paris or in the French provinces. Seizure documentation has not surfaced as yet for any of these agencies. Most date from the 1930s.

Scattered fragmentary documents from various agencies include:
– Ligue patriotique des Françaises, Moselle: reports. 1932.
– Comité français pour la protection des intellectuels juifs persécutés: correspondence and printed materials.
– Documents relating to the German massacre of Oradour-sur-Glane (Haut-Vienne), 1940–1944.

152 Microfilms of those RSHA records now in BArch-Lichterfelde, Bestand R 58, received from Poland, are available at the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, Washington, DC.

153 Most of the original French Masonic files looted from the Grand Loge de France, seized after the war by Soviet authorities and returned to Paris (not all) are listed in Returned from Russia, pp. 166–67. 2.2.2. SOUS-SÉRIE AJ/38: COMMISSARIAT GÉNÉRAL AUX QUESTIONS JUIVES (CGQJ) ET DU SERVICE DE RESTITUTION DES BIENS DES VICTIMES DES LOIS ET MESURES DE SPOLIATION

[GENERAL COMMISSARIAT FOR JEWISH QUESTIONS AND RESTITUTION SERVICE FOR PROPERTY OF VICTIMS OF SPOLIATION LAWS AND MEASURES]

805 linear meters; 6,464 files (and fichiers), 1940–1955.

The General Commissariat for Jewish Questions (CGQJ), as an agency of the Vichy Regime established by the law of 23 March 1941, was charged with the implementation of anti-Jewish laws and regulations during the German occupation. One of its most important departments, the Direction of Economic Aryanization (Direction de l’aryanisation économique, DAE) with the aim of “eliminating Jewish influence in all aspects of the French economy,” executed the liquidation of Jewish business assets and other possessions, together with the forced Aryanization of all Jewish business enterprises. Of particularly importance for the French art world, this included the liquidation and seizure of possessions of Jewish art dealers and galleries. If operations were not closed down, firms were allowed to continue with Aryan administrators, who were established and regulated by the Control Service for Provisional Administrators (Service du contrôle des administrateurs provisoires, SCAP), another office under CGQJ.

It should be explained that, while many CGQJ records document details of seizure and confiscation of Jewish cultural property, especially in connection with the Möbel-Aktion, only tangentially is there likely to be documentation on the extensive ERR art seizures that the ERR processed in the Jeu de Paume. However, several major Jewish art dealerships, including Paul Rosenberg and Georges Wildenstein, among others, were subjected to CGQJ Aryanization, while parts of their art collections were handed over to the ERR. But the CGQJ did not directly deal with the vast quantity of works of art in named individual French Jewish collections seized by or on behalf of the ERR, most of which were processed in the Jeu de Paume in Paris. Nor did they deal directly with the extensive library materials the ERR seized in France, often together with personal archives and other cultural possessions. However, because the CGQJ was in many areas directly involved with the Möbel Aktion, they were often also more directly involved with many of home furnishings collected, including pianos and other musical instruments. Yet even with the Möbel-Aktion, because the ERR were entitled to first choice of cultural valuable seized, many works of art from the M-Aktion ended up in the ERR Möbel-Aktion collections, also processed in the Jeu de Paume. Meanwhile, the ERR Sonderstab Musik, organized their own musicalia seizures, while also siphoning off many of the choice musical instruments and other musicalia, from M-Aktion receipts, large portions of which were shipped to the Reich.

The CGQJ was officially closed down at the end of August 1944 and its vast holdings placed under control of the French Ministry of Finance. The extensive records of that agency are now arranged together – and in some cases intermixed – with those of the closely related postwar Restitution Service for Property of Victims of Laws and Measures of Spoliation (Service de restitution des biens des victimes des lois et mesures de spoliation, 1945–1951), established 1 January 1945, under the French Ministry of Finance. The postwar counterpart agency was charged with restitution of property seized during the occupation to owners or heirs (ayants droit) and/or reimbursement of victims. Many of the files with records of the two agencies accordingly overlap, because in many cases description of seizures and Aryanization proceedings during occupation were used in postwar claims.
Hence the records of both agencies are relevant for general historical considerations of spoliation and restitution, as well as for the specific identification of property plundered from Jewish families and firms and related restitution proceedings. Many of the same Jewish owners whose art was seized by or on behalf of the ERR were also victims of other CGQJ spoliation or persecution, their lodgings emptied by the Möbel-Aktion, and/or their firms subject to Aryanization, documentation on which may well be found among these records.

General Files (Les dossiers généraux). Files are arranged by the creating agency and subordinate offices covering administrative and financial services under both the CGQJ and the Restitution Service.

Named Individual Files. The largest part of the records consists of individual case files for proceedings from the all-important Directorate of Economic Aryanization (DAE), to which Jewish firms were subjected under German occupation. Some 62,000 files in the Aryanization subsection record the proceedings to which Jewish firms – including art and antique dealers – were subjected. Postwar files include proceedings to restore items transferred during occupation to ‘provisional administrators’ of Aryanized firms; these may contain data on the wartime fate of the owners’ works of art and other cultural property. The files are organized geographically, embracing both CGQJ cases during occupation and postwar documentation from the Restitution Service. Some files contain complaints against ‘provisional administrators,’ some of which resulted in legal proceedings.

Additional postwar claims files contain lists of seized property, including confiscated household goods by the M-Aktion. These often contain inventories of furniture, sometimes including works of art and valuable cultural property, along with significant related documentation such as correspondence regarding losses. In many cases these claims were first submitted to the Office of Private Goods and Interests (OBIP), particularly in cases where the property claimed was known to have been seized by the M-Aktion and suspected to have been taken abroad. OBIP claims for household furnishings seized during the M-Aktion that possibly remained in France, however, were usually handled by the Restitution Service, and hence are to be found within these AJ/38 records. Although many claims refer to the ERR or M-Aktion, copies of actual ERR documents are found only in rare instances, if they were located and used in conjunction with an individual attestation of loss or with postwar restitution claim. In many cases, the CGQJ occupation-period files were also used to substantiate postwar claims and restitution proceedings, which explains why individual files have documents from both agencies.

Individual claims files were also subsequently used for processing claims for remuneration from Germany under West German laws – Bundesrückerstattungsgesetz (BRüG) – providing for compensation for losses during wartime occupation. Specific claims to Germany, however, were usually handled by OBIP, and hence many related files would be found among OBIP records in AMAE-La Courneuve (see Section 2.1.2.), or by the French offices of Dommages de guerre, some of which are listed below (see Section 2.2.11.), or for the Paris region, in the municipal Archives de Paris (see Section 2.4.4.).

Normally, many claims for works of art were submitted to the CRA or, if first submitted to OBIP, were transferred to the CRA, and hence are now to be found in the two large groups of postwar individual French claims files for cultural property held in AMAE-La Courneuve – CRA or OBIP claims files (see Section 2.1.1.5.).
Card Files (fichiers). Extensive card files on economic Aryanization (AJ/38/1161–1327) serve to index the files for named individual victims of economic Aryanization and frequently also cover victims of M-Aktion seizures. Separate card files (AJ/38/1300–1310) cover restitution proceedings for seized items that remained in France. They are grouped by names within geographic region similar to the case files (dossiers) to which they refer.

See the helpful description of these card files in the Piketty volume referenced under Finding Aids below. Coordination between the fichiers and claim-file numbers is also explained in the SIAF ‘formulaire’ in the new online finding aid.

ACCESS

CGQJ and Restitution Service records have been open for public research since 1998. Textual documents in the entire fonds are available to researchers on microfilm in the Pierrefitte Microfilm Reading Room. Some individual card and case files within this record group may have access restrictions due to personal privacy. A microfilm copy of part of these records is also available in the Center of Contemporary Jewish Documentation (CDJC) under Mémorial de la Shoah – along with some additional original files and copies of scattered documents (see examples in Section 2.5.4.). Microfilmed copies of selected files (with significant gaps) are also available at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (USHMM) in Washington, DC, and in Yad Vashem, Jerusalem.

N.B. Names of victims usually do not appear in online finding aids, but they may be found in the ARYA Database on computers in the Inventory Room.

Inventory

A detailed comprehensive inventory of remaining CGQJ records, AJ/38/1–6463. The original 1998 version covers cartons AJ/38/1–6122, not including the additional files transferred to AN in 1998 and 2001. The Introduction gives the administrative history and structure of both agencies – CGQJ (pp. XXII–XXVI) and the Service de restitution (pp. XXVIII–XXXI) – and explains the organization of records in AJ/38, with a list of related sources elsewhere and summary bibliography.

Online version: The SIV digital version (Internet and Intranet) is broken up into three segments (Parts 1–3), each broken down into multiple categories in carton-number order. The ‘permalink’ cited opens a ‘General Presentation’ with link to ‘Content Detail’ (Inventory) for each of the three parts. PDF files combining the two segments of each part are available for download.

Related Overviews of Sources and Background Literature

Although the specific archival location has changed since the Piketty Guide was published, details about sources, and here AJ/38 remain extremely helpful, with outline of the genesis and archival organization of the CGQJ records. Appendix 3 and 4 (pp. 265–79) describe the card files and dossiers within AJ/38 from the Directorate of Economic Aryanization (DAE), to which Jewish firms were subjected under German occupation. Additional related sources for research on various specific subjects, including the plunder and restitution of works of art, are mentioned in several chapters in the second half of the book.

English edn: “An archive ready to explore: The pianos of Paris’ Jewish families.”

Describes sources in AJ 38/5941–5960, among others, regarding postwar claims and restitution documents for some 3,100 pianos seized by the Möbel-Aktion, many of which were returned to their owners after the war.

Online at: https://www.vie-publique.fr/rapport/24367-le-pillage-des-appartements-et-son-indemnisation. Also available from the Rose Valland website (Section 2.0.2.2.).

In connection with extensive coverage of the M-Aktion and the process of postwar restitution or compensation claims, the authors explain the operation of the CGQJ and the Restitution Service for Property of Victims of Laws and Measures of Spoliation. Mention is also made of the relationship of AJ/38 records in the Archives Nationales (now in AN-Pierrefitte) with related files now held in Israel and Berlin. The authors cite many files in AJ/38, while the appendix reproduces sample documents.

As noted in these publications, another portion of the CGQJ records is among the collections of CDJC (see Section 2.5.4.), along with microfilms of most of the AJ/38 fond. Microfilmed copies of selected files (with significant gaps) are also available at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (USHMM) in Washington, DC, and in Yad Vashem in Jerusalem.

CGQJ (1941–1944) and Service de Restitution (1944–1952)

Selected examples of files are listed below in numeric sequence, with a few specific examples most relevant to the ERR (see more detail in the French inventory online).

General Files (Cartons 1–134)

AJ/38
/10–15: Correspondence with Security Police (Befehlshaber des Sicherheitspolizei), 1942–1943, files arranged alphabetically by names of persons.
/16–17: Correspondence with the Dienststelle Einsatzstab Westen, 1942–1944
One folder contains lists of abandoned, presumably Jewish, apartments with names and addresses, and in some cases biographic identification that CGQJ transferred to the RMbO Dienststelle Westen (Western Office) for the Möbel-Aktion.
/16: – General matters: alphabetical files by names of persons, A–K.
/17: – Files alphabetical by names of persons, L–Z.
/18: Correspondence with various German agencies
/19–68: Vichy office files
/52/M33: Documents about apartments, châteaux, and other properties of local Jews. For example, one file includes building searches for Jewish art dealers Bacri and Wildenstein.

Service du contrôle des administrateurs provisoires (SCAP) et Direction de l'aryanisation économique (DAE), 1940–1944 (See the ARYA database on the Pierrefitte Intranet.)

AJ/38
/1161–1327: Card files (fichiers) on economic Aryanization, arranged geographically and then alphabetically.
  Provides an index to individual files. The names of persons and firms can be found in the ARYA database on the Pierrefitte Intranet, and then files on microfilm can be ordered in the Microfilm Room on the second level (to the left at entrance to the Pierrefitte Reading Room).
/1328–5170: Individual files (dossiers) on economic Aryanization, organized regionally, and then alphabetically and by types of enterprise, in numerical order:
  /1328–3200: Paris and Department of the Seine, by type of enterprise.
    /2794–2896: Section VI: Antique and art dealers, including furniture.
  /3201–5170: Provinces (outside of Paris and the Seine Department).
    /3333–4414: South of France.
    /4415–5170: North of France.
/5813–5814: Dossiers of provisional administrators of Aryanized firms.
  Many of these contain information on the nature of Aryanization and the fate of merchandise held, as well as postwar complaints against the administrators.
Service de restitution des biens des victimes des lois et mesures de spoliation

AJ/38

   /5882–5889: Lists of individual victims of spoliation, correspondence.
   /5890–5908: Declarations of lost possessions, individual files organized numerically.
   /5909–5927: Letters of victims addressed to the Restitution Service regarding their possessions, 1944–1946, with lists.

/5929–5960: Restitution of furniture, 1944–1949
   (See also AJ/38/1300–1310: Card files (fichiers) for restitution of furniture.

/5937–5939: Lists of plundered books and libraries, arranged by claimants.

/5940: CGQJ correspondence relating to the seizure of works of art, books, furniture, and other items belonging to Jews during occupation (from CRA), 1940–1941.
   Examples of documents on ERR seizures include:
   – from the Louvre: Mme Porges (14 Aug. 1940).
   – from château de Sourches (11 Apr. 1941): David-Weill (130 crates), also Wildenstein.
   – Correspondence relating to several repositories for works of art, books, and moveable goods abandoned by Germans in France and in Germany, with postwar correspondence related to repositories in Karlsruhe and other places (1945–1948).
   – Lists of seized libraries, and sample declarations of loss.
   – Lists of seized collections of art established by the Restitution Service and correspondence regarding individual claims.

/5941–5960, 6355: Restitution of pianos, 1944–1952.

AJ/38

/6369–6379: Alphabetic card file of victims.

/6380–6382: Alphabetic card file of pianos, by maker and owner; transfers to Domaines for those not claimed.

/6423: Restitution of furniture, correspondence, 1945–1948.

/6424–6436: Restitution documents to individual victims, testimonies and inventories.

2.2.3. SÉRIE AJ/40: ARCHIVES ALLEMANDES DE LA SECONDE GUERRE MONDIALE
[GERMAN RECORDS OF THE SECOND WORLD WAR]

1685 files; 228 linear meters, 1940–1944

2.2.3.1. AJ/40/1–415: DER MILITÄRBEFEHLSHABER IN BELGIEN UND NORDFRANKREICH (MB BELG NFR) / COMMANDANT MILITAIRE ALLEMAND EN BELGIQUE ET LE NORD DE LA FRANCE)
[GERMAN MILITARY COMMANDANT IN BELGIUM AND NORTHERN FRANCE]

AND

AJ/40/1–439–990: DER MILITÄRBEFEHLSHABER IN FRANKREICH (MBF) / COMMANDANT MILITAIRE ALLEMAND EN FRANCE)
[GERMAN MILITARY COMMANDANT IN FRANCE]

Many records of the principal military government agencies for France and Belgium during the occupation (1940–1944) were destroyed or evacuated at the end of the war. The French found portions of the records that the Germans left behind, but they were able to retrieve only a part of those evacuated to Germany. Many of the occupation records from France, as well as some from Belgium and Northern France (administered together during occupation), were recovered by the U.S. Army in Germany and taken to the United States, despite French claims. Processed and microfilmed within a larger group of German military records, they were turned over to West Germany in the 1960s. The records of the Military Commandant in France (MBF) and the Military Commandant in Belgium and Northern France (MB Belg Nfr) are accordingly now split between AN-Pierrefitte and the Bundesarchiv (Federal Archives) Military Archives in Freiburg (see the German chapter, Sections 3.4.2. and 3.4.3.). Belgium has acquired only copies of limited files from those now split between France and Germany. In terms of MBF and MB Belg Nfr records, thanks to recent French and German cooperation, detailed parallel finding aids for the Paris (AN) and Freiburg (BArch) holdings were published in 2002, making both portions of these fonds much more accessible to researchers in French and German reference works (both now online).

Copies of some of the documents now in AN-Pierrefitte, and a few additional original MBF documents, are held in the CDJC (see Section 2.5.2.1. below). Fragmentary copies (two archival cartons) of mostly MBF documents about early German cultural seizures in France are now on the website of the U.S. National Archives in College Park, MD (NACP), as described in the USA chapter of this Guide (see USA chapter, Section 10.1.1.2., pp. 21–23).154

The Wehrmacht’s special ‘protection’ offices for libraries, archives, and art, units working under the MBF, were often in competition with the ERR. At the same time, the ERR was reporting to those offices, and their superiors in the MBF and MB Belg Nfr, and was directly dependent on the MBF in France – and the MB Belg Nfr in Belgium – for supplies and local arrangements. The Secret Field Police (Geheime Feldpolizei, GFP) was often simultaneously working for and reporting to related agencies under the MBF (or the MB Belg Nfr) and the ERR. Hence many documents from and relating to ERR operations in France and Belgium and/or confiscated culture property seized by the ERR are found within these records. These include documents among the files from operations of the Library Protection Office (Bibliotheksschutz), the Archives Protection Office and Archives Group (Archivschutz, Gruppe Archivwesen), and the Art Protection Office (Kunstschutz), as well as correspondence and numerous reports and inventories of archives, libraries, and other cultural property.

The Economics Departments (Wirtschaftsabteilung/Section économique) of the MBF and the MB BelgNfr have extensive files on the registration and confiscation of ‘enemy’ (especially Jewish) cultural property, whether in homes or in bank vaults.

The Currency Protection Commando (Devisenschutzkommando, DSK) was responsible for removal of art and other cultural valuables from bank vaults. Especially in France, some of their bank seizures documents contain detailed lists of cultural items, and often indicated those destined for the ERR. Scattered documents in those files accordingly relate directly to ERR activities and collections confiscated on behalf of the ERR or turned over and processed by the ERR. These are especially important in tracking the cultural property the ERR plundered, even if the documents may not have been directly created by the ERR, or first seized by the ERR.

Also of interest in this subseries with several distinct components are the documents gathered after the war for the French trial of Hermann Bunjes, who was also involved with Göring and the art-looting activities of the ERR.

Overview in SIAF Guide

Online at: https://francearchives.fr/fr/article/87249763. ‘Description du fonds,’ related documentation, and bibliography. This online survey in the SIAF Guide covers only selected portions of the MBF records (including the Kunstschutz), as well as the DSK records and Bunjes Papers, but not all of the files described here in AJ/40 below. Coverage includes:

- AJ/40/37 and 573–577: Kunstschutz
- AJ/40/1027–1105: Devisenschutzkommando, DSK

État général des fonds des Archives nationales (Paris). Mise à jour 2009:
Includes the entire content save for some related explanatory portions.

Internet Availability of Selected Documents

Since 1998, a French project involving the Centre national de la recherche scientifique (CNRS) and the German Historical Institute in Paris (Deutsches Historisches Institut in Paris, DHIP / Institut historique allemand, IHA) have been working with the Archives nationales to prepare some of the more general MBF documents from AJ/40, such as the situation reports (Lageberichte), for Internet accessibility. See the explanation of the project and search mechanism at https://www.ihtp.cnrs.fr/prefets/. Although this site provides online access to some documents from AJ/40 and AJ/41, none of the documents of special relevance to the ERR cited below have been included (as of 2017).

2.2.3.1.1. AJ/40/1–415: DER MILITÄRBEFEHLSHABER IN BELGIEN UND NORDFRANKREICH (MB BELGNFR) /
LE COMMANDANT MILITAIRE EN BELGIQUE ET LE NORD DE LA FRANCE
[MILITARY COMMANDANT IN BELGIUM AND NORTHERN FRANCE]

For Belgium, several MB BelgNfr files highlighted below cover cultural seizures, at least tangentially, including ERR involvement. See the French or German finding aids for more complete coverage of additional files. The remainder of this fond is in BArch-Freiburg, as described in the German chapter of this Guide.

Verwaltungsabteilung (Administrative Division)

AJ/40/14–38: Group 6 Kultur / Culture et enseignement. 1940–1944
/15: Some documents directly relate to Rosenberg offices and seizures, especially:
   15/6: on the Institut nationale d’histoire sociale, Brussels, and Emil Vandervelde.
/37: Bureau G (Questions artistiques en Belgique):
   – Reports from the Kunstschutz under Count Franz Wolff-Metternich.
   – the Van Eyck Altar in Ghent; and seizures in Louvain (Leuven).
   – Bureau H (Archives): 37/3/6 includes report of Georg Sante on archives destroyed in Belgium during the German invasion.
   – Bureau I (Bibliothèques): Includes lists and reports of visits to libraries. Subsequent files containing declarations of enemy goods and those dealing with the liquidation of Belgian Jewish enterprises contain some documentation of confiscation and plunder with which the ERR may well have been involved, or the recipient of cultural assets.
2.2.3.1.2. AJ/40/439-990: DER MILITÄRBEFEHLSHABER IN FRANKREICH (MBF) / LE COMMANDANT MILITAIRE ALLEMAND EN FRANCE [GERMAN MILITARY COMMANDANT IN FRANCE]

For France, files in the MBF records at least tangentially involving the ERR include:

Verwaltungsabteilung: Group: V 4 Schule und Kultur / État-major administration (Enseignement et culture), 1940–1944 (AJ/40/536–577)

AJ/40
/564: Divers
Reference to an ERR inventory of works of art belonging to Jews (31 August 1941).

/569–570: Bibliothekschutz (Library Protection Office)
Reports about libraries with documentation on some confiscated libraries, including relations of the Archivschutz and the Kunstschutz with the ERR.
/569/Folder 6 (July 1940–Aug. 1941): Reports and memoranda, many of which relate to ERR seizures, activities, and relations with the Security Service (SD), the Nazi party intelligence service, and the High Command of the Wehrmacht, for example:
– a copy of Wilhelm Grau’s report on the ERR seizure of libraries in Paris with cooperation from the GFP and the SD (16 Sept. 1940).155
– the Polish and Turgenev (Russian) libraries.
– the Boldeau and Utikal library seizure from château of Beaumesnil (Furstenberg Collection and rare books from the Bibliothèque nationale).
– Herbert Gerigk of the ERR Music Special Staff (Sonderstab Musik) and seizure of manuscripts from Paris libraries of the Arsenal, the Conservatory, and the Opera.
– Seizure of the Bamberger library (Hénonville).
– the Dreyfus palace library (Paris) and château de Beaumanoir (Côtes-du-Nord), among others.

AJ/40
/571–572: Archivwesen (Archival Affairs)
Correspondence and reports of the activities of the German archives mission, Georg Schnath, and Gruppe Archivwesen, with files about different French archives (not ERR).

/573–577: Kunstschutz (Art Protection Office)
Correspondence and reports from the Kunstschutz with lists and inspection reports on visits to châteaux for state and private collections:
– Reports on dealers and sales and purchases for German museum.
– Activity reports from Count Franz Wolff-Metternich, the head of the Kunstschutz, and his successor Baron Bernhard von Tieschowitz.

AJ/40

/574:

Folder 1: German typed registration sheets for museums and private collections in one area of France, organized by location (A–Z).

Folder 2: Correspondence with art dealers and appraisers with many photographs; one folder has a catalogue of the Succession Georges Viau sale (17 Dec. 1942), along with a list of paintings purchased for over 1 million francs.

Folder 5: Receipts with names and dimensions of paintings purchased or appraised by Theo Hermsen in Paris, including for those for German museums in Linz and Dresden by intermediary of the Gurlitt Galerie in Dresden.

Wirtschaftsabteilung / Section économique, 1938–1945 (AJ/40/578–867)

AJ/40/579–773: Division Wil. Allgemeine Wirtschaftsangelegenheiten / Problèmes généraux d’économie

AJ/40

/579–611: Group Wi 1/2 Feindvermögen / Biens ennemis [Enemy Property]
Reports of the Treuhand- und Revisionsstelle to the MBF:
– Files of the Currency Protection Commando (Devisenschutzkommando, DSK).
– Declarations of ‘enemy’ property (mostly Jewish) and the administration of enemy property (including businesses and art), with documentation on the property of many Jews stripped of French nationality and whose family art collections were transferred to the ERR, among them.

/611: Files on personal property of those stripped of French citizenship, alphabetical list (includes many ERR victims, including Paul Rosenberg, Maurice de Rothschild, etc.)

2.2.3.2. AJ/40/1027–1105: DEVISENSCHUTZKOMMANDO FRANKREICH (DSK) / SERVICE DE LA PROTECTION DES DEVISES EN FRANCE

[CURRENCY PROTECTION COMMANDO IN FRANCE]

Scattered cartons contain lists of confiscations from bank vaults (arranged under bank name) with names of individuals and firms and notes regarding art collections (some with lists of works of art) transferred to the ERR to be processed in the Jeu de Paume. The inventory does not name all of the individuals whose collections were removed from different banks.

Among many other DSK bank seizures involving works of art to be found scattered in these cartons are, for example:

AJ/40

/1035: Banque Franco-Portugaise: some documents regarding the collection of Adolfo Weiss (Sept.–Dec. 1941), transferred to the ERR with pretensions of others (including Göring) for some of the paintings.

/1036: Banque Nationale pour le Commerce et Industrie:
- 34 modern paintings found in the safe of M. Watson (2 Dec. 1940) (no list), 19 transferred to the ERR.
- List of named artists of 15 modern paintings said to belong to M. Sidery, including two Dali, three Braque, three Picasso, and three Chirico.

/1039: Banque de Paris et des Pays-Bas:
- André Hachette (rue Cognac Jay, Paris XIVe), detailed list of engravings by school, including Dürer and Rembrandt, and MSS parchments.

/1081: Morgan & Cie:
- Mme Haardt-Schnetzler (130 av de Versailles), list of paintings, with attestation that she is Aryan; Hôtel d’Albany (202 rue de Rivoli) (Oct. 1940).
- Frau Sauerbach, paintings to ERR (Feb. 1941).
- Alfred Weinberger (9 rue d’Artois), 12 paintings from art dealer (Dec. 1941), with list of transfers to the ERR.
- Seligmann & Cie.

/1099: Westminster Bank:
- Notice of removal of 43 paintings from the safe of Salomon Flavian (12 Feb. 1941) for ERR.
- 13 oil paintings from the safe of Élisabeth Wildenstein (15 May 1941), transferred to the ERR.
- Three paintings from the safe of Morris Wolf Jacobson (29 May and 10 July 1941).
- Transfers to the ERR on 27 Apr. 1941, with reference to paintings of Joseph Kronig [Kronick in ERR documents] (Monaco), Sara Rosenstein, Salomon Flavian, the Hamburger family, Mme Thierry, Oscar Federer, and Henri Gérand.
2.2.3.3. AJ/40/1671–1683: Trial of Hermann Bunjes

Hermann Bunjes served with the Art Protection Office (Kunstschutz) under the MBF, headed the German Art History Research Institute (Deutsche Kunsthistorische Forschungsstätte), and functioned for a brief period as Göring’s personal art agent. He was closely involved in ERR operations, including art registration in the Jeu de Paume. After the war he was arrested (25 July 1945) and extradited back to France to stand trial, but committed suicide in prison before proceedings began, although considerable documentation was gathered for the trial. His papers found in Germany within AJ/40 consist of administrative documents, correspondence, and other personal papers, including scattered documents of relevance to the ERR, such as art transfers to Herman Göring, for example:

AJ/40/1671–1683:

/1671–1673, /1683: Bunjes’ correspondence relating to the Göring Collection, with reference to purchases, orders, and exchanges.

/1673: Folder 16: Devoted particularly to the ERR with Bunjes’ correspondence and reports on private Jewish collections seized by the ERR, and other scattered related documents.\textsuperscript{156}

\textsuperscript{156} See additional Bunjes correspondence in AMAE-La Courneuve, 209SUP Carton 106 under Section 2.1.1.1.4. and Carton 398/P36 in Section 2.1.1.2.5.

[High Court of Justice, Archives and Documentation Service]

D: Archives Allemandes: Sous-Série 3W/347–357:

Archives Dites de Berlin

[German Archives: Subseries: Archives marked from Berlin]

This rich series is made up of certified copies of key German wartime documents (2,500–3,500 documents) from the Political Archive of the German Foreign Office (PA AA), with French translations, used for postwar trials of enemy war criminals and collaborators (1947–1948). Many of the individual documents relate to cultural plunder by different German agencies during occupation.

These include some reports on the activities of the German Foreign Office, cultural plunder by the German Embassy in Paris, including Ambassador Otto Abetz and his staff, and plans and reports of archival seizures by Commando Künsberg from the German Foreign Office. Specific reports cover the plunder of the archives of the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the Quai d'Orsay; Karl Epting and the seizure of the original Treaty of Versailles; the capture of Deuxième Bureau (military intelligence) records in Lyon (March 1943); and the confiscation of Maurice de Rothschild’s collections (subsequently transferred to the ERR). A few scattered documents relate to the seizure and transport of art and archives to Germany or Switzerland. While several documents report archival seizures by Commando Künsberg, only a few directly regard the ERR (e.g., concerning Rosenberg and ERR staff member Georg Ebert). Another report deals with the Möbel-Aktion seizures from vacated French Jewish homes.

Access

Since 2014, these documents are open for public access. Previously, because of their status as court exhibits, application was required for special permission for limited research but without permission for reproduction.

N.B. All of the original documents in this collection and contingent files from which they were drawn are open to researchers in the Political Archive of the German Foreign Office (PA AA) in Berlin (see the German chapter, Section 3.5.).

The files from postwar investigations by the ‘Purification Commission’ (CNIE) comprise Cartons F/12/9549–9562 in the larger fond, with the four cartons containing files from the postwar investigation of antique and art dealers. Many of the individual files within those cartons contain lists of looted art dealers sold to German purchasers (dealers, museums, and private persons) in France during the occupation.

It has not been determined how many works of art seized by the ERR or the M-Aktion may be found among those sold by the dealers in these lists, varying as they do according to the activities of the specific dealer. But several dealers known to have been involved with ERR sales and exchanges are listed, including Martin Fabiani and Gustav Rochlitz.

Most of the dealers’ files have a report prepared by Michel Martin, a specialist in the Directorate of the French National Museums, and a summary (procès-verbal d’information) about the case involved. Handwritten letters and other correspondence of the accused in some files contest the allegations by narrating working conditions during the occupation, such as German citizens pretending to be from another country and the difficulties of refusing to deal with German purchasers. Some testimonies from friends claim the dealers were members of the resistance or protected Jewish art dealers or other persons.

2.2.7. Sous-Série F/17: Instruction Publique [Ministry of Public Instruction]

Previous Agency Name:
Ministère de l’Education Nationale [Ministry of National Education]

F/17/17974–17996: Commission de Récupération Artistique.
Archives de la Sous-Commission des Livres (CRA/SCL)
[Commission on Art Retrieval. Records of the Sub-Commission on Books]

Earlier Subseries Title:
Bibliothèques pillées sous l’occupation, 1945–1953
[Libraries looted during the occupation] (title used in AN-Pierrefitte finding aid [2021])

23 articles (archival cartons); 2.8 linear meters. 1945–1953.

These archival files from the Sub-Commission on Books (SCL), which operated 1945–1949 as part of the Commission on Art Retrieval (CRA), have long been publicly available to researchers as part of the Ministry of Education records, with the subseries title, “Libraries looted during the occupation.” The most recent National Archives description, however, has entitled the subseries with its more correct archival designation as archival files from the SCL, under the CRA.

As apparent from the more detailed description of individual cartons below, these files deal with the location, identification, and restitution of books (including manuscripts and incunabula) plundered by Nazi agencies in France. Headed by Jenny Delseaux of the Bibliothèque nationale, the SCL was legally disbanded in October 1949, but in fact continued its activity through 1951, and through the final Commission on Choice (December 1953). This subseries, with 23 archival cartons of SCL records, is arranged as a subseries within the records of the Ministry of National Education (now Ministry of Public Instruction).

Because the ERR was the Nazi agency most extensively involved in the systematic plunder of French libraries, as well as the processing of the thousands of books confiscated by the Möbel-Aktion and other agencies, SCL records are important in following ERR activities and particularly, the fate of its library loot. Copies of a few ERR documents, including one list of plundered libraries in Paris, are scattered throughout several files within this series (Carton 17,077, for example). As other examples, postwar French charts list moving companies involved in transporting books for the M-Aktion and ERR, and a chart of Germans involved in library plunder.

As apparent from these files, however, the SCL had not acquired copies of many surviving ERR retrospective lists of library seizures, such as the comprehensive ones from France among the ERR records in Kyiv (Kiev) and those found by the British in the collections of the Central Library of the Hohe Schule (ZBHS) in Tanzenberg, Austria (now in TNA/FO 2010). These might have further assisted SCL restitution operations.

Particularly important for tracking the fate of plundered French books and their wartime destinations in these files are the numerous postwar French reports on missions abroad – in Germany, Austria, Poland, and Czechoslovakia – where French books seized by the ERR and 161 See the description of ten ERR French library seizure lists on the CFAJ website with explanatory article by P.K. Grimsted; also in English translation on the expanded ERR Project French Looted Libraries Website at: https://www.errproject.org/looted_libraries_fr.php (see above note 4). See also Martine Poulain’s extensive compendium charts of individual and institutional victims to whom books were returned at http://www.memorialdelashoah.org/upload/minisites/bibliothques_spoliess/.

RSHA were later found. These include specific ERR repositories or institutions of the Hohe Schule (including its Central Library ZBHS), as well as the books collected for Hitler’s projected Linz Library, as part of his museum complex in Linz, Austria. Some reports on the convoys returning books from abroad list statistics; others list short titles of books and indicate individual owners to whom the books were returned (e.g., those in Carton 17980). Other reports cover ERR book repositories in France.

Of particular note, the French apparently never learned until much later about the Soviet postwar capture and shipments of hundreds of thousands of looted books (often with related archives) from France (most seized by the ERR and RSHA) to the Soviet Union, notably the fall 1945 shipment of many close to half a million volumes from the ERR Ratibor holdings in Silesia to Minsk.

N.B. The CRA records (within the 209SUP Art Retrieval Collection) in AMAE-La Courneuve (see Section 2.1.1.) contain many additional files from the SCL records relating to library retrieval and restitution. (See Sections 2.1.1.2.5.; 2.1.1.3.; and the card files (fichiers) in Section 2.1.1.4., Cartons 882–887).

CREATING AGENCIES:

- Direction des Bibliothèques et de la Lecture publique [Directorate of Libraries and Public Reading]
- Commission de récupération artistique du ministère de l’Éducation nationale / Sub-commission des livres [Commission on Art Retrieval under the Ministry of National Education] / Sub-Commission on Books
- Commission de choix
  [Commission on Choice]

Three cartons of the ‘Versement’ [Acquisition] 19910531 contain a collection of documents produced by several different agencies, relevant to public libraries and documentation centers in France in the course of the twentieth century. Some documents contained relate to issues of wartime library looting, postwar restitution, and related library issues. The title of the collection currently assigned emphasizes that focus.

The Directorate of Libraries and Public Reading, established in 1945, was attached to the General Directorate of Arts and Letters, within the Ministry of National Education. Given its responsibility for library administration, during the postwar years, it was directly concerned with the restitution of books, together with the Sub-Commission on Books under the Commission on Art Retrieval (CRA/SCL). Four meetings of the Commission on Choice (1949–1953) decided the allocation of retrieved books to public libraries when owners were not identified, and restitution was not possible.

Bibliography

2.2.8. Sous-Série F/37: Ministère des Finances, Commissions Financières

[SouMinistry of Finance, Financial Commissiones]

[Consultative Commission on Damages and Reparations, 1939–1948, 1950
Prefecture of the Seine, Direction of Liquidation and of the Occupation]

F/37/155: “Affaires juives,” a unique folder in Carton 155 of this subseries:162

Covers Jewish matters in Carton 155 within the records of the Préfecture de la Seine.

In addition to this folder relating to the Möbel-Aktion, other documents relating to the Jewish population of France include statistical summaries.

Finding Aid

The SIV finding aid and related overview for this subseries do not cover Carton 155 within more detailed coverage of Cartons 116–193, containing records of the above commission.

F/37/155: “Liste d’appartements mis sous scellés et parfois vidé de leur meubles par l’autorité allemande (locations presumed israélites).”

A series of large-format charts list groups of sealed Jewish residences from which the contents were removed in the Möbel-Aktion (with street address, in somewhat random order). Nine separate lists cover a total of 322 residences, the first dated 22 August 1942 and the ninth dated 25 April 1943, all in French, with no German orders or related explanatory documents.

162 I am grateful to Caroline Piketty for calling my attention to this specific folder in 2008, which she identified. Piketty suggests more such lists may have been preserved in this series, but they have yet to surface.
2.2.9. Sous-Série F/60: Secrétariat Général du Gouvernement et Services du Premier Ministre

F/60/1548: Several files in an initial folder in Carton 1548 contain documents relating to Aryanization and seizure of Jewish art collections and the Möbel-Aktion.163

   – Wildenstein, château d’Igny (Seine & Oise):
     – 17 May 1940, 125 Wildenstein paintings were deposited in the château de Moire.
     – Aug. 1940, 38 paintings were seized by the Germans from château de Moire and transferred to unknown destination; those remaining were transferred to Sources.
     – Oct. 1940, 179 Wildenstein paintings, art objects, and 170 illuminated MSS were removed from the Banque de France.
     – Report on seized art belonging to Aronson, Erlanger, Raymond Hesse, Simon Levy, Léon Reinach; and Mme Léonce Bernheim and Kapferer.

   Möbel-Aktion. “Réquisition de mobilier et de logements juifs” (mai 1942–janvier 1943).”
   – Full texts of official procedural documents indicating those responsible.
   – Requisition of moving companies and removals from Jewish lodging.
   – Initial order, 2 March 1942, under “Comité d’Organisation des Entreprises de déménagement et de garde-meubles,” noting the number of trucks and locations.
   – Report on Rothschild seizures from different members of the family.

   Liquidation of Jewish property

2.2.10. Sous-série Z/6: Cour de justice du Département de la Seine, 17 October 1944–31 January 1951

[Records of the Court of Justice of the Department of the Seine]

cia. 3600 articles; 522 linear meters.

This subseries contains several important groups of postwar court records of proceedings investigating individuals for collaboration with occupying forces. In addition to the specific files highlighted below, several dossiers from proceedings against the directors of CGQJ – for example, Z/6/829/5713 and Z/6/1376–1397 – also contain documentation regarding cultural seizures during the occupation. Some of the proceedings include considerable documentation regarding art sales by galleries and individual dealers, many of whom maintained direct relations with the ERR. In addition to individual proceedings highlighted below, other files document proceedings against moving/transfer firms (entreprises de déménagement) that transported household furnishings under the Möbel-Aktion and seized works of art and other cultural property on behalf of the ERR.

Access

Within this series, following the law of 24 December 2015, as of 2016 69,400 files (dossiers) are open to researchers. More from this series of records from postwar judicial proceedings were subsequently declassified. Dossiers can be consulted for named persons 25 years after their death. Prospective researchers should address inquiries to the archivist in charge of Series Z at AN-Pierrefitte.

Card File

There is a card file of personal names and a register of cases before the court, but only partially open to researchers on site, including victims not included in online finding aids. With full names, files mention profession, details of charges, place committed, and penalty pronounced. Accordingly, researchers should consult with the archivist in charge for specific names.

Selected examples of files from proceedings against several individuals most directly involved with the ERR seizures and art sales.

Z/6/ 13.246/2940: Jean-François Lefranc (proceedings in 1947), Paris art dealer and provisional administrator for the Schloss Collection, a large part of which was destined for the Linz Collection. Part of the Schloss Collection was also exhibited for Rosenberg in the Jeu de Paume under the ERR. The dossier for the Lefranc trial includes lists of paintings with details about many transactions.

Z/6/ 478/4554: Gustav Rochlitz, files on proceedings (Nov. 1946), major red-flag art dealer who handled many of the ERR and Göring exchanges. The file contains numerous photographs of paintings seized by the ERR with which Rochlitz was involved.

Dossiers d’affaires classes sans suite par la cour de Justice de département de la Seine

The ‘NL’ series represents cases not litigated.

Z/6NL/ 379–381: Includes documentation regarding the Göring Collection and Bruno Lohse, prepared for cases not litigated.
2.2.11. VERSEMENT 19780332/2–153: DÉPARTEMENT DE LA SEINE, SERVICE DES DOMMAGES DE GUERRE, 1942–1966
[DEPARTMENT OF THE SEINE, SERVICE FOR WAR DAMAGES]

152 archival cartons; 24 linear meters.

The files on war damages relate particularly to claims for compensation to West Germany under terms of the West German BRüG Law for furniture seized, predominantly by the Möbel-Aktion during German occupation. The M-Aktion was run by the Western Office (Dienststelle Westen), under the Rosenberg Ministry for Eastern Occupied Territories (RMbO), headed in France by Kurt von Behr. Started in the spring of 1942, some 69,619 Jewish lodgings were emptied in France by 31 July 1944. These files represent individual requests for compensation with accompanying documentation justifying the claim.

The files here are predominantly from Paris and the Paris region. It should be noted that the surviving files preserved here are only a relatively small portion of the thousands produced after the war, representing those not eliminated in earlier archival appraisal.

Landesarchiv Berlin:

2.2.12. Versements from the Archives des Musées Nationaux (AMN)
[Archives of the National Museums]

ca. 900 meters.

The entire holdings from the Archives of the National Museums (AMN) dating back to the mid-nineteenth century, long held in the Louvre (6 rue des Pyramides; 75041 Paris), were transferred to the National Archives starting at the end of 2014. As of the end of 2015, these records were reprocessed and are publicly available in their new home in AN-Pierrefitte. Many of these materials were described in the original 2011 edition of this ERR Archival Guide, when they were still held in the Louvre (former Section 2.3.)

Corresponding to the earlier arrangement from the AMN in the Louvre, these records have now been divided into a number of different subs series (with correlation tables available online in AN-Pierrefitte). A special subs series devoted to records of the National Museums during the Second World War corresponding to the former AMN “Series R” (in part described below), includes data about the evacuation of works of art from French Jewish-owned collections, their wartime seizure and postwar recovery. On transfer to AN-Pierrefitte, “Series R” was processed as Versement 20144792/1–363: “Les musées nationaux pendant la Seconde Guerre Mondiale et l’évacuation des oeuvres (Série R), 1939–1958.”

While Series R was the only AMN series to be covered in the 2011 edition of this Guide, present coverage has been expanded with emphasis on the fate, retrieval, and restitution of ERR loot to include some files from several other series.

“Series 4AA” came to Pierrefitte as Versement 20144657/1–196, containing files relating to the exportation of works of art from France during the war.

“Series O” file O/30–438, documenting the career and achievements of Rose Valland was accessioned and processed as Articles 20150497/214–216.

“Series Z,” devoted to the Administration of Museums of France was accessioned by AN-Pierrefitte as Versement 20150044. Several files from the wartime and immediate postwar period from this series have been described below, particularly from the subseries Z15 B, relating to the Commission for Art Retrieval. (CRA).

The AMN records further complement the collection from the Quai d’Orsay (now in La Courneuve), comprising records of the Commission for Art Retrieval and various other state agencies involved in postwar retrieval and restitution, now held in series 209SUP in AMAE-La Courneuve (see Section 2.1.1.). As also noted there, after the dissolution of the CRA, most of its records with related files of other French restitution agencies remained in the Louvre in the office of Rose Valland. In 1982, they were transferred to the Musée du château de Bois-Préau (Rueil-Malmaison), before being turned over to the AMAE at the Quai d’Orsay in 1992; they were transferred to the new repository in La Courneuve (209SUP) in 2009.

The AMN, in addition to their “Series R,” retained two important series of ERR-relevant interest. Some files are directly, others tangentially, involved with artworks the ERR processed in the Jeu de Paume. Some files in that series were transferred to AMAE-La Courneuve in February 2016 and are now arranged as a separate series 20160007AC (see Section 2.1.1.7.). A second smaller group of AMN files were transferred to La Courneuve in 2017.
ACCESS

The AMN holdings have been reprocessed since their transfer to AN-Pierrefitte, where they were opened to the public at the end of 2015 and are now described in detail in new online finding aids.

Prepared in AMN

Provides an overall survey of the archives, with brief coverage of former AMN ‘Series R’ dealing with private collections seized during the Second World War and Occupation, as well as notice about other records remaining from the period of the Second World War and postwar restitution.

See especially Section R (Second World War) is described on pp. 50–51, 215 units.

2.2.12.1. VERSEMENT 20144792/1–363 (FORMER AMN SÉRIE R)

LES MUSÉES NATIONAUX PENDANT LA SECONDE GUERRE MONDIALE ET L’ÉVACUATION DES OEUVRES, 1930–1958

[NATIONAL MUSEUMS DURING THE SECOND WORLD WAR AND THE EVACUATION OF ART WORKS]

CREATING AGENCY:
Direction des musées nationaux, 1889–1944
Direction des musées de France, 1945–2019

177 cauchards; 6 layettes; and 2 registers. 27.94 linear meters.

Of particular importance for the present survey, the separate former “Série R” of the AMN contemporary division from the Louvre is devoted to the National Museums during the Second World War. Originally 215 units, divided into various discrete subseries, in general their original order has been preserved since transfer to AN-Pierrefitte. Previous ‘Series R’ codes are cited in parentheses following the current codes in AN-Pierrefitte.

[EXPORT BUREAU FOR ART WORKS AND CUSTOMS OF THE DIRECTORATE OF MUSEUMS OF FRANCE, 1920–1990]

146 cartons; 30 registers; 48.84 linear meters.

The law of 23 June 1941 required strict export control of works of art submitted to customs, and hence copies of the customs licenses preserved can help identify items exported to Germany by art dealers, and hence those that were confiscated or stolen, or sold for export during occupation. These files may help trace the fate of art objects seized by the ERR.

20150044/99 (former AMN, Z/15 B-I), 1944–1946:
Dossiers de Directeur des Musées nationaux
Files of successive directors of the Directorate of French Museums with correspondence and documents exchanging information relating to the location and retrieval of cultural loot, especially specific works of art. Many of the documents involve relations with the CRA until its liquidation in 1949, and thereafter with the Commissions on Choice, regarding works of art restituted and not. Also compte-rendus of some sessions. Documents involve wartime spoliations and postwar recovery. Many files devoted to individual cases, others to more general issues. One early file includes correspondence with details about the famous ‘Train d’Aulnay’ between Jacques Jaujard and Rose Valland, Sept.–Nov. 1944. Others are listed in the new online finding aid.

20150044/100 (former AMN, Z/15 B-II), 1944–1956:
Dossiers du Service des Musées de Province (Inspection)
Files of the Service for Provincial Museums relating to postwar art recovery and the distribution of works of art examined by the Commissions on Choice.

Dossier individuel Rose Valland (Rose Valland: Personal career files)

A compendium describing available archival documents regarding Rose Valland and her life work, some of which are not available elsewhere. Of particular relevance to the ERR are the documents produced during her role in the Jeu de Paume during occupation and her postwar activities and retrieval efforts for the artistic loot of the ERR. Many documents relate specifically to relations with Hermann Göring and his art curator Andreas Hofer, as well as with various ERR staff members, including Bruno Lohse and the art agent Gustav Rochlitz. Some documents relate to specific Jewish art collections, including those of Paul Rosenberg and the Schloss Collection. Some postwar documents relate to her activities with the Commission for Art Retrieval (CRA).

2.2.13. SOUS-SÉRIE F/60: SECRETARIAT-GÉNÉRAL DU GOUVERNEMENT ET SERVICES DU PREMIER MINISTRE: F/60MLI/1–242: MISSION MATTÉOLI

[SECRETARIAT-GENERAL OF THE GOVERNMENT AND SERVICES OF THE PRIME MINISTER: MATTÉOLI MISSION]

The French Prime Minister established the Mission d’étude sur la spoliation des Juifs de France (Mattéoli Mission) on 5 February 1997, under the leadership of Jean Mattéoli, a survivor of the French Resistance and president of the Conseil Économique et Social. Commission reports presented in 1998 and 1999 led to the founding of the Commission pour l’indemnisation des victimes de spoliations intervenues du fait des législations antisémites en vigueur pendant l’Occupation (CIVS; see 2.0.2.3. above) to examine individual requests for restitution and/or remuneration, as well as a Fondation pour la mémoire des victimes de la Shoah.

These developments are indicative that France was finally taking renewed concern and responsibility for the atrocities of the Nazi occupation, including the Holocaust and cultural spoliation. A final report was published in April 2000, together with nine major studies on different aspects of the Möbel-Aktion, as well as a major study of the spoliation and restitution of art and the resulting MNR. The resulting publications are all online, together with the Commission report at: http://www2.culture.gouv.fr/documentation/mnr/MnR-matteoli.htm (see Section 2.0.2.2.).

The archives of the Mission contain many files of potential interest, including more detailed reports and inventories of – and photocopies from – archives consulted in connection with the important research guides and reference reports produced.

The Centre, under the Ministry of the Economy and Finance, preserves records transferred by the central administration of ministries and government agencies in the economic and financial sphere, dating back to the nineteenth century. CAEF also holds personal papers of high officials.

Detailed coverage is not provided in this Guide for the fonds held in CAEF. No original ERR documents have been located in this repository, and relatively few fonds held directly relate to ERR activities. However, some fonds will be important for understanding the context of ERR seizures and tracing the fate of ERR loot.

Listed below in English are sample cartons or files within specifically recommended for this Guide, or mentioned in the online French finding aids, that may provide documentation relevant to German wartime seizures and postwar retrieval and restitution. De visu analysis of all of these files and more detailed description has not been possible, with only a few examples presented below.167

The earlier 2011 edition of this Guide had no coverage of the Archives of the Department and City of Paris, because no original ERR documents had been located in this repository, and relatively few fonds directly relate to ERR activities. Given the recent opening of more fonds for researcher access and launch of a new website providing extensive online finding aids, however, together with active cooperation with the archivists involved, initial descriptive coverage is now presented. What follows may serve to introduce researchers to many fonds of potential importance in provenance research and tracing the fate of cultural objects looted by the ERR and related to collections of ERR victims.168

Among the large judicial holdings are a number of local court records of postwar proceedings, including collaboration trials. Some are related to wartime seizure of cultural property and the fate of looted art, as well as records of postwar claims and restitution of seized property, especially by the Möbel-Aktion.

Most relevant, the Paris Municipal Archive holds a number of key records relating to the French art market during the occupation, with complete records of auction sales in the period, such as the key auction house at Hôtel Drouot. These encompass not only sale catalogues and annotated records of transactions, but also the so-called minutes des commissaires-priseurs, or auctioneers’ files. Unlike the situation in many countries, all auction sales in France are subject to state control and precise records of sales are recorded and subject to permanent state archival retention. With the new archival law of 2008, increased archival declassification has recently been possible, and more of these auction records from the occupation period are now open for public research, as described briefly below. In a few cases, however, researchers must file advance petitions for access (dérrogation).

Fiscal records include the files from the 12 committees for postwar prosecution in connection with illicit wartime sales (Série W–110W–121W) include wartime business and sales records of a number of notorious dealers, such as Martin Fabiani, Roger Dequoy, Ruel Durand, and Wildenstein et Cie. A few examples of selected files are listed below.

168 The compiler is exceedingly indebted to archivist Vincent Tuchais at the Archives de Paris for extensive consultations and his thorough verification of the text presented. He kindly furnished additional literature and data on newly available holdings, all of which have made it possible to expand this coverage. Frederike Mulot ably assisted in verification, especially with providing links to new online resources.
Notably, rich genealogical records and related files in these archives may prove important in identifying and tracing victims of wartime spoliation, such as census records between 1926 and 1946 – “Dénombrement nominatifs de population de Paris.” These are well described on the archive website and hence not covered below.

Selected fonds presented below are listed within only several main sections of the Archives de Paris as indicated here in bold within the main sections into which the repository holdings are organized, together with section numbers in this Guide. Fonds in other sections of the archive are not covered here. For more details and a full listing of other holdings, see under “Cadre de classement des Archives de Paris,” as explained under “Online inventories” below.

Finding Aids

Many of the inventories cited below under ‘Finding Aids’ for individual fonds or series provide introductions regarding the creating agency and the general organization of the records involved. Paper copies of the inventories are available in the Reading Room shelved according to the several general sections of the Archives de Paris as indicated above.

Researchers should also refer to the more complete 1994 published archival guide for other possibly relevant records from the 1939–1945 period. Approximately 80% of those listings are still current, although some 20% have been changed.

Overview listings for many of the record groups (fonds or series) listed below are projected in the general French SIAF Internet Guide to sources relating to cultural spoliation during the Second World War (Section 2.0.2.1.), but had appeared as of March 2021.
General Guide (Printed)

An annotated guide to holdings during the wartime period of occupation and the Vichy regime (to 1945) in the Paris municipal and departmental archives with brief annotations, prepared before the finding aids were placed online. Although no separate fonds or series directly involve original ERR documents, some files may be found providing details of court records and judicial proceedings for the 1939–1945 period, with a few extending to postwar years. Detailed listings are given of files relating to the art market and auctions during the occupation and other relevant materials. Most of the postwar series listed below, however, are not covered.

2.4.2. ARCHIVES DES COMMISSAIRES-PRISEURS PARISIENS
(ARCHIVES JUDICIAIRES)
[RECORDS OF PARIS AUCTION HOUSES AND AUCTIONEERS (LEGAL RECORDS)]

This large group of records of Paris auction houses and their auctioneers – known in French as “Commissaires-priseurs,” some of which date back to the eighteenth century, is of crucial importance for following the art market in Paris during the occupation and Vichy Regime as well as the immediate postwar period, when many spoliated works of art were sold on auction. The archive holds complete records of auction sales during occupation, such as the key auction house at Hôtel Drouot. Because all auctions are subject to state control in France, precise records of sales are recorded and subject to permanent state archival retention. Original auction catalogues are on file, many with sales annotations. Individual auctioneer files include detailed minutes of proceedings of auction sales, including consignors, purchasers and their agents, and sale prices, all of which can be accessed in the registers kept under the name of the auctioneer.

ACCESS

With the lapse of time and recent increased archival declassification, many more of these records from the occupation and immediate postwar period are now open for public research. Because they are considered legal records under French law, they are open for consultation only starting 75 years after their creation. Some may require advance petition for access (dérogation).

[MINUTES OF SALES AND SALE FILES OF THE PARIS JUDICIAL AUCTIONEERS]

Archival records as acquired are arranged by name of the auctioneer (commissaire-priseur), dating back to the late eighteenth century. Files for 44 different auctioneers span the period from 1935 through to the postwar period, as shown more specifically in the 1994 guide covering the 1939–1945 period. The name of the auctioneer is needed to find detailed files covering specific sales. Sale records include a description of items sold in each lot, with name of consignors (owners), buyers (and agents where applicable), and sale price.

Finding Aid

Separate finding aids cover individual auctioneers.

(Previous signature: Pérotin/3314/71/1/1–Pérotin/3314/71/1/9)

This record group includes files from postwar legal proceedings against wartime profits of over 50 art dealers, with many files of great importance for following the French art market during war and the occupation when German dealers and individuals purchased many works of art in France. These files predominantly cover verification of the company business structure and accounts during the occupation period. Some for firms that were Aryanized, include investigation of the administrators assigned for the firm, wartime accounts covering income, rental and other expenses, and financial balances. Some contain lists of works of art sold during the war with the buyer and sales prices. Some wartime sales involved art that had been seized by or on behalf of the ERR or from Jewish collections the ERR victimized, but many other items from various sources were filtered off to more immediate profit in the art market. Other dealers faced postwar trials for illicit wartime dealings.

The Centre of Contemporary Jewish Documentation (CDJC) was created clandestinely in Grenoble in 1943 to collect and to preserve documentation on the Shoah. Headed by Rabbi Isaac Schneersohn, the CDJC moved to Paris after the liberation.

The CDJC archives, now part of the Shoah Memorial in Paris (since 2005), hold a large concentration of original ERR documents, as well as many photocopies from other sources. These documents are intermixed with sources of provenance in other offices of Reichsleiter Alfred Rosenberg, along with several other collections acquired from the International Military Tribunal (IMT) in Nuremberg. In addition, as will be seen below, there are important (but fragmentary) groups of documents (originals and photocopies) from German agencies in occupied France, as well as French agencies and other sources.

The focus of CDJC holdings is the Shoah, antisemitism, the deportation of Jews, and the resistance. As part of the Shoah Memorial, the CDJC has simultaneously amassed significant documentation on individual casualties and provided leads for tracing individuals. Regarding cultural property, there is extensive documentation on confiscation by and on behalf of the ERR, and related documents of other agencies such as the Wehrmacht’s Art Protection Office (Kunstschutz) and Secret Field Police (GFP), Göring’s Currency Protection Commando (DSK), and the Gestapo. Also included is a collection of documents related to the German Embassy in Paris, the trial of Ambassador Otto Abetz, and protests to the French authorities through the General Commissariat for Jewish Questions (CGQJ). There are additionally some documents relating to postwar claims and restitution efforts. The CDJC also has large collections of photographs and posters from the war.

\(^{169}\) The compiler is very grateful to Karen Taieb, head archivist of CDJC, and her assistants for consultations over numerous years. Johanna Linsler kindly reviewed the most recent text of this coverage with some helpful updates.

Prospective researchers are advised to write in advance regarding the materials they might wish to consult – archives@memorialdelashoah.org – to give the staff time for preparation.
2.5.1. Archives de Nuremberg [Nuremberg Archives Collection]

2.5.1.1. Archives de Nuremberg – Rosenberg, ERR, and Related Documents

[Nuremberg Archives – Rosenberg]

The CDJC Rosenberg Collection – ca. 2,000 documents (mostly originals but some photocopies) – was acquired by French specialists led by Joseph Billig after the Trial of the Major War Criminals before the IMT in Nuremberg. Most of the documents previously formed part of the various Rosenberg records captured by the U.S. Army in Germany in 1945, mostly those from Banz Castle and nearby Staffelstein.

As presently arranged, individual cartons within the CDJC archival collection bear Roman numerals, while individual documents in separate folders within have Arabic numbers. The documents are still arranged in the jumbled order in which they were received, many of them with the initial numbers assigned to them within the larger U.S. Rosenberg Collection, before they were withdrawn for the Nuremberg trials. Accordingly, many of the documents still have copies of the numbered “docID,” or “pull slips,” from the Office of the U.S. Chief of Counsel for War Crimes. Copies of those correlated numbered pull slips remained in the group of records later transferred to the United States and processed by the National Archives and Records Administration as temporary record group EAP 99 before being turned over to West Germany’s Bundesarchiv in the 1960s. In other words, the arrangement of the CDJC collection has been retained with the original U.S. Army numbered order. Accordingly, those numbers hence permit correlation with the Rosenberg files now in the Bundesarchiv (most in Berlin-Lichterfelde), although the files there have since been completely reprocessed. The printed numbered pull slips in the CDJC collection continue through no. 448 (with a few gaps for missing documents) and then, following a gap in numbers, start up again with 592 through no. 645, although not all of the pull slips are retained. Later files start with other numerical sequences.

Corresponding numbered slips indicating missing documents are now found among files within the records of the several Rosenberg offices held by BArch-Lichterfelde under NS 30 (ERR) and other Rosenberg record groups, such as NS 8 (Kanzlei Rosenberg) and NS 15 (Der Beauftragte des Führers für die Überwachtung der gesamten geistigen und weltanschaulichen Schulung und Erziehung der NSDAP, DBFU) (see corresponding listings in the German Chapter of this Guide, Sections 3.3.1.–3.3.3.).

The documents in the main Rosenberg Collection in the CDJC were collected by the prosecution for the Trial of the Major War Criminals, which included Rosenberg himself. Most of the originals and carbon copies here are documents prepared for the IMT proceedings but not actually used in court. They remain arranged as a collection, rather than as groups of archival records based on their office of provenance. The mix of documents found here comes from all of Rosenberg’s key agencies, including his Chancellery and the DBFU, together with the planned Hohe Schule and its various institutes and Central Library (ZBHS); the NSDAP Foreign Policy Office (Aussenpolitisches Amt, APA) and its Office for Jewish and Free Mason Questions (Amt Juden- und Freimaurerfragen); the Reich Ministry for the Occupied Eastern Territories (Reichsministerium für die besetzten Ostgebiete, RMBO) and its subordinate civil occupation authorities the Reich Commissariat for Ostland (Reichskommissariat für das Ostland, RKO); and the Reich Commissariat for Ukraine (Reichskommissariat für die Ukraine, RKU). Documents of ERR provenance (also intermixed from Rosenberg’s various agencies) include those from the central administrative offices in Berlin, the evacuated offices in Ratibor (postwar Racibórz, Poland), the ERR main working groups and working groups (Hauptarbeitsgruppen [HAG] and Arbeitsgruppen [AG]) in many different countries, especially France, as well as those of ERR special units, such as the Sonderstab Musik. However, these documents have not been separated out or arranged according to their agency of creation.

As described by Billig in his 1963 selective inventory, the CDJC Rosenberg Collection embraces four main subject headings (a smaller fifth part embraces more general racial measures, with a sixth part listing a few documents on the general history of the NSDAP):

I. Rosenberg’s activity in the realm of “Nazi culture” and ideology, his several institutions for cultural purification (especially antisemitism), including the DBFU and the Hohe Schule, its library and institutes, such as the Institute for Research on the Jewish Question (IEJ), and Rosenberg’s publications.

II. The creation, organization, and goals of the ERR: the confiscation of books, archives, works of art, furniture, and musical instruments; reports on seizures and confiscations, including those by the Möbel-Aktion, which was technically an extension of the Western Office (Dienststelle Westen) of the RMbO, but worked mainly with ERR personnel and facilities in occupied Western Europe.

III. Rosenberg’s political and ideological activities on an international scale, starting with the DBFU and continuing with the Hohe Schule, and his anti-Jewish policies.

IV. Policies concerning the occupation of the Soviet Union, including the military mobilization of native ethnic communities against Soviet authorities and Rosenberg’s conflicts with Reichsführer-SS and Chief of the German Police Heinrich Himmler, Party Chancellery Head Martin Bormann, Reich Commissar for Ukraine Erich Koch, and Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels.

Although the CDJC Rosenberg documents are not arranged and numbered accordingly, Billig provides an excellent characterization of the CDJC Rosenberg Collection with annotations of selected documents under those general subject headings and subsidiary chapters, providing pointed description of the documentary highlights. His expository inventory thus gives an excellent orientation to Rosenberg’s policies and functions in the Third Reich and the more specific role of the ERR. Most of the CDJC ERR documents he cites involving cultural plunder operations (under the DBFU) fall under Billig’s Part II (chapters 1 and 2) with an emphasis on policy and arrangements, rather than specific acts of plunder. Chapter 3 discusses the Möbel-Aktion and lists selected M-Aktion documents. Documents involving ERR organization, policy, and propaganda functions appear in other parts of the inventory, especially those connected to the DBFU and its subsidiary Hohe Schule in Parts I and III. ERR documents do not appear in Part IV, which is devoted to RMbO policy and administration, as well as the RKO and the RKU.

The 1947 compilation by Jean Cassou provides French translations of 56 CDJC Rosenberg documents (predominantly from the ERR) relating specifically to the plunder of French Jewish-owned art collections. It emphasizes more general policies and reports, such as the retrospective report of ERR art plunder by Robert Scholz (15 July 1944). There are also a few documents regarding the Jewish art collections first taken to the Germany Embassy and, for example, the exposé by Count Franz Wolff-Metternich, the first head of the Kunstschutz, who opposed the Nazis’ looting of art. The two documents on libraries include the frequently cited April 1943 report by Johann Pohl on the IEJ library [= IMT, 171-PS * (US-383, RF-1324)], which was largely made up of books plundered by the ERR, sometimes with the help of IEJ staff members. Overall, the emphasis is on documents of general background and context. Cassou’s volume does not have current CDJC document citations, but these are penciled in the margins of a reference copy in the CDJC Reading Room.

The brief citations of sample ERR documents below, intended to complement these publications and alert the researcher to their often-hidden riches, follow the current CDJC order of cartons and folder numbers. Coverage is not exhaustive. Examples emphasize cultural plunder, with notes on the Möbel-Aktion and the Hohe Schule.

An annotated register of selected ERR and other Rosenberg documents held by the CDJC with commentary (see especially pp. 123–71). The introduction explains the genesis of the Rosenberg Collection (pp. 9–17) and gives a good biographical sketch of Rosenberg (pp. 18–28). Significantly, as a help to researchers, the register is arranged in subject categories, with sections for the Hohe Schule, the IEJ, the ERR, and confiscations, etc. Current CDJC code numbers are provided for most of the documents described, although some have been changed. An annotated copy in the CDJC Reading Room provides current CDJC code numbers for all entries.

Card Catalogues (fichiers)

Nuremberg – Sources – Inventaire – Général

A detailed card catalogue is available on the balcony above the CDJC Reading Room provides brief document-by-document abstracts covering ERR Nuremberg files and other documents from German occupation authorities. Coverage in the main catalogue drawers reflects current order, as they have been numbered by archival carton (Roman numerals) and individual folders within (Arabic numerals). The Rosenberg section is covered in drawers 18 and 19.

Other drawers contain a personal name index for the collection, but those cards are interspersed in the general CDJC name card index. The name index is not comprehensive, although helpful in many instances.

The key word or subject section of the CDJC card catalogue is also not comprehensive and therefore much less useful for the Rosenberg Collection. The choice of topics covered is rather arbitrary, but some subject headings, such as “ERR” or “Franc-maçonnerie,” may nonetheless lead researchers to related ERR documents. See in particular the heading “Spoliations – Pillage biens culturels” (drawer no. 129), with subcategories for “Oeuvres d’art” and “bibliothèques,” but these latter categories are intermixed, and coverage remains incomplete.

That CDJC card catalogue, with its document-by-document résumés, is still the most helpful finding aid for researchers. It has gradually been updated in an electronic database with revised descriptions and key-word indexing available in the CDJC archival Reading Room on the Fourth Floor. Efforts are in progress to link descriptions with full texts online of the documents themselves.
CDJC Electronic Database (with digitized revised card catalogue entries)

Over the past decade, the CDJC has digitized the entire Rosenberg Collection and is still developing a system to link them to newly verified descriptions in the CDJC electronic database for Reading Room access. As of late 2016, approximately 500 documents from the Rosenberg Collection can be searched within the system, but updated document descriptions are not yet linked to the documents. When a projected new computer infrastructure is installed and operative, CDJC plans to link available descriptions with the digitized documents.

Some limited ‘subject’ or ‘name’ search capacity is available on the French version of the CDJC website – http://www.memorialdelashoah.org/ – under the rubric “Recherche dans le catalogue.” Entries provide summaries (with archival codes) of relatively few selected documents.

Published ERR Documents

Provides a sample group of 56 selected ERR documents from the CDJC in French translation. Unfortunately, the published documents do not reference the current CDJC code numbers. A special copy, available in the CDJC Reading Room, has penciled marginal indications added accordingly.

Microfilm Copies

Preservation microfilms (18 rolls) of the Archives Rosenberg were prepared in the 1960s. A copy of the films (10 reels and 23 microfiche) is available in the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (Acc. 1998-A.0104), but orientation and access is extremely difficult: the essential CDJC card catalogue is not included, and no other finding aid for the microfilms is available in USHMM.

Cartons from the Archives de Nuremberg – Rosenberg Collection

Although all of the cartons in the Rosenberg Collection are listed below, showing the extent and mix of holdings, the brief coverage of documents within cartons indicated remains fragmentary, often with mention of only a few individual ERR documents as examples. Some of the listings have been compiled on the basis of the CDJC card catalogue or Billig’s listings. Many others have been examined de visu.

N.B. Although many of the documents had been assigned IMT numbers, especially in the PS series, it has not been possible to add Nuremberg PS codes in all cases listed below.

2.5.1.2. Archives de Nuremberg: Other ERR, Rosenberg, and Related Documents

The CDJC retains copies of many (but not all) of the French records from the IMT Trial of the Major War Criminals in Nuremberg. Accordingly, apart from the Rosenberg Collection as such, there are many other documents from various Rosenberg operations to be found here. The ERR (or ERR-related) documents among them are intermixed in the general CDJC collections and do not form separate sub-collections based on their provenance. These include some German copies (original carbon copies) of Rosenberg ERR documents, and photocopies of Rosenberg documents held in other archives. Their provenance, or the source from which they were received, is not always apparent, although the CDJC card catalogue does have special drawers covering receipts from other archives.

One group of documents represent copies from the French IMT records, including documents that were assigned numbers by the prosecution, such as ca. three-fourths of the PS series (1-PS–4069-PS). (The documents that became actual numbered court exhibits were published in the IMT Blue Series.) The CDJC has copies of many (but not all) of the French IMT court exhibits (FA 6–XIII-37). Some of these, for example, are found in the folders CXXXVIII–CXXXVIIIa within the series Archives de Nuremberg (no. 1–5939). Most are photocopies; some (in the case of Rosenberg documents) are copies of originals in the CDJC Rosenberg Collection.

Successive drawers of the CDJC card catalogue cover subseries within the Nuremberg Collection, such as the IMT PS (Paris-Storey), NG (Nuremberg Government; for German government agencies), and NO (Nuremberg Organizations; for Nazi party agencies), which contain scattered ERR (or ERR-related) documents. A few sample listings follow below.

2.5.2. LES AUTORITÉS ALLEMANDES EN FRANCE
[DOCUMENTS OF GERMAN AUTHORITIES IN FRANCE]

28 cartons. 1940–1945.

The collections of documents from the German occupation authorities in France mentioned below contain a mixture of originals and photocopies. Some examples highlighting cultural plunder or directly involving the ERR are listed, but the following lists are not exhaustive. Some documents on seizures of art collections and other Jewish cultural property by other German agencies are also included, because many of these collections were subsequently turned over to the ERR. Likewise, documentation on Möbel-Aktion seizures of furnishings from Jewish homes is included, although it does not provide a comprehensive list of all related CDJC holdings. French protests of seizures to the German authorities are also listed. Although not of ERR provenance, they often help document many seizures that later constituted ERR and M-Aktion loot. Some documents listed are described in more detail in the Steinberg inventory cited below. Other scattered documents are described on the CDJC website. Almost all of these are summarized in the CDJC card files in the Reading Room.

N.B. It has not been possible to examine de visu all of the CDJC documents listed below. Many listings are based on the Steinberg coverage, the CDJC card catalogues, or the CDJC database.

Finding Aid

An annotated register of selected German documents held by the CDJC with commentary. Documents are arranged in subject categories: Section B “Anti-Jewish Measures on the Material Plane” contains sections on “economic Aryanization,” the pillage of works of art and libraries, and confiscations and seizures (especially pp. 83–97). A few archival signatures were changed in connection with the electronic database. The general introduction (pp. 11–42) provides a helpful, succinct administrative overview of the agencies and their principal personnel. Archival codes indicate whether documents are originals or photocopies.
2.5.2.1. L’ÉTAT-MAJOR ALLEMAND / MILITÄRBEFEHLSHABER IN FRANKREICH (MBF)
[MILITARY COMMANDANT IN FRANCE]^{172}

The documents in this CDJC series are predominantly photocopies. As such, they duplicate or overlap with those found in the major groups of records from the MBF now divided between the Bundesarchiv-Militärarchiv in Freiburg (RW/35) and the AN-Pierrefitte (AJ/40). However, the CDJC currently has no indication of their source of acquisition, nor is there a correlation table to the originals. Documents in some cartons examined are quality copies of those in AN-Pierrefitte.

Many of the documents here provide details of GFP operations during the first year of occupation. The art seizures carried out by the GFP went first to the German Embassy in Paris, but starting in the fall of 1940 were turned over to the ERR for processing in the Jeu de Paume.

106: Regarding payment for information about Jewish art collections.

112–114, 124: Documents regarding seizure of residences and furnishings belonging to Jews by the ERR and the German Embassy (5 Apr. 1941–12 Mar. 1942).

116: Letter from Zeitschel regarding forced sale of furniture from abandoned Jewish residence (11 Sept. 1941).

VI

132: Note to the effect that furniture from British and American Jews should not be seized by Rosenberg M-Aktion.

196: Letter from Professor Maisonneuve to Abetz requesting exemption of the Louis Halphen library from confiscation (20 Sept. 1942).

2.5.2.4. Dossier du procès Otto Abetz

[File from the trial of Otto Abetz]

As German ambassador to France throughout the occupation, Otto Abetz was responsible for the confiscation of Jewish-owned art collections in the summer of 1940 and for various other war crimes. He was tried in Paris in 1949 and sentenced to 20 years hard labor. Released in 1954, he died in an automobile accident. The documents here are copies of those gathered for his trial, several from Nuremberg records. All are photocopies, some badly faded. Their source is not provided, but from foliation and other indications, it is clear that some are from the files of the Political Archive of the German Foreign Office (PA AA). The CDJC copies were microfilmed for Yad Vashem in 1958.

2.5.4. COMMISSARIAT GÉNÉRAL AUX QUESTIONS JUIVES (CGQJ)

[GENERAL COMMISSARIAT FOR JEWISH QUESTIONS COLLECTION]

70 cartons; 6.3 linear meters. 1939–1948.

Most of the records from the General Commissariat for Jewish Questions (CGQJ) are now in the AN-Pierrefitte, Subseries AJ/38, where they are well described in recent finding aids (see Section 2.2.2.). As of 2009, part of AN-Pierrefitte collection AJ/38 is available in the CDJC on microfilm. The CDJC also holds a significant number of original documents from this collection unavailable in AJ/38, and many other photocopies, including considerable correspondence concerning individuals affected by Möbel-Aktion or ERR seizures. Many of the original documents are very fragile and were placed in CDJC vaults after microfilming.

Several cartons contain concentrations of individual protests regarding the seizure of art or furniture from Jewish residences, often with copies of letters from the CGQJ to German authorities registering such protests. None of the files contain original ERR or Dienststelle Westen documents, but they are important for background accounts concerning confiscations and contain details that may not be preserved in ERR documents themselves (most in French). Only selected examples are listed below to indicate the type of documents to be found in this series.

Full-text versions of several documents from this group are on the CDJC website.

84, 85: Letter from the CGQJ to Kurt von Behr regarding a possible residence for Hindu leader Chandra Bose, who wanted to launch a journal in Paris (6 Nov. 1942).

173 Now listed in carton XXI-56, although that may be out of sequence.
CVII (continued)

86: Correspondence between the insurance company La Concorde and the CGQJ regarding the furniture and personal property of Dr Melchior Rosenberg, with reference to the ERR office responsible for such removals from Jewish residences (16–27 Nov. 1942).

92: Correspondence with the CGQJ regarding the residence formerly rented by deported Romanian Mademoiselle Moscivici (7–17 Dec. 1942).

122: Letter regarding the liquidation of property owned by Henri de Rothschild, who was stripped of his French nationality (10 July 1944).

130: Letter from Service immobilier with list of Rothschild family members and real estate holdings seized with rights of deposition for Jews stripped of French nationality.

CXVII

17: Concerning a crate of paintings owned by Alfred Weinberger, seized from a vault in the Banque Morgan & Cie. and turned over to the ERR (8 Sept. 1941–21 Jan. 1942).

38: Includes a list of fine arts taken from various Rothschild family homes, with French protests about seizures from the Rothschilds. Gerd Wunder’s personal involvement in confiscation of cultural property from the home of Eugène de Rothschild; (10 Feb. 1942) is also noted.

CXCIII

124: Letters concerning the German seizure of furniture from Jewish residences (18 Mar. 1942).

133: Collection of letters regarding the art collection of David-Weill seized from the château de Sourches by the ERR (8 May 1941–4 May 1942).

CXCV

185: Letter from the Service for Economic Aryanization to Einsatzstab Westen (ERR) regarding certificates for those not belonging to the Jewish race (4 Jan. 1943).

CCXI

39: Letter from Léon Reinach to the director of the French National Museums and related correspondence regarding the seizure of the house and art collection deeded to the French state (10 Aug.–8 Dec. 1941).

CCXXXVI

47: Letter from Dienststelle Westen to the CGQJ complaining about the certificates received for those not belonging to the Jewish race (19 July 1943).

CCCLXX

24: Dossier regarding the requisition and pillage of the residence belonging to Pierre Seligmann-Alphandéry.

28: Letter from the CGQJ to Einsatzstab Westen (ERR) noting that the residence of Monsieur Gresalmer (Paris, 57 bis bd Rochechouart) contains some beautiful furniture (13 Oct. 1942).
2.5.5. Copies of Documents from the Bundesarchiv

CDXXXVI: Rosenberg, nos. 1–55
These copies, made when the originals were held in BArch Koblenz, appear to have been prepared before the original records were rearranged by the Bundesarchiv (BArch), because they are cross-referenced with the U.S. EAP 99 series numbers from the U.S. temporary record group designation (also on the U.S. microfilms).

Many of the originals should now be found within NS 30 (ERR), housed in the BArch Berlin-Lichterfelde site, although some of these documents may be found in other record groups. Correlation with the originals of these documents now in the BArch is difficult to establish because of subsequent rearrangement there.

6: Regarding a missing painting from the Louvre.
8: Organization of the ERR.
10: Concerns fire in a depot for pianos confiscated by the M-Aktion in Paris (27 May 1944).
12: Gerigk to Vogelwerth (27 July 1944) and Muchow (2 June and 15 July 1944) regarding visit to Paris to select musical instruments for the Sonderstab Musik from those confiscated by the M-Aktion.
13: Instructions regarding the handling of musical instruments confiscated by the M-Aktion (6 and 21 Sept. 1943).
14: Confiscation from Darius Milhaud (with inventory) and from Mme Dyer (13 June 1941).
15: Confiscation from Landau (Neuilly) (9 July 1941).
16: Confiscated pianos (17 Sept. 1943).
18: Concerning two railway cars of confiscated musical instruments, including pianos, destined for Riga (15 Sept. 1943).
19: Concerning confiscated music manuscripts from a Jewish collection (16 June 1942).
22: Report on ERR in Italy (1944).
24: Suffix “for Occupied Territories” dropped from official ERR name (17 Nov. 1944); Dienststelle Westen transferred to ERR jurisdiction (24 Nov. 1944).
26–30: Sonderstab Musik from the DBFU (Mar. 1940) to 1944.
32: Reports by Robert Scholz on ERR-plundered art and transfers from Schloss Neuschwanstein to Altaussee (Feb.–Apr. 1944).

ACCESS

Fonds that are fully processed are available for research consultation, Tuesday and Thursday, 14:00–18:00. Advance arrangement is recommended.

Researchers concerned with cultural seizures (especially art), including by the ER, during the Second World War and related developments, including the art market, postwar retrieval, identification, and restitution problems – should be aware of the extensive printed and digital resources of the INHA Library. These resources are all well described on the INHA website. The website also provides notes about related resources in the Paris area.

Finding Aids

AGORHA Database – at: https://agorha.inha.fr/.

The homepage of the AGORHA Database introduces and provides links to the various databases and other resources on the INHA website and the extensive INHA holdings. That page also provides links to many other essential international research resources.

AUCTION CATALOGUES: [INHA] “Guide Catalogues de vente”

Of special note is the extensive INHA collection of art auction catalogues (many of which are now available digitally as part of an on-going INHA project). The INHA catalogue also indicates auction catalogues held in other libraries in the Paris region, with links to those available digitally on the Internet. It also covers related databases covering the art market, as well as providing links to catalogues and databases relating to stolen, spoliated, and missing works of art.
ART MARKET BIOGRAPHIES (RAMA) – NEW (December 2021) INHA DATABASE

“Répertoire des acteurs du marché de l’art en France sous l’Occupation (1940–1945),” [Directory of actors in the art market in France under the Occupation (1940–1945)]

at: https://agorha.inha.fr/database/76

This helpful new resource – launched on 3 December 2021 – contains 250 well-researched and well-documented biographical entries covering actors, artworks, and networks in the wartime art market. The database results from a joint French and German project – headed by Ines Rotermund-Reynard (INHA).

The first link at top of the opening page of the database on the AGORHA website provides an alphabetical list of entries included with links to those completed. The opening page also provides links to many other essential international research resources.

2.6.1. ARCHIVAL FONDS OF POTENTIAL INTEREST RELATING TO ART LOOTING AND ERR ACTIVITIES DURING THE SECOND WORLD WAR

INHA ARCHIVES – “Fonds d’archives” – Catalogue

A list of fonds organized alphabetically by family or agency name on the INHA website, with hyperlinks to summary and available finding aids in AGORHA.

See also the list of fonds organized by “Archive” number in AGORHA covering the INHA archival holdings, with links to summary and available finding aids: https://agorha.inha.fr/inhaprod/ark:/54721/00520078.

The four individuals and dealers whose personal papers and/or gallery archives are held in INHA and described in detail below were all victims of ERR seizure. More detailed coverage of these archival fonds is available on the INHA website.

2.6.1.2. DUVEEN (GALERIE) (1876–1981) – MICROFILM Mf 466

Joseph Joel Duveen (1843–1908)
Joseph Duveen (1869–1939)

Some items belonging to Duveen inventoried (ERR code DVB) by the ERR were seized on behalf of the ERR in the Decaup storage facility in Biarritz (2 rue Loustau), involving sculptures formerly from the collections of J.P. Morgan and others, as noted in the Jeu de Paume Database. The Duveen Brothers’ Gallery in Paris (6 rue Michel-Ange) was one of the offices of the well-known international art dealership, with other offices in London and New York.

I am grateful to former INHA archivist Sébastien Chauffour for assisting with coverage of the INHA archival holdings; advance copies of his SIAF guide contributions for the covered archives were particularly helpful, together with INHA website description.
Copies of the microfilms of the Duveen Gallery archives have also been deposited in Thomas J. Watson Library of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the Witt Library of the Courtauld Institute in London.

2.6.1.3. FABIUS (GALERIES ÉLIE FABIUS AND FABIUS FRÈRES) – ARCHIVES 131

115 cartons; 15 meters.

The Gallery records are currently being processed, including files regarding the wartime Aryanization and sales.

The important art dealer Élie Fabius (1864–1942), directed the Galerie Élie Fabius. His son, André Fabius (1908–1984), directed the Galerie Fabius Frères (boulevard Haussmann) together with his brothers Pierre and Fernand. Both firms were spoliated and then Aryanized during German occupation. The latter gallery reopened in 1945, but ceased operation in 2006–2008. The archives of the two firms were transferred to INHA, and as of early 2017 are still being processed. André Fabius is father of the former French Prime Minister and later Foreign Minister Laurent Fabius in the government of François Hollande.

In the Jeu de Paume Database, 24 entries (paintings, sculpture, and decorative arts) are listed as having been seized in July 1944 from the widow of Élie Fabius (3 rue de Provence), according to her OBIP claim; according to the database, none were restituted. Registration cards for only two items (one sculpture and one engraving) seized from son André Fabius appear in the database, but with no mention of the gallery. Both were sent to Buxheim and restituted to the owner after the war.

2.6.1.4. ROGER-MARX, CLAUDE (1888–1977), PERSONAL PAPERS – ARCHIVES 094

The French writer, art historian, and critic Claude Roger-Marx was a victim of art seizure by the ERR. A large part of his art collection was seized by agents (presumably for the ERR) from the Louvre safe haven in the château de Chambord (7 July 1941). Details regarding his collection are among his papers in INHA. The ERR Jeu de Paume inventory devoted to Roger-Marx, however, does not cover that portion of his collection, and mentions only one crate of decorative art. Only a small part of the works of art in his possession were registered with other items from the Möbel-Aktion, as noted in the Jeu de Paume Database.

2.6.1.5. UHDE, WILHELM (1914–1984), PERSONAL PAPERS – ARCHIVES 021

German-born art collector, writer, critic, and art dealer Wilhelm Uhde (1874–1947) settled in Paris in 1908, operating a gallery starting in 1908. He was forced into hiding as a Jew during the German occupation. One crate of objects of decorative arts from his collection was registered by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume, although reportedly more was seized.

E-mail: dcajm.cmi.fct@intradef.gouv.fr
Website: not available for DCAJM

Transport: Travel by car is recommended. Train from Paris-Montparnasse Poitiers or Châtellerault and then bus to Le Blanc (ca. 3 hours); located in the SE part of Le Blanc in a compound of the Gendarmerie nationale, a 20 min. walk from the center of Le Blanc.

Proceedings of many of the postwar war-criminal and collaboration trials held under military auspices are now held at the special depository for records of Military Justice, arranged in chronological order by the date of trial.

Regarding the confiscation of Jewish art collections, later processed by the ERR in the Jeu de Paume, reference should be made to the proceedings of the trial of Otto Abetz (1949), excerpts of which are now held in the CDJC in copy (see Section 2.5.2.4.).

Of particular interest in connection with the ERR activities in France are the trials of several members of the ERR staff (1949–1950), including Gerhard Utikal, Bruno Lohse, Georg Ebert, Arthur Pfannstiel, and Robert Scholz (in absentia). Also included were the dealers Albert Pfeiffer and Hans Wendland, who were directly involved in some ERR exchanges and sales, including paintings from the Jeu de Paume acquired for the Hermann Göring Collection. Their case was heard by thePermanent Military Tribunal in Paris (Tribunal militaire permanent de Paris). Those proceedings are now open for consultation:

TMP Paris 983, 9 August 1951, especially no. 737/4724, 9 August 1951.

ACCESS

Military judicial records relating to the Second World War (such as trials of the ERR and Otto Abetz) are open for research, as a result of the decree of 24 December 2015.

Proceedings not covered by that decree are normally open to the public 75 years after the date of their creation, or of the most recent document (or 25 years after the date of death of the relevant individual involved in the proceeding.

Confirmed advanced reservation is required before visit. Prospective researchers should apply to archival authorities well in advance to arrange a visit and request materials or information regarding a given case and the extent of access possible.

Finding Aids

There are no available finding aids for the DCAJM holdings. Hence researchers are dependent on advance consultation with the archival staff.
